SPURGEON IS DEAD

London's Famous Preacher Expired Last Night.

THE END CAME AT MENTONE.

Mrs. Spurgeon, His Private Secretary and a Few Friends Present at the Time.

He Had Not Spoken for Some Hours and Was Unconscious When Death Occurred. The Illness Which Carried Him Off Was of Several Months' Duration—Brief Sketch of the Man Who at the Age of Seventeen Became a Preacher.

MENTONE, Eng., Feb. 1.—The famous preacher, Charles Haddon Spurgeon, died here last night at 11:05, in the presence of Mrs. Spurgeon, his private secretary and two or three friends. He was unconscious when death occurred and had not spoken for some hours.

Mr. Spurgeon's illness began seven months ago.

Brief Sketch of His Career.

Rev. Charles Hadden Spurgeon was born on June 19, 1834, in Kelvedon, Essex. He received an ordinary education under strong religious influences, and became very early in life an usher in a school at Nottingham, in which humble capacity he developed astonishing powers of public speaking and was especially effective in religious exhortation.

His relatives, who were Independents, offered to have him trained for the ministry, but he declined because he held Paedobaptist views. Later he relinquished these and joined the church formerly presided over by Robert Hall at Cambridge. He became a village preacher at Teversham and soon after became pastor of a Baptist chapel at Waterbeach. At this period, only 17 years old, he delivered a series of discourses which attracted immense crowds and spread his fame through England, and even America, as the "boy preacher."

Having been offered the chapel in New Park street, Southwark, he preached for the first time in London in 1853 with such success that the edifice had to be enlarged to accommodate the rapidly growing congregation. At Exeter Hall, which was occupied during these alterations, hundreds were turned away every Sunday, being unable to get within the doors.

The enlarged chapel in New Park street proved insufficient and the Surry Music Hall was hired to accommodate the overflow. Finally the Metropolitan Tabernacle was built, which holds four or five thousand people, and there the famous preacher has remained to this day. Since 1855 his sermons have been published weekly and sold throughout the Protestant world in increasing numbers.

In 1887 Mr. Spurgeon severed his connection with the Baptist Union because it tolerated heretical views on the subject of hell. This gave rise to a long controversy. In 1888 was celebrated the delivery of his 2,000th sermon.

The Pastors' College, the Colportage Association, the Book Fund and the Supplementary Pastors' Aid Fund were all founded by Mr. Spurgeon in support of his work at the Tabernacle.

In his illness, which began seven months ago and passed through many vicissitudes, he has had world-wide sympathy, and his devoted congregation have been untiring in their petitions to the Lord for his recovery.

MONEY FOR THE FAIR.

Chicago Succeeds in Floating a Big Loan in New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Mayor Hempstead Washburne, of Chicago, who came to this city to place Chicago bonds for the purpose of helping to build the World's Columbian Exhibition, has succeeded in having $3,000,000 taken by investors in this city. The Illinois Legislature authorized Chicago to issue $5,000,000 4 per cent. 30 year bonds, and after the proposition was voted for by the people the Common Council issued the bonds, dated January 1, 1891. Comptroller H. N. May, of Chicago, and J. J. P. Odell, of the Columbian Exposition Commission and President of the Union National Bank, also came to New York to assist the Mayor in placing the bonds. Three bids were made for $3,000,000 of the bonds.

A reporter saw Mr. Odell and asked him if the bids had been accepted. He said they had. In fact, they were satisfied to sell $3,000,000. The other $2,000,000 could be disposed of later. Mr. Odell admitted that in Chicago the demand for the bonds was limited. In the East money was plentiful and capitalists were willing to accept 4 per cent. interest on their money. He stated that by September 1 $15,000,000 will have been spent in the exhibition, and to open it May 1, 1893, just $17,000,000 will be needed. He thought no trouble would be experienced raising the money.

MURDERED FOR MONEY.

An Old Candy Store Woman Brutally Slain at Millburn, N. J.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 1.—One of the most atrocious murders ever committed in Essex county occurred some time after midnight Saturday night, at Millburn, a small village nine miles from here. The victim is Mrs. Teresa Senior, an old lady 65 years of age, who kept a small candy and notion store on Millburn avenue, the main street of the place.

Early Saturday evening her husband, who is employed as a night watchman at Fourat's hat factory at South Orange, left for his work, leaving his wife alone to attend to the few customers who came to the store. It was very late when she closed for the night.

At 7 o'clock Sunday morning Joseph Senior, the husband returned from work. He went into the house, which is at the rear of the store, and was nearly prostrated at the sight which met his gaze.

Stretched on the floor in the middle of the store lay the lifeless body of Mrs. Senior. The floor was covered with blood and the contents of the store were strewn in every direction. A small shawl covered the face of the woman and when it was removed it was seen that her throat was cut from ear to ear. Besides these terrible injuries there were eleven stab wounds on various parts of the body, most of them being in the side and breast.

The cutting had been done with an old, blunt case knife. This weapon lay on the counter, nearby, and was covered with blood.

Robbery was plainly the incentive of the crime, for the entire store had been ransacked and $45 that had been placed in a secret place was gone.

It is thought that the terrible deed was committeed by Gus Lentz, a German who worked in a hat factory near the town and who has been in prison for stealing some gold watches from persons in the neighborhood. He was seen in the town Saturday and told some men that if he could get enough money he would go to Germany.

On the other hand, it is thought that some one well acquainted with the house and who had been a visitor there, did the act. This theory is strengthened by the fact that a vicious dog that guards the place made no outcry at any time during the night.

TRAGEDY IN WASHINGTON.

A Dissolute Man Wounds His Wife and Kills Her Brother.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—A double tragedy occurred here last night in the neighborhood of Eighteenth and Q streets, a fashionable part of the city, in which Howard Schneider killed his brother-in-law, Frank Hamlink, aged 21 years, and fatally wounded his own wife.

Schneider is a young man of good family but of dissolute habits. Last June he took his wife, then Miss Hamlink, out riding to Hyattsville, Md., showed her a marriage license, and at the point of a pistol forced her to marry him.

Returning home, the women kept the marriage a secret for some time, but it finally leaked out. The parents of both the young people then decided that it was best for them to live together and Schneider took up his residence with his wife's folks.

He became dissipated and kept late hours, and on last Wednesday night he was locked out of the house.

Last night he sent a note to his wife requesting her to leave home and go with him. Mrs. Schneider replied that she did not care to have anything to do with him. Mrs. Schneider, with her brother and sister, then went to church.

Schneider laid in wait for her, and on the return of the party from church he fired five shots at them with the result stated above.

Schneider was arrested.

THE HOLBROOKE ESTATE.

Mrs. Maybrick's Mother After Money to Aid Her Daughter.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Judge Andrews of the Supreme Court has granted an order of reference for the accounting of the trustees of the estate of Darius B. Holbrooke, a wealthy New York merchant, who died in 1858.

One-half of Holbrook's estate was left for the benefit of his daughter, now Baroness Caroline E. von Roques, of Rouen, France, the mother of Mrs. Florence Maybrick, who is serving a life sentence in England for the alleged murder of her husband.

The Baroness thinks she is entitled to about $4,000 from the trustees of the estate in addition to what she received. If she receives the money, she intends to pay the fees of Mrs. Maybrick's counsel in England.

John H. Gudge was named as the referee.

May Succeed the Late Bishop Loughlin.

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 1.—The "Sunday Tribune" says that it is more than likely that Right Rev. Bishop Ludden of the diocese of Syracuse will be chosen by Pope Leo as the successor of the late Bishop Loughlin of the Brooklyn diocese. It is understood that his name headed the list of three names of candidates for the position sent to Rome by the Bishops' Council. It is stated that the choice lies between Bishop Ludden and Dr. Mitchell of St. James Church, Brooklyn.

ALL NOBLY RESCUED

For Forty Hours the Webster Crew Fought Death.

CAPTAIN CLARK'S VIVID TALE.

The Tug's Guards Under Water When Aid Reached Them.

Sprung a Leak Soon After the Accident to the Propeller and the Woodwork Was Burned to Keep the Pumps Going—Frantic Efforts of the Half Frozen and Hungry Men to Keep the Tug From Going Down—Nothing but Praise for the Schooner Crew.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Feb. 1.—Capt. George Clark, who together with a crew of nine, was carried out to sea from New York on the disabled tug Edwin H. Webster, Tuesday during a snow storm, and rescued by the schooner Everet Webster, Captain Bower, of Philadelphia, vividly described to a reported the terrible experience of himself and his men and their daring rescue by the officers and men of the schooner Webster when hope had almost been abandoned.

The captain, after saying that the trip to the dumping grounds of the tug and her two scows was without incident, continued as follows:

"About 5 o'clock Tuesday morning, after the scows had dumped their loads, we started to return. The wind, which had been very high all morning, attained at this time the velocity of a gale. Blinding snow squalls prevailed, and before we knew it we got into shoal water. While attempting to get out into deep water, the hawser fouled the propeller and the boat was rendered helpless.

"All our efforts to get the rope clear were unavailing, and we hung out distress signals which were seen by the tug Nichols. She came to our assistance and endeavored to tow the disabled tug and scows to New York, but was unable to make any headway against the severe gale and high winds which prevailed.

"The Webster was then anchored and the Nichols proceeded to New York for help.

"The anchor of the tug, however, would not hold, and with the scows we gradually drifted out to sea.

"About an hour later the hawser holding the scows, which was entangled in the screw, cut or chafed itself loose and the scows drifted rapidly seaward.

"Those on board the scows dropped their anchors, but they did not appear to hold and the boats continued to drift to the northeast.

"All that day they were in sight of us, but next morning they had disappeared. The Webster, in the meantime, had continued dragging slowly but surely into rougher water, and was a complete mass of ice. She labored heavily and at length sprang a leak.

"Things now began to look serious and the pumps were set to work, while the crew assisted in the bailing process with buckets. By this means we managed for a time to keep her clear of water, but the pumping and bailing had to be kept up incessantly.

"The steamer rolled badly and coal was finally washed into her bilges and under the pumps, choking them up badly.

"The men were obliged to stand in the ice-cold water, working for their lives in the endeavor to keep the pumps in working order.

"In this way all hands were all more or less frost bitten.

"At midnight Wednesday, the supply of coal became exhausted, and all available woodwork, such as berths, flooring, joinerwork, etc., was burned, furnishing fuel to work the pumps.

"About 5 o'clock Thursday morning, while in this precarious condition, the wind still heavy, fuel exhausted, the water up to the grate bars in the fire room and the crew totally exhausted from exposure, excessive labor, and hunger, they having scarcely tasted food for forty hours, a vessel's light was sighted, heading straight for the Webster.

"This was a most welcome sight and we frantically waived signal lights to attract her attention.

"The vessel, which proved to be the schooner Everett Webster, saw us, and she immediately bore down toward us.

"Upon learning our condition her captain ordered the stern boat lowered and this was manned by Mate W. M. Leeds and three men.

"The sea was very high at the time and the work of transferring the men from the Webster was both dangerous and tedious, and their boat could take but one man at a time.

"By skillful management, however, Mate Leeds rescued us all from the sinking steamer, but it took ten trips and over an hour's time to do it.

"When the last man was taken from the tug her guards were level with the water and she could not have staid afloat much longer."

Captain Clark is high in his praise of Captain Bowen and the officers and crew of the schooner. The schooner herself was a solid mass of ice and was almost unmanageable.

The Captain is of the opinion that if a large tug had been sent to their assistance they and their boat could have been saved.

Captain Clark has no knowledge of missing scow No. 5, but thinks that she could not sink as she had water tight compartments running nearly her whole length. He expressed, however, great anxiety for the two men aboard of her, as she was not abundantly supplied with food and fuel. The tug Webster was abandoned about twenty miles east of the Highlands of Navesink.

The crew saved only what they stood in and are in a destitute condition.

When they were landed aboard the schooner it was found that all of the rescued men had their hands and feet more or less frozen. They have, however, rapidly recruited since and they will be in a suitable condition to be forwarded to their homes to-day.

A NEW EXPRESS COMPANY.

Ex-President Hoey's Plans for Another Big Corporation.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Feb. 1.—Ex-President Hoey of the Adams Express Company, it is stated, has a nice little surprise party that he will spring upon the Adams Express Comany on May 1 next. On that day a new express company, to be known as the Pennsylvania Railroad Express Company, will launch out as a formidable rival to the powerful corporation so long managed by Mr. Hoey.

As a starter the new express company has secured the entire territory covered by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and its various branches, this business being now controlled by the Adams people. They will also secure an entrance into all the Southern States via the Southern Express Company, who are said to be warm friends of the new corporation.

The new express company will be managed by Mr. Hoey, who has as his backer, it is claimed, such men as President George B. Roberts, and Vice-President A. J. Cassatt and Frank Thompson of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, who are life-long friends of Mr. Hoey, and sympathize with him in the unfair treatment which it is claimed he has received from the company whose business Mr. Hoey is credited with having built up.

But few men outside of Mr. Hoey were aware of the fact that the contract between the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Adams Express Company was a yearly one, expiring on the first of May each year.

Soon after Mr. Hoey was deposed, he set to work forming a new company and securing the contract, so long held by the Adams people.

The new express company, it is claimed, will take away considerable business now done by the Adams, as they will have no means of reaching the cities entered by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

It is claimed also that the new company will reach Boston via the New York and New England Railroad, a contract having been made with Mr. Austin Corbin.

The articles of incorporation were prepared by Messrs. Drexel, Morgan & Co., of New York, who are said to be heavy stockholders in the new venture.

A prominent railroad official who is acquainted with the facts of the new concern said that it would be but a short time ere the new company will have offices in all the principal cities of this country.

There is no possibility for a long time of the Adams people securing the Central Railroad of New Jersey, or the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad as an outlet, as both of these roads have term contracts with the United States Express Company.

Two weeks after Mr. Hoey was deposed from the Adams Company, he threatened to organize a new company, which would knock the Adams people out. His threat was laughed at as it was thought impossible to secure a road to handle the business.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

Involving the Value of Cattle as Compared to an Indian's Life.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The Court of Claims is considering a most interesting case. The claimant is Col. John M. Chivington, of the First Colorado Cavalry, and the defendants are the United States and the Sioux Nation. The claim is for damages on account of Indian depredations committed in Wyoming in the spring of 1867.

Colonel Chivington alleges that the Indians stole 392 head of cattle and 22 head of horses, worth $32,850, for which he asks judgment.

A counter claim has been set up by Assistant Attorney-General Colby, who has charge of the defence of this class of cases, in behalf of the Indians, alleging the massacre of a large number of men, women and children of the Sioux Nation at Sand Creek by Colonel Chivington and his regiment on November 27, 1864, and the destruction of property belonging to the Indians to an amount exceeding in value that of Col. Chivington's claim. This is one of the historic cases, and was known as the "Chivington or Sand Creek massacre," in which it was said that nearly 1,200 Indians of all ages and sexes were killed and their scalps taken and bodies mutilated by white men.

Colonel Chivington, prior to his location in Denver was a Methodist minister and the presiding elder for that church in the South Platte country of Nebraska for several years.

Contract for Revenue Cutter Awarded.

A WIFE'S DOWNFALL

Prof. Gregory Sues for Divorce at Trenton, N. J.

SOCIETY CIRCLES AGITATED.

The Defendant is a Linguist, Elocutionist and a Fine Musician.

Her Shameful Career in New York City—A Long List of Co-Respondents Named, Showing That the Woman Has Repeatedly Broken Her Marriage Vows—Formerly an Active Worker in Church and Benevolent Matters.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 1.—Society circles here are much agitated over a divorce suit begun by Prof. B. C. Gregory, supervising principal of the public schools, against his wife, who was prominent in musical and social circles.

Professor Gregory came here three years ago from Newark, and he and his wife were at once socially recognized.

Last July Mrs. Gregory resigned as the accompanist of the Mendelssohn Choral Union and left the city. The separation was an amicable one, but her subsequent life in New York was so notoriously bad that the suit for divorce has been brought.

Mrs. Gregory took an active part in church and benevolent work, and from the facts set forth in the petition, she has been leading a double life.

A long list of co-respondents are named, showing that within nine months she has broken her marriage vows with eight different men.

She visited the notorious houses of Trenton and New York, where she made and kept questionable engagements.

The co-respondents are Walter G. E. Wood, Newark; J. H. Stoll, J. T. Sutton, John Baker, H. Adams, John Wood, H. Burns, all of Trenton, and Simon Shell, of New York.

The petition gives the dates of all the offences, and states that her downfall began three years ago.

She is now, it is claimed, partially supported by Samuel Schell, of 240 Lexington avenue, New York.

She visited his house first for the purpose of giving literary readings. On January 2 of this year, however, she went with him to the Astor House, and during the month of January met him at a house on Lexington Avenue, New York.

Mrs. Gregory's maiden name was Leah Letson. She is a linguist, elocutionist and a fine musician.

THE CASE OF DR. GRAVES.

His Counsel of the Opinion that He May be Admitted to Bail.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 1.—The granting of a supersedeas in the Graves case does not mean that Graves will be admitted to bail as has been claimed. He will be allowed all the time his attorneys consider necessary to further prepare his case. Attorneys for the defense are jubilant and are confident of ultimately securing their client's acquittal. It is the general belief that if a new trial be granted, it will be impossible to secure another conviction.

Judge Wells, one of the attorneys for Dr. Graves, says, however, that he thinks the action of supersedas will make it possible for the doctor to be released on bail.

The judge says his firm will take immediate steps toward that end.

He says if the Supreme Court so elects it may release him, and that the circumstances fully warrant such an action.

When asked when it was likely the case would come before the court for investigation, Judge Wells said: "I do not believe it can be presented to the court under six months.

It Will Be a Novel Parade.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The arrival of Gen. Booth, Commander in Chief of the Salvation Army, at Southampton, Feb. 12, will be the signal for an imposing demonstration on the part of his forces. On his arrival at London there will be a monster parade. Among its chief features will be the corps of Eastbourne prisoners, the naval brigade of reformed sailors and the corps of saved drunkards.

A Corpse By Parcel Post.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—An inquest was held on the new born male child that was sent through the parcel post and found at the dead letter office addressed to Webb, No. 9 Hartborne road, Kettering, where no such person is to be found. The body was in a cardboard box and wrapped in cotton wool. This is the fourth body sent by parcel post with no trace of the sender.

Gov. McKinley is No Danger.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 1.—Gov. McKinley's condition was so much improved today that serious results are no longer feared. EMBEZZLER HYER AGAIN FREE.

He Escaped from Detective Dalton on a Train in Indiana.

JERSEY CITY, Feb. 1.—Detective Dalton, whose actions while in San Francisco waiting for the extradition of Embezzler John Hyer was severely commented on, arrived home last night minus his prisoner.

Dalton, who is considered one of the most reliable detectives in Hudson county, says he had occasion to go from the car in which he and his prisoner were, early Saturday morning, and when he returned Hyer was gone.

The co-respondents are Walter G. E. Wood, Newark; J. H. Stoll, J. T. Sutton, John Baker, H. Adams, John Wood, H. Burns, all of Trenton, and Simon Shell, of New York.

The train was running at a high rate of speed at the time and Dalton is of the opinion that Hyer was either killed or badly hurt when he jumped from the train.

He is sure that Hyer was not on the train as he searched it thoroughly.

LOCAL FORECAST.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—For northern New Jersey—Generally fair during to-day, light rain to-night, slightly warmer, southerly winds; for Tuesday, cloudy, and rainy, warmer, brisk to high southeast winds.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—To the entertainment this evening, at the Boys' club, all boys are invited.

—Ticket 2,201 won the $150 music box at Williams's pharmacy, Saturday night.

—Don't leave the selection of your seats for the Musin concert until too late.

—A regular meeting of the Camera club will be held in its rooms to-morrow evening.

—Don't fail to hear Mrs. Wittemore to-morrow—at the Park Avenue church parlors at 3, and at Reform Hall at 7:45.

—A promenade concert and dance will be given Tuesday evening, Feb. 23, at 8, by Wetumpka commandery, Knights of Honor.

—For the next 30 days, smokers will find at Guttman's, 12 West Second street, a general reduction in cigars, tobacco and pipes.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Y's will be held in their rooms, corner of Peace street and North avenue, to-morrow afternoon at 4.

—The Chronothanatoletron is now under way, and will be given by the Y's some time during February. It will be an instructive as well as an interesting entertainment.

—A conclave of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., will be held at their regular asylum this evening at 8, when the Order of the Temple will be the work. All members are requested to be present.

—A charming story charmingly told is about the quietest way to write about Augustus Thomas's great play, "Alabama" which A. M. Palmer's company is to present at Music Hall to-morrow evening.

—George H. Fountain delivered a very able and instructive address on "Man's Past and Future Dominion", at the First Church of Christ, yesterday. The interest in this church and the work of it are increasing rapidly.

—The entire balcony has been reserved for the Musin concert of next Saturday evening, at 50 cents a seat. If you cannot get just the place to suit you in orchestra or dress circle, don't forget that up stairs are some of the most desirable of seats.

—Miss Isabel Watson, a missionary from Burmah, will address the Woman's Foreign Missionary society in the Bible class room, of the First Baptist church, Wednesday, Feb. 3, at 3 p. m. A cordial invitation is extended to the women of other churches to be present.

—Mr. Brown's Bible normal class, which meets in the First Baptist church, will this evening be in charge of George H. Fountain, who will give a talk on "The Creation". This class is open to all, either young or old, interested in Bible study; and visitors will be cordially welcome.

—Edsall is early this season in opening complete lines of new spring goods in each of his departments. He announces in his new advertisement to-day that his house has never before been so largely stocked with new and elegant goods. He gives a special invitation to all to make an early call of inspection.

—Some of the lines of "Alabama", Augustus Thomas's great American play, which will be given at Music Hall, to-morrow night, are said to cut keenly into the heart of the philosophy of light, and others illuminate the more humorous aspect of human nature. "Alabama" will be presented here by A. M. Palmer's New York company.

—The present quarters of the Salvation Army are too small to accommodate the throngs who want to attend the army services. Last night the barracks were crowded beyond the safety limit, and the police have given orders that hereafter the attendance shall not exceed the seating capacity. Larger quarters are desired. The army is trying to secure the "Elkwood" building.

—George Tailleur, who has a French poultry farm at Union Village, knows how to raise fowls for profit. He has six hundred hens. He keeps the poultry houses warmly heated in cold weather, keeps the fowls free from disease, and feeds the hens on egg-producing food. The result is an abundant supply of fresh country eggs, which he is ready to supply to Plainfield people, at their door, every Tuesday and Friday. He guarantees each egg to be not over 48 hours old.

PASTOR DILTS RESIGNS.

HE WILL LEAVE HIS PRESENT CHARGE APRIL 1.

This Is the Outcome of the Dispute Over an Old Church Debt—He Takes the Stand as a Matter of Conscience and Duty—His Congregation Deeply Affected by His Determination.

The Rev. Asa Reed Dilts has decided to leave the pastorate of the Park Avenue Baptist church April 1. This determination was announced to his congregation yesterday, at a meeting of the parishioners which he called at the close of the morning's service.

Although he had intimated three weeks before that unless the old church debt under dispute were settled in accordance with his views he could no longer conscientiously retain the pastorate, the resignation was a matter of great surprise to the congregation. They were actually dumbfounded by it, and as he read his brief note of resignation they hardly realized what he was saying. As the reality dawned on them many were affected to tears, and in all parts of the church evidences of deep emotion were visible. When he had concluded reading the letter he gave it to the deacons and said that was all he had to say. He declined to discuss the matter, and his congregation went soberly homeward.

Mr. Dilts's resignation is the result of the trouble over an old church debt. As was told exclusively in these columns Jan. 8, he took the stand that by "sharp practice" unworthy of a Christian church the payment of $800 had been avoided. His resignation is the result of the church's refusal to settle the matter in accordance with his ideas. His position is considered a manly and determined one, and one that his conscience and high sense of duty and honor compel him regretfully to take.

Mr. Dilts has been with the Park Avenue church since October, 1885, and his has been a faithful and successful ministry. He has greatly endeared himself to his people.

His resignation takes effect April 1.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Alice Gerdes of Rochester will give a parlor reading in the rooms of the W. C. T. U. this evening at 8.

Mrs. Mary Struthers, mother of S. R. Struthers of this city, died in Jersey City, last Thursday, at the age of 76.

Mrs. George D. Schomp, of Hillsdale, Kansas, is visiting her son, V. D. Schomp, and her brother G. Q. Dolliver of Manning avenue, North Plainfield.

The family of S. P. Dunn of East Seventh street will leave town to-morrow to spend the remainder of the winter season in New York. They will occupy a suite of rooms at Hotel Bartholdi.

"Commodore" Albert A. Wright, of this city, is quartered at the Magnolia, St. Augustine, Fla., for the season. The "Commodore" is an enthusiastic amateur yachtsman, and what he does not know about "jib-booms" and "spinnakers" is not worth telling. Among his friends he has been nicknamed "The Jersey yachtsman", and anyone who can "box the compass" in true nautical style is sure of a hearty handshake from the "Commodore".

A very pleasurable affair was the four o'clock tea given by Colonel and Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, Friday afternoon. It was followed by a reception in the evening. Mrs. Tyler was assisted by Mrs. Lewis, of Binghampton; Mrs. Wright, Mrs. T. Logan Murphy, Mrs. Charles Wadsworth, and Mrs. Rowland Cox. In the refreshment room the following young ladies presided:—Miss Lewis, Miss VanBoskerck, Miss Dumont, Miss Huntington, Miss Murphy and Miss Stewart.

The very many admirers of William D. Craig have sincerely appreciated the opportunity, within the past few days, of grasping his hand and learning of the good health and continued prosperity of himself and his brother George. His duties as an executor of the will of the late Mrs. Maria Berckman have called him away from his ranch and his banking interests in Texas, and he will probably remain in Plainfield for a few weeks. Mrs. Berckman was the relict of Prosper Berckman, and they formerly occupied the property now owned by John Taylor Johnston.

Notes of the Boys' Club.

The average attendance at the rooms last week was 57 per evening, the largest being 73, and the smallest 37. The number of visitors was 10. The monthly average for January was 54 per evening.

There will be an entertainment this evening, beginning at 8. All members and their friends are invited to attend.

A party of the boys visited New York last Saturday, under the charge of the superintendent. It was a great treat for them.

Over 200 books were drawn by the boys during the month of January, from the library. This is very pleasing to the managers.

BECKY BECOMES A BRIDE.

She Is Only Seventeen, But Justice Hetfield Weds Her to Her Lover Samuel.

CUPID'S story has been often told in these columns, in the published reports of fashionable weddings. Here is the story of a wedding which is remarkable for its sweet simplicity.

Justice Levi Hetfield took possession of the office of city judge Codington for awhile this morning and performed the first marriage ceremony that has been conducted by a civil official in Plainfield in a long time.

The bridal party occupied judge Codington's private office while awaiting the arrival of the justice. When he had seated himself at a desk the bride and groom and two male friends entered the main office and stood in a row before the railing.

The bride looked very neat and pretty. She wore a salmon-colored dress, a becoming hat, and a black fur-trimmed sack closely buttoned about her trim figure. A fur collar encircled her snowy throat. Her sparkling, black eyes beamed unwaveringly on the kindly-featured justice, and there was a smile of happiness in her glance, and a flush of pleasure on her cheek.

The justice asked her name. "Becky Wrightman"—she responded.

"Do you spell it with a 'g'?"—queried the man of law. The bride looked puzzled, and the groom came to her relief.

"I think it 's W-r-i-t-e-m-a-n"—he said, and the justice so wrote it. He asked if he should write Rebecca, but she insisted on Becky. She said her age was 17.

The groom gave his name as Samuel Kramer, age 23; residence 23 Somerset street; nationality German; occupation peddler. The bride's address was 62 Somerset.

As no one offered any objections to the marriage, the bride removed a woolen mitten and surrendered her small white hand to the sturdy grasp of her lover.

The justice looked into a law book to be sure he was right, then went ahead.

"You do take,"—he said to Samuel—"in the presence of Almighty God and these witnesses, this woman whom you hold by the right hand, to be your lawful, wedded wife, and do solemnly promise to be unto her a true and faithful husband until you shall be separated by death?"

The groom looked at his friends. "Verstansiedas?"—said one of them. He nodded, and said "yes" to the justice.

"And you, Becky Writeman,"—continued that functionary—"do take this man to be your lawful, wedded husband, and in the presence of God and these witnesses do promise to be to him a true, loving and obedient wife, until you are separated by death?"

The bride, with the simple words "Yes, sir", plighted her troth.

"Then"—said the justice very impressively—"I pronounce you man and wife, and what God hath joined together let no man put asunder." The bride put on her mitten again.

An embarrassed silence ensued. The groom shifted about uneasily on his feet.

"Well,"—said the justice—"I believe that's all, unless you choose to give me something. The law enacts a fee of 15 cents, to be paid to the county clerk, for recording." The groom's friends said "He can't give you very much, because he's not very rich." The groom turned his back a moment, fumbled with a purse, and produced a crisp one-dollar bill, which the justice accepted with thanks.

"The bride"—said the justice—"can call at my office some time during the week, and get her certificate." He said "Good day" and waved his hand in salute, and they filed out of the office and down the fairway. A moment later constable George Rockafellow went flying down the stairs to bring back the two witnesses to subscribe their names. One of them said proudly "I was married by a New York alderman." Their signatures were not easily decipherable, and their names can only be guessed at. The other male witnesses were police captain Grant, constable Rockafellow, policeman Giese, a PRESS reporter, and George Demeza, one of the city's most promising young legal lights. The fair sex was well represented by Miss Thompson, judge Codington's efficient private secretary.

Delightful Saturday Nights at the Y. M. C. A.

The Young Men's Christian association gave the first of a series of free entertainments to the men of Plainfield at their rooms Saturday evening. The attendance was large, and an interesting programme was acceptably rendered. While the programme as a whole was enthusiastically received, the cornet solos of Wm. Bartow of Bound Brook are deserving of very special mention. A most pleasing feature of the evening was the exhibition of skill on the horizontal bar and tumbling by the following members of the Young Men's Institute of the Y. M. C. A. of New York: Messrs. A. Harvey, Samuel Ludwig, Harry Schmidt, and Harry LaMont. Messrs. Schmitt and LaMont delighted all with their fencing, as did also Prof. Conde on the violin. President Manning spoke a few words of welcome, and the coffee (for which the Ladies' 9 are famed), with cake, was served by the reception committee.

Another entertainment, to which all men are invited, will be held next Saturday evening.

—The sale of reserved seats for the Musin concert began this morning, and a number are already sold.

Four Years for Stealing $20,000.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 1.—John Ferguson, the clerk of the National Bank of Kansas City who embezzled $20,000 of the banks money, pleaded guilty and and was sentenced to four years in the panitentiary. His attorney asked for mercy and the judge gave the lowest sentence prescribed by law. Ferguson was, until two years ago, a popular society man. His pace became rapid and required more money than his salary of $1,200 a year. He altered the books and obtained money through a fictitious account in the name of a woman.

May Erect a Monument to Padlewski.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 1.—The news that Otto Hauser, the young Russian who committed suicide in this city last October, was Padlewski, the Nihilist who assassinated General Seliverstoff, Chief of the Russian Secret Police of Paris, caused considerable excitement and interest here. There is a large colony of Russian Jews and political refugees in the city and they are wild at the news. They are already talking of erecting a monument to his memory. There is no doubt but that Hauser and Padlewski were one and the same person.

SUNDAY SUBURBAN SCRIBBLINGS.

Odd Happenings and Noteworthy Doings Among Fanwood People.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Moore of Westfield availed themselves of the charming weather by strolling to Fanwood and dropping in on several of their friends. Sacred music prevailed, and, Mr. Moore being in perfect voice, his renditions of choice selections were much appreciated. Chevalier deVerrier of Plainfield was tempted out and was warmly received by all whom he deigned to honor with his presence. To the instrumental accompaniment of R. P. Moore he interpreted some of the most difficult of Faust's lines so beautifully that persons driving by reined in their horses to listen to the sweet strains.

Messrs. Fancher and Briggs, jr., rode out behind Mr. Fancher's crack trotter, Westfield presumably being the turning-point.

A slim attendance was the order of the day at the churches, both morning and evening, all generations, male and female, sacrificing religious to hygienic duties by breathing the exhilarating air from the snow-capped mountains and inspecting Mr. Gibbs's sewer.

There will be a seven-up tournament game by the Highlanders, Monday evening, providing Mr. ————, official scorer, can attend.

Two Preachments.

"What I have to hope and what you have to hope"—said Mr. Pecksniff to the good, innocent-hearted Tom Pinch—"is that this deception may not alter my ideas of humanity; that it may not impair my freshness, or contract, if I may use the expression, my Pinions. I hope it will not; I don't think it will. It may be a comfort to you, if not now, at some future time, to know that I shall endeavor not to think the worse of my fellow-creatures in general for what has passed between us." And then, turning to Mr. Chuzzlewit, Mr. Pecksniff remarked that having discharged his duty to society, he would "retire to shed a few tears in the back garden".

Since the days of Mr. Pecksniff, the English language has been enlarged, and the lecturer on Ethics in our day has an ampler vocabulary. This is the way in which the lecturer does up his task in the front column of The Courier of a Saturday night:

"There is hardly any man, whether thoughtful or otherwise, who does not instinctively revolt at a religious life that is a transparent pretense of piety and goodness and a practical reality of vileness and duplicity; a life that swelters, day by day, in an atmosphere of moral nastiness and political corruption. No affected semblance of humility, no prestidigitation of superficial conversion, no perfunctory observance of forms and ceremonies, and no ecclesiastical position, high or low, can redeem such a religious life from everlasting contempt. Nothing is more sickening than religious cant. If a man has not discernment enough to see the utter discordance between such a life and that of his Lord, he is simply a fool. Young has well said:

'Tis not in folly not to scorn a fool,
And scarce in human wisdom to do more.

If a man realies the incompatibility of such a life with the profession he makes, he is both knave and fool, and the contempt and repugnance is [!] intensified. The religion of Jesus is worthy of all reverence. It is the salvation of the world. But the religion of some of his followers, who hold up their hands in holy horror at the wickedness of men, while their own lives are rotten to the core, is a stench and an abomination."

It remains for our Brother Lecturer of The Courier to discover—what no person not writing for the editorial column in which a hand at cards is compared with the Hand of God would ever think of discovering—that the religion of some of the Saviour's followers is a "stench and an abomination". Most of us at least have been educated to think that those who might correctly be designated as "some of His followers" are, at least, clean and decent folks. But this is not the Saturday night religious doctrine of our neighbor. He maintains and vociferates the contrary. But say, Brother Lecturer, don't whip the devil around the stump that way! Whip him out into the open, and "name his name" as Sairey Gamp would say; and let us know this monster—to avoid and dread him. Our own impression about him is nearly that of Sairey Gamp's friend, Betsy Prig, about the much quoted Mrs. Harris. We "don't believe there's no sich person".

The buncombe of a modern blatherskite is barely preferable to the preachment of an ancient Pecksniff.

—The motive of Augustus Thomas's great American play, "Alabama", which will be seen in this city to-morrow night, is based on the two highest and noblest things in life: love and peace, good nature and good will.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease, Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50c., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup and whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by J. G. Miller, No. 10 East Front street Plainfield, N. J.

Early the other evening a reasonably well dressed man roamed disinterestedly along West Front street. He had apparently been out all day, maybe part of the previous night as well, and having run up against several of our metropolitan institutions was just a little bit bewildered and misty. He wended his way with some uncertainty until he had passed Engine company No. 2's house and the Revolutionary relic that adjoins it, and then he paused. Something in a shop window seemed to arrest his attention, and he betrayed a sudden and marked interest in that which was before him. When he first hesitated he was well out on the edge of the sidewalk but now he tacked about, and his steps, following his gaze, bent window-ward. A PRESS man happened along at this crisis and stopped to observe the phenomenon. Slowly the traveler approached the window and then, when almost touching the glass, he knelt down, took off his hat and bowed his head in an attitude of eloquent adoration. And there he remained while the clock on the Methodist steeple across the street put fifteen minutes to its credit and then stopped to look on. THE PRESS man grew cold and impatient, and, yearning for developments, sallied up and braced the silent worshiper.

"My dear sir,"—said he, politely—"may I inquire for what good purpose I find you kneeling here at this time of night?"

The devotee turned a fearful glance on the reporter and whispered huskily: "Down on your knees, you reckless man, in the presence of royalty."

"In the presence of what?"—asked the scribe.

"Royalty! royalty!!"—gasped the stranger, with a genuflection to the window.

"Oh, some off"—said the PRESS man.—"You've been drinking—there isn't a fragment of royalty within three thousand miles of here."

"Hush, not so loud"—groaned the worshiper, "They'll hear you. Look!" and he grasped the reporter's arm and pointed at the window.—"Look! and tell me what you see!"

"Well,"—returned our obliging young man—"I see a select coterie of female torsos enveloped in an an attractive display of corsets, and—"

"Corsets!"—cried the kneeler, staggering to his feet,—"Corsets! Can it be that this is Peck's? Why, I must have been dreaming—I thought I was back in old England again and that this was the royal family!"

A Skater's Narrow Escape.

While skating at New Market last Friday, after school, Elmer Giddis broke through the ice and came near drowning. As he went down he had the presence of mind to throw out his arms, which bore him up until assistance came and he was rescued.

This is a very dangerous pond, as the strong current out in the middle makes the ice very weak.

A number have been drowned in this pond during the past, after venturing out too far upon it, but this does not seem to be a warning to others. Only Saturday, when the ice in places was almost too weak to hold itself, three boys ventured out on the pond and skated around until all three fell in.

Fortunately for them the water was not very deep in the place they broke through, and they had only the inconvenience of going home with wet clothes.

Singular and Fatal Injury to a Dandelion Horse.

David Lowrie, while visiting a neighbor, tied his horse in a stable, among some other animals. On bringing out the horse again, he noticed that it walked on three legs, and was in much pain. There was no injured spot on the leg, and no one could tell what was the matter with the animal. As it got worse, and could not even eat enough food to sustain life, it was killed Saturday, and the leg was found to be fractured just below the shoulder. It is supposed that one of the other horses kicked him. This is quite a loss to Mr. Lowrie.

Never defer until to-morrow what should be attended to to day. A slight cough shouldn't be neglected when Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure it.

Ohio Flooded With Spurious Coin.

LIMA, O., Feb. 1.—Northern Ohio is being flooded with counterfeit money of 25 cents and $1 denominations. The counterfeits are dated 1877 and are pronounced by experts as the best ever put out. They are exact counterparts of the real article in weight, size and design, and the banks have been made easy victims. The government has detailed its best men on the case and they are now putting forth their efforts to locate the mint, which it is thought is located South of Toledo in the oil field.

IF you get Dr. Pierce's genuine medicines, you're sure of two things—that they're the cheapest and the best. They're the cheapest no matter what the price, for you pay only for the good you get. They're guaranteed. If they fail to benefit or cure, in any case, you have your money back. And you can be sure that they're the best, for they're the only remedies that are, or can be, sold so.

BUT you won't get the genuine medicines, except through druggists regularly authorized as agents, and always at these long-established prices:

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery (for the Liver, Blood and Lungs), . . $1.00.
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription (for woman's weakness and ailments), . . $1.00.
Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets (for the Liver), ... 25 cents.
Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, . . . 50 cents.

Beware of everything purporting to be the genuine medicines, when offered, by unauthorized dealers, at lower prices. They are generally dilutions, imitations or counterfeits.

A STEAMSHIP ON THE ROCKS.

Passengers and Mails Saved, But the Ship in Great Danger.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.]

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The steamship Elder of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, Capt. Heincke, which left New York for Bremen Jan. 23, went ashore last night, in the dense fog, on the Atherfield Rocks, nine miles west of Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

Both passengers and mails have, according to the latest despatches, been got off safely, but the vessel is in great danger of becoming a total wreck.

NEITHER 900, 450, NOR 225.

Crescent League Members in a Quandary Over a Mathematical Computation.

The other afternoon a discussion was provoked in the Crescent League parlors by a member asserting that in the individual bowling tournament now in progress the total number of games to be bowled by the 31 men entered would be 450. This was disputed, and estimates were made ranging from 225, the square of 15, to 900, the square of 30. Not one, however, could give a rule whereby his resultant could be conclusively proved. Recourse was had to a prominent civil engineer, he being also a League member, who instantly recited a rule, compiled by himself, and now in general use by scientists, and, by reason of its brevity, of interest to all upon whom it devolves to arrange schedules of athletic games. It is as follows—"From the number of entries deduct one. Multiply the remainder by one-half the number of entries. The result will give the total number of games." This rule holds good as to any number entered, or rather as to any number to play, but only where each man playing meets the others individually once. According to this rule the formula as to the matter under discussion would be (31 minus 1) multiplied by (31 divided by 2) equals 465.

THE CHICAGO POLICE.

An Army of Twenty-One Hundred Able-Bodied Men.

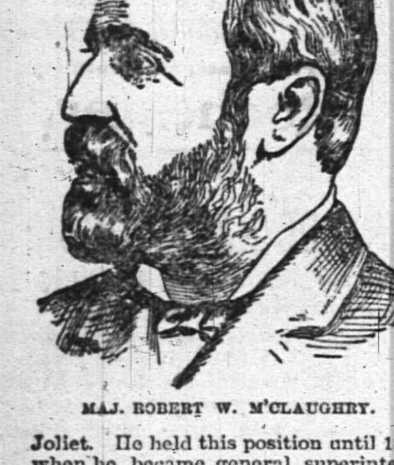
Personal Chat Regarding Maj. McClaughry, General Superintendent of the Force — Qualifications Essential to an Appointment as Patrolman.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

If there is one thing of which Chicago is prouder than of its sky-scraping buildings and its park system it is the police department. Everybody likes to see a large body of men who are physically perfect, even if they are a little weak mentally. Physical perfection has been highly esteemed in all ages and among all nations, and not until higher education shall have become universal will a change occur.

At the present time the police force of Chicago consists of 2,100 officers and patrolmen and 200 substitutes. This army is under the command of a general superintendent, who is appointed by the mayor. His word is supposed to be law in the police department. He issues orders to his assistants, is responsible for changes in the administrative offices, and controls all promotions and dismissals. To a certain extent these powers are indeed vested in him, but the mayor and the aldermen of the party in power never tire of suggesting appointments calculated to strengthen their political hold. No chief of police has yet been found who had enough courage to disregard the will of these meddlers with his privileges; but the present head of the department, Maj. Robert W. McClaughry, insists upon running the police force in his own way and may be able, in the course of time, to bring about reforms which will eventually divorce his department from the baneful influence of ward politics.

Maj. McClaughry is a unique character with a very interesting history. He was born at Fountain, Hancock county, Ill., July 22, 1839. When quite young he removed with his parents to Delaware county, N. Y., where he worked on a farm and attended district school. He was ambitious for a better education and took private lessons of a Presbyterian minister at odd hours, and in that way prepared for college, entering at Monmouth, Ill., in 1856, from where he graduated four years later. In 1861 he removed to Carthage, Ill., and during part of the war served as major of an Illinois regiment, participating in the expedition against Vicksburg. In 1864 he was appointed paymaster of the army and quartered at Springfield, Ill., until October, 1865, when he was honorably discharged. In 1874 he was appointed warden of the Illinois penitentiary at



MAJ. ROBERT W. M'CLAUGHRY.

Joliet. He held this position until 1888, when he became general superintendent of the Pennsylvania industrial reformatory at Huntington, Pa. In May, 1891, Mayor Washburne tendered him the position of chief of police of Chicago, which he accepted after giving the offer thoughtful consideration and securing the assurance that he would be permitted to organize and manage the police force without interference from any authority whatsoever.

The criminals of the country were not pleased with the appointment. They knew that while Maj. McClaughry was the kindest and most considerate of prison officials, he was also a firm believer in the majesty of law, and would consequently keep a close eye on their doings. Most of the dangerous lawbreakers of the United States are personally known to the major. While warden of the Joliet prison he introduced the famous Bertillon system of identifying criminals; and no crook who has ever been an inmate of the institutions managed by him has the slightest chance of escape should he be found at his old tricks.

At the present time Maj. McClaughry is perfecting arrangements for the protection of visitors to the world's fair. He has entered into correspondence with the heads of the police departments of every country in Europe for the purpose of securing photographs and personal descriptions of notorious crooks, pickpockets and confidence men, who are sure to find their way to Chicago in 1893. Detectives representing the various nations will be imported to keep an eye on their law-breaking countrymen. Other measures of equal importance have been laid before his superiors by the major, and have received official sanction. It is safe to say, therefore, that the interests of world's fair visitors will be amply protected, and that they will not be subjected to the annoyance experienced by many Americans who were robbed right and left while visiting the expositions at Paris and Vienna.

The regular force of officers under command of the chief of police consists of patrolmen in uniform and detectives. Fully two-thirds of the 2,100 men are on duty at night; the balance is detailed to guard the street crossings in the business district, attend to police court duties and assist special officers in the performance of more delicate work.

To secure a more equal distribution of police protection the city has been divided into thirty-seven districts, each of which contains a station, and is under the command of a captain or lieutenant. The various divisions of the city are in charge of inspectors, who receive the reports of commanding officers and condense them for the general superintendent and his assistant. The detective force is under the direction of a lieutenant, with executive powers.

To secure an appointment on the police force a man must be between the ages of 21 and 35. He must be not less than 5 feet 8 inches in height, and of weight proportioned to his height. He must be an American citizen—native or naturalized—able to read English fairly well, and must have a thorough knowledge of the city, its principal places of business, the various street-car systems and all points of public interest. A medical examination — more rigid even than that required by the war office in the case of applicants for enlistment in the army—keeps out scores of men who seemingly are pictures of health, but who, nevertheless, are afflicted with some organic weakness.

A DRILL AT THE STATION.

Applicants who have met all the requirements of the service receive appointments to the substitute corps as soon as vacancies occur. Inasmuch, however, as there are constantly on file from two to three thousand applications, indorsed by the examining board, aldermanic or some other kind of influence is not to be despised by those who are very anxious for copship honors. The time was when corrupt aldermen—and Chicago has had more than its share of them—realized a snug sum every year by "pushing" the claims of individuals who were wise enough to grease the official wheel. This was one of the evils whose extirpation enlisted Maj. McClaughry's most earnest endeavors, and the good results of his efforts are already noticeable by an increased esprit de corps. The men are no longer afraid of being removed to please a city father who wants one of his henchmen rewarded by a place on the force, to the detriment of the department and the city at large.

Police recruits are just about as raw as military recruits, and it requires hard work to convert them into martial-looking material. Years ago each captain or lieutenant was supposed to train the men in his command. The result was so unsatisfactory that a drill master was appointed whose duty it is to teach new men how to march and how to wield their clubs.

The hardest duty which a policeman is called upon to perform is guarding the crossings of down-town streets. He must protect the lives and limbs of thousands of pedestrians, control the movement of hundreds of wagons, carriages and street cars, and yet do justice to all. The task is one whose magnitude cannot be appreciated by anyone who has never seen with his own eyes the pandemonium which reigns in the principal thoroughfares of Chicago. The most experienced officers are detailed for this duty, which requires remarkable presence of mind and an even temper, as opportunities for using a club present themselves almost every minute.

The state legislature at its last session passed a law granting a pension, amounting to half pay, to all officers who have served the municipality twenty years, upon reaching the age of fifty years. Many of Chicago's best officers have availed themselves of this enactment and others have been requested to do so. A number of valuable men have been lost to the department in this way, but on the whole the law has proved of considerable benefit. Barnacles who clung to their positions long after passing the period of usefulness were removed and their places filled with younger blood.

It is doubtful if any other city in the union has a more perfect police force than Chicago. There are found among it men who are brutal and quick tempered, it is true, but they cannot hold their positions for any length of time. The maxim that policemen are paid to enforce laws, not to break them, is beginning to be practically employed, and one seldom hears of wanton assaults made by the guardians of the peace. Therein Chicago's force differs much from that of New York, whose members, according to newspaper reports, recognize no power above that of their own hickory sticks.

THE WORLD FOR 1892.

"The most energetic, resolute and relentless journal in America when it sets out to accomplish any great object; I can testify to its ready humanity, comprehension and persistence."—GAIL HAMILTON

We can tell our Republican readers a secret and our Democratic friends a piece of good news:—

THE WORLD intends to and will elect another Democratic President this year, as it elected Grover Cleveland in 1884.

Whether the Democratic candidate shall be Grover Cleveland, representing the cause of Tariff Reform, or any one of a number of other Democratic leaders who can be elected, representing all the elements of opposition to Republicanism, THE WORLD will be foremost in his support. The next President must be a Democrat.

But while doing this THE WORLD will give to its Republican readers, as it did in the recent campaign, a fuller and better report of Republican meetings and speeches in the Presidential canvass than the organs of their own party print. THE WORLD never colors news; it photographs events

THE WORLD is now printing an average of 330,000 copies a day. It has made a net average gain of 36,000 a day during the past year. It will circulate this year, on the basis of this increase only, at least 120,000,000 copies of the ablest, strongest and best Democratic newspaper ever printed.

THE WORLD is recognized as distinctively the Newspaper of the People. It believes that to be the highest journalism which is dedicated to the public service.

THE WORLD puts heart and conscience into its work as well as brains. It is the handmaid of Justice, the unraveller of mysteries, the detecter and the terror of Crime, the friend of the friendless, the help of the poor, the strength of the weak. Realizing that its power comes from the People, it gives back to them freely whatever service its influence and its resources enable it to render.

With a perfect equipment, a thorough organization, capable direction and a deep determination to move on and up to higher ideals and greater achievements, THE WORLD wishes its multitude of readers a successful year, and confidently bids them to expect from it during 1892 even more wonderful things than it has already accomplished.

"FIRST OF ALL THE NEWS."

THE NEW YORK RECORDER

FOR 1892.

Published every day in the year at

No. 21 PARK ROW,

BY THE NEW YORK RECORDER COMPANY

THE RECORDER begins the new year with more readers than any 2-cent Republican newspaper published in the United States. Within less than one year it has leaped to the front rank among the newspapers not only of America but of the World.

It has been first in originality, enterprise and news gathering. It is the most complete chronicler of the world's workings to be found

THE RECORDER is wading straight into the future with the purpose not only of being the best Republican paper published, but the best paper of any sort on the top of the globe.

The women have devoted to themselves a page of women's news and women's fancies. It is the "only" Women's Page in several senses. It is written by women, for women, and it is tempered with wisdom and edited with knowledge.

There is no paper like a home newspaper. THE RECORDER is the Home Newspaper of the Metropolis. It has more subscribers who read it in their family circle than any other paper printed, and this list grows fast.

Every day somebody outside of the routine of news is blessed with attention. Able writers who can talk sense produce THE RECORDER'S "special daily features".

"Howard's Column" is found only in THE RECORDER That skilled observer never wrote more crisply or entertainingly than in this column. It depicts "Gotham day by day" in vivid colors.

The fame of the witty Marquise de Fontenoy has gone around the world since THE RECORDER gave her letters on the frailties and foibles of European life to the public. The censors of foreign courts—those executioners of news in the old monarchies—have expurgated the letters of the Marquise found in the continental mails, but in this free land the letters will continue to divert and delight everybody.

Cholly Knickerbocker's knowledge of the pleasures and woes of the Four Hundred is revealed daily in THE RECORDER There is nothing like it or even approaching it in any other New York newspaper

In the great Presidential campaign of 1892 THE RECORDER will "first of all get the news". Full and fair reports of political proceedings will characterize its columns. Its politics is Republican, its news non-partisan.

LEAPED TO DEATH

Fire Causes a Panic in a New York Tenement.

JUMPED FROM FIRE ESCAPES.

Eight Persons Were Injured, Four of Whom Will Probably Die.

Two of the Latter are a Young Woman and the Man Whom She Came to This Country to Marry—He Jumped From the Fourth Story Fire Escape and She Immediately Followed Him—List of the Injured.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—A fire occurred last night in the rear four-story tenement house at No. 87 Hester street, which was occupied by eight families of Russian Hebrews, numbering in all forty persons.

The fire originated through the accidental upsetting of a kerosene lamp in the apartments of Solomon Zalinsky, on the second floor, and spread with amazing rapidity through the rickety, old tenement.

The escape of the inmates by the stairway was cut off and, panic stricken, they fled to the roof and to the fire escapes.

Eight of them were so badly frightened by the near approach of the fire that they leaped to the courtyard below.

All sustained serious injuries and three of the injured will die. Their names and the character of their injuries are:

Fannie Levi, 17 years old, three ribs broken and one leg injured.

Louis Kaufman, 18 years old, skull fractured, several ribs and both legs broken; will die.

Solomon Zalinsky, 38 years old, leg broken.

Emanuel Grill, 22 years old, leg broken.

Samuel Grill, 33 years old, leg broken.

Anna Goldstein, 55 years old, contusions of head and body.

Frieda Goldstein, 18 months old, compound fracture of the skull; will die.

The other tenants remained on the roof and on the fire escapes from which places they were safely rescued by the firemen when they arrived on the scene. The loss by fire amounts to about $1,000.

Later Rebecca Pomerantz, 20 years old, was brought to the hospital severely injured. She had jumped from the fourth story of the burning building but had been carried into an adjoining house and lost sight of for a time.

The physician at the hospital found that her injuries were of the most serious character, her back having been broken. She was shrieking from intense paid but the doctors could do nothing to relieve her. She will die.

It was in the midst of the excitement that Louis Kaufman, who worked for a cloakmaker on the top floor, jumped from the fire escape on the fourth floor. Solomon Zalinski, in whose apartments the fire started and who was one of the first to escape from the building, tried to catch him. Both men fell heavily to the ground.

Nearly every bone in Kaufman's body was broken. His death, the physicians at Gouverneur Hospital believe, is a matter of a few hours. Zalinsky, who heroically attempted to save him, had his right leg broken.

A rather romantic feature of the fire is the history of Miss Fannie Levi of No. 19 1-2 Bayard street. She came from Poland only a few months ago and was the affianced bride of young Kaufman, whom she was visiting when the fire broke out.

He ran with her to the fire escape, from which she jumped immediately after him. Both her legs are broken and she was so badly injured internally that the chances are that she and her affianced husband will be united in death.

Mr. Hopkins' Political Mission.

CHICAGO, Feb. 2.—John P. Hopkins, the well known Democratic politician, will leave for an extended tour through the South and East to-day in the interest of the various political organizations in which he is a leading spirit. Mr. Hopkins will stay for some time in New Orleans, and will visit New York city and consult Tammany before he returns. It is his purpose to test the feeling on the question of the Presidential nomination, and it is believed that the tour is undertaken partly, at least, in the interest of Senator Palmer.

His Terrible Home-Coming.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 2.—Victor Belanger, a young axeman of Gatineau Point, came down from the woods to see his aged father and mother. He found the house locked up, and after waiting some time, concluded to force an entrance. He found his mother dead in bed and his father lying unconscious on the sofa. The old folks had been seized with the grip and being unable to get assistance, the mother had died suddenly and the old man lived but a few hours after telling the story.

WAS SHE BURIED ALIVE?

Miss Burke's Death Causes Excitement at Dunkirk, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 2.—A supposed case of a person being buried alive has caused great excitement in the town of Dunkirk.

Last Friday morning Miss Frances Burke, a 16-year-old heiress, who had been ill for some time with pulmonary trouble, was sitting on her father's knee, when she was seized with a fit of coughing and fell over apparently lifeless.

The parents, instead of calling a physician, made arrangements with an undertaker named Kelb to take charge of the remains and prepare them for burial. The mother of the girl is said to have protested, claiming that her daughter was not dead, but her wishes were set aside and hasty preparations made to bury the girl Saturday morning.

Before the remains left the house members of the family say that a looking glass was placed over the young lady's mouth for a moment, and when taken away there was moisture upon it. Her lips, it is said, were red, and color came to the cheeks of the girl and then faded away again. Every appearance indicated, it is said, that life was not extinct, and why a physician was not called in to decide the matter is a mystery.

At the grave the mother made a scene, declaring that the girl was alive, but the coffin was lowered into the grave despite her protests.

The Dunkirk people are very indignant over the affair and demand an investigation. The authorities have finally consented to take cognizance of the matter and the grave will be opened and an investigation made.

Died from His Injuries.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 2.—Joseph Meglenski is dead from the effects of the brutal assault committed on him by six Polanders. He was assaulted because he would not join their gang for purposes of robbery. Four of the gang are now in prison where ten others of the same body have heretofore been confined for various crimes, one being the murder, last Christmas, of Yassas Walsconce. One of those arrested is Anthony Kopchuna, whose real name is given by their boarding house boss as John Ritski. He is an escaped murderer from Newburg, N. Y., where he killed a fellow-countryman while working on a railroad grading.

Deayala Murder Case.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 2.—Stephen Deayala, a son of a wealthy Cuban family, formerly general master mechanic for the Lackawanna Railroad, is on trial for murdering his wife last October, he having shot her down after having accused her of unfaithfulness. District Attorney Kelly, whose duty makes it necessary for him to prosecute the case, was groomsman at Deayala's wedding. The prisoner broke down when called upon to plead to the indictment, and wept piteously for a few minutes. Deayala's counsel are fighting the case stubbornly. Their defence will be insanity. But five jurors have been secured so far.

Supposed Murderer Arrested.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 2.—August Lentz, who is supposed to be the murderer of Mrs. Teresa Senior, the old woman who was found dead in her store Sunday morning, has been arrested by two Millburn constables. They were riding down Springfield avenue, Irvington, when they came across the suspected murderer. They invited Lentz to get up and ride with them and he complied. He was driven to the Fourth Precinct Station at once. When told that he was suspected of murder he laughed and said he knew nothing about it.

Commuted by the President.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The President has commuted the sentence of Robert Judge, of Michigan, to four years and six months' imprisonment. Judge was sentenced December 13, 1888, to ten years in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $1,000 for counterfeiting silver certificates. He has also commuted the two years' sentence of John K. Nichols, of Michigan, for violation of the postal laws to one year and three months, but permits the fine imposed of $482 76 to stand.

Wants $25,000 Damages.

BOSTON, Feb. 2.—An action of tort against the West End Street railway in which John J. Leahy claims $25,000 damages for injuries received in July, 1890, when the wall of the company's power house in East Eambridge fell upon him, is on trial in the Superior Court. The plaintiff claims negligence on the part of the company, and the defense is a general denial.

THE WRECKED EIDER

Nearly All the Passengers Have Been Taken Off.

LIFE BOATS STILL AT WORK.

Part of the Vessel's Cargo Has Had to be Jettisoned.

A Scene of Terror Followed the Stranding of the Eider on the Rocks in a Fog Which Was So Dense that the Officers Could Not See Further Than Half the Length of the Vessel Ahead—Seven Hundred and Fifty Thousand Pounds in Silver Coin and Several Cases of Gold Ready to be Thrown Overboard Should the Vessel Sink, in Order to Facilitate the Work of the Divers Who Would be Called Into Service.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—The cause of the running aground of the North German Lloyd steamer Eider on the Atherfield rocks, nine miles from Ventnor, Isle of Wight, was the dense fog which prevailed and prevented the officers from seeing further than half the length of the ship ahead.

When the vessel struck a scene of terror followed. The passengers rushed on deck, and were with difficulty calmed by the officers, who assured them that there was no danger. Women and children cried piteously, and the male passengers were also much alarmed, but were prevailed upon to return to their cabins and make the necessary preparations to abandon the ship should such a course be found necessary. The ship was cradled in the rocks about a mile from the shore.

Help was immediately sent, and the lifeboats have now taken off nearly all the passengers, although it was hard work, a heavy sea and strong gale prevailing.

Those of the poor Danes, Norwegians, Swedes and Germans who were among the Eider's steerage passengers landed are compelled to remain for the present at Atherfield, where the agents of the North German Lloyd Company are doing everything possible for them.

The coast guardsmen and others who were present in the boats and tugs about the Eider are unanimously of the opinion that, had the gale increased, there would have been a considerable loss of life, for the lifeboats, owing to the rocks and heavy seas, were almost useless, and would have been dashed to pieces either against the Elder's sides or against the rocks. A sudden and unexpected moderation of wind and sea alone seems to have saved the Eider from much more serious damage.

About midnight, at high water, an effort will be made by government tugs and by tugs employed by the steamship company to pull off the stranded steamship.

All the necessary hawsers were run on board of her or else were run out from her during the afternoon. Even should the tugs succeed in dragging the steamer off shore, it is not certain that she will remain long afloat, and every precaution has been taken in view of the possibility of her sinking.

Seven hundred and fifty thousand pounds in silver coin and several cases of gold, which formed part of the Eider's cargo, have been taken up on deck and have been wrapped in canvas, on the shore side of the deck, ready to be thrown overboard in the event of the Eider commencing to founder.

This will facilitate the work of the divers who will be sent to recover the buillion as soon as the weather permits of such operations.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The steamship Eider left this port on January 23rd at 11 o'clock a. m. There were fifteen first cabin and twenty-five second cabin passengs, one hundred and seventy-five steerage and about seventy in the crew. Captain Heinecke was in charge. The vessel is five thousand five hundred tons register and was considered one of the best vessels of the North German Lloyds fleet. The passengers were mostly Germans, Scandinavians, and Danes returning to their native lands. Her cargo consists of a large consignment of cotton for English and German manufacturers.

Will Have His Assailant Cremated.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Julius Somborn, the intended victim of his Cousin Jacob's bullet, is gaining rapidly and will be out in a few days. He will respect the last wishes of the suicide and have his body cremated at Fresh Pond, L. I., to-day or to-morrow. Mr. Somborn believes that Jacob's mind was unbalanced by excessive drinking and does not believe he intended shooting any one but himself; that it was a sudden frenzy that prompted the shooting of him.

Diphtheria Spreading.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 2.—Diphtheria of the blackest type has broken out here and reports from various quarters of the town and neighborhood show that it is spreading at an alarming rate. A number of deaths have occurred within the past few days. Five children of Dr. McCormick are lying at death's door.

NO TRUTH IN IT.

Adams Express Company Officials Deny the Hoey Story.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The widely published reports to the effect that ex-President John Hoey, of the Adams Express Company, was to spring a surprise on his old associates May 1 in the shape of a formidable business rival, to be known as the Pennsylvania Railroad Express Company, caused much talk among express and railroad people. The plan as outlined in the reports bore many evidences of genuineness, as it was known that he had long been on terms of intimacy with President Roberts and Vice-Presidents Cassatt and Thomson, who were said to be backing him in the enterprise, and as he was made to say positively that the contract between the Adams Express and the Pennsylvania Railroad was a yearly one, which expired this coming May, and could, therefore, be handed over to him by the railroad. Then, again, it was remembered that Mr. Hoey immediately after his deposition had threatened to organize a new company which would "knock the Adams people out," and his character for energy and aggressiveness made it very probable that he would do his best to carry out his threat.

Mr. Hoey is much wrought up over the leaking out of the story. He has made several heated remarks about the people who had made the thing public property, but he declined absolutely to confirm or deny the report.

All of the Adams Express Company officials are either out of town or unwilling to be seen with the exception of Vice-President Frederick Lovejoy. Mr. Lovejoy laughed at the story, but he was plainly irritated a bit at its publication.

"Why, this thing is absurd on its face," said he. "The first misstatement is that President Roberts and Vice-Presidents Cassat and Thompson of the Pennsylvania road; President Austin Corbin of the New York & New England road, and Drexel, Morgan & Co., the bankers, were associated with Mr. Hoey in the 'Pennsylvania Railroad Express company.' I have heard from all these gentlemen in the last twenty-four hours and they all assured me that they had nothing whatever to do with the scheme, had heard nothing of it except from the published statements and would have nothing to do with it.

"The next misstatement is concerning our contract with the Pennsylvania Railroad company. That is not a yearly but a five year contract, and it still has two or three years to run, I don't exactly remember which. The last misstatement concerns the United States Express company contracts with the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company. These contracts have not a long time to run. The Reading contract expires Feb. 28 and the Jersey Central expires some time this year. In fact my company is corresponding with the Reading people now in relation to a new contract."

A gentleman who is probably the foremost railroad lawyer in the country said: "I will tell you what I am willing to do if am I called upon. Let Mr. Hoey and the other gentlemen who believe that they could make a new express company pay organize such a company and make me their counsel. I will then take a copy of the Interstate Commerce law under my arm and go to the offices of every railroad company and politely demand that they give my company permission to use their lines to carry its goods. I am reasonably certain that I could make them as common carriers give as great facilities for transporting its parcels from State to State to my clients as to any express company with which they have an exclusive contract."

Pennsylvania Officials Deny It.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 2.—Pennsylvania railroad officials are emphatic in their denial in relation to the establishment of a new express company for the purpose of competing with and ultimately crushing the Adams Express company. Vice-President Thompson laughed at the idea and declared he know nothing of it.

Three Lynchers Identified.

HOUSTON, Tex., Feb. 2.—Three men who have been identified as having composed a party, with another man, who a few days ago lynched John Shields near Timpson, are now under arrest for the crime. An aunt of Shields saw the whole proceedings without the lynchers being aware of her presence, and was thus enabled to observe the identity of the four men. The fourth man is expected to be under arrest soon. Shields was to have inherited some money, and it is believed that he was put out of the way on this account.

In the Prince's Favor.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—Florence Nash, aged 17, sued Ali Kahn, son of an Indian Prince, for breach of promise of marriage. The plaintiff testified that the young prince had paid her much attention, taking her to places of amusement, and winding up with a proposal of marriage, which was accepted. She admitted that after a wine supper he accomplished her ruin. Ali Khan denied that any promise was given, and although his testimony was rejected because he refused to take the usual oath as a witness, a verdict was given in his favor.

Two Sailors Found Dead in Bed.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Angelo Demar and Rosario Valastra, Italian sailors, were found dead in bed at 526 Tenth street, Brooklyn, in the morning. They had neglected to turn off the gas on going to bed and were asphyxiated by the escaping fumes. Surgeon White was summoned, but the men were dead when he arrived. The two sailors were in the employ of Francis Romeo, wholesale grocer at 102 Warren street, this city. Their death occurred at his home.

MILLIONS STARVING

Minister Smith Writes of Russia's Condition.

A TRUSTWORTHY ACCOUNT.

The District Affected Larger Than Germany, With 27,000,000 Population.

The Scarcity of Provisions Not the Only Misery of the People—Lack of Fuel Causes Great Distress, While Pestilence is Decimating the Population—The Czar Has Given Enormously—Russia's Loss Said to Amount to One Thousand Million Roubles.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—In response to many sympathetic inquiries and proffers of aid received from friends in the United States, the Department of State has received from Minister Smith at St. Petersburg, an interesting report of the actual conditions of the stricken districts of Russia, prepared from evidence of eyewitnesses and most trustworthy sources of which the following is an epitome:

The territory affected by the drought compromises thirteen provinces of European Russia, where the famine is general and in five other provinces where it prevails in part.

The first thirteen provinces in area are one-third greater than all Germany, the population being about twenty-seven millions.

This vast section is agricultural, and the richest, and, ordinarily, the most fruitful soil of Russia.

An official estimate of the number of those without food or means of support, who require aid, is given as 14,000,000 persons, and this is probably below the true number.

The great proportion of peasantry is not provident. The peasants make no savings, but live wholly dependent upon yearly crops, hence long-continued and wide-spreading drought leaves them subject to outside relief.

The scarcity of provisions is not the only misery of the people. The crops are the foundation of their whole economic structure. When their crops fail, various evils follow. The government loses revenue and the peasants lack all the necessaries of life—clothing, firewood, farming implements, subsistence of horses and cattle, all depend upon this resource, the crops. The taxes and rental continue and it is as difficult to get fuel as food in some sections.

Cold as well as hunger cause terrible suffering. Large numbers of persons huddle together in some houses most conducive to warmth, and thatched roofs are torn off and the straw fed to the dying embers. Clothing is given away for bread. Horses and cattle are sacrificed. Fodder is as scarce as human food, and in some cases horse flesh has been used for sustenance.

During the winter there is no work, and frequently fathers have left their wives and children to fight the battle of want alone, because they could do nothing and their absence would leave fewer months to feed at home. The bread many are eating is composed of wild arrock, potatoes, chaff and leaves. And these terrible conditions produce disease.

Within the radius of one mile there are 120 cases of typhus fever; pestilence and hunger are daily gaining ground and pestilence is decimanating the people.

The Russian Emperor has personally given enormously, and all classes are giving according to their means. The loss to the government revenue will be at least 200,000,000 roubles, about $100,000,000 or more, while a conservative estimate of the loss to Russia, in view of all consequences, is placed at not less than 1,000,000,000 roubles.

International Friction Increasing.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg to the Daily Telegraph says that the friction between Russia and Austria is increasing daily. Austrian soldiers are deserting across the frontier into Russia at every opportunity. The deserters are received with welcome and naturalized as subjects of the Czar by secret orders from the Imperial Ministry. It is claimed that large numbers of the Slav comrades of the deserters are ready to follow them in the event of a war between Austria and Russia.

An Old Lutheran Minister Dead.

YORK, Pa., Feb. 2.—Jonathan Oswald, one of the oldest Lutheran ministers in Pennsylvania, died here yesterday, aged about 86. He was graduated at Gettysburg and shortly after entered the ministry of that church. In 1865 he resigned on account of ill health.

PARIS, Feb. 2.—The question raised between France and Bulgaria by the expulsion of the journalist Chadoune is settled. France has accepted the Bulgarian note expressing regret, and promising not to do so again, as satisfactory.

High Tide in the Elbe.

HAMBURG, Feb. 2.—The highest tide in the Elbe since 1870 is being experienced. The peril from the high tide is increased by a southwest hurricane. Uhlenhorst and Winterhude, suburbs of this city, are inundated.

Captured the Burglar.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 2.—After a desperate struggle on South Broad street, two young men, Gray and Bissel of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, captured an ugly burglar who had just escaped from the residence of Mrs. H. P. Van Tuyl on the same street. Mrs. Van Tuyl, who is ill, was thrown into convulsions when the burglar entered her room. He gave his name as Thomas Murphy of Philadelphia. A quantity of jewelry and trinkets were found on the burly prisoner.

FUND FOR THE RESCUERS.

New York's Mayor Opens a Subscription for the Everett Webster's Men.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Seven days have elapsed since the tub Webster and four scows, with eighteen men, were blown out to sea by the hurricane of Tuesday last. All but two of the men have been rescued. Those still missing are Capt. Charles Crump and Mate Flavius Canali of Scow No. 5.

The rescue of the ten men from the sinking tug just in the nick of time, has inspired those responsible with hope that the crew of the barge may be saved. But all agree that their chances of escape from death by drowning, starvation or freezing are very small.

Captain Clark, of the tug Webster, said on Saturday that the men on Scow No. 5 did not have enough food to keep them alive so long. Still, the same thing was said of the three rescued scows, whereas it was found after they had been picked up that the men on them had sufficient food and fuel for ten or twelve days. The strongest hope for the safety of Crump and Canali is that they might have been picked up by some outward bound steamship and carried to Europe.

The captain and crew of the schooner Everett Webster were unlucky when they rescued the ten men from the tug Edwin Webster in that they were not able to save a splinter of the tugboat. Thereby they lost thousands of dollars of salvage. In view of this Mayor Grant has started a fund for the captain and crew of the schooner, whose bravery and kindness have been commended by the captain and crew of the tugboat.

Deputy Commissioner William Dalton, of the Department of Street Cleaning, has sent to the mayor a check for $50 with which to begin the list. It is said that the mayor himself will contribute generously to the fund.

One Scow Still Missing.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—The ocean tug Edgar F. Luckenbach has returned to this port after an unsuccessful search of several days for the missing scow. There were two men on this scow, and as they had very little fuel or food, it is thought they must have perished from cold and hunger unless, like the crew of the tug Webster, they have been picked up by some passing vessel.

—The regular meeting of the Young Ladies' Mission band will be held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church, this afternoon at 4. Mrs. Pierson of Elizabeth will address the meeting.

—It is a matter of general comment that Michael F. Watson has the audacity to apply for a liquor license with such a record of illegal selling. He was fined another $100 by judge Codington yesterday.

—Fourth street from Broadway to Park avenue is to be macadamized. A crosswalk is to be laid across Sixth street at Madison avenue. Another crosswalk is to be laid across Park avenue at Fourth street.

—Edward A. Vermeule of 70 Duer street each year stores away his winter cabbages in a big barrel sunk into the ground. A day or two ago he found that fully one-half of this year's supply had been stolen. He suspects an Italian scavenger who was seen prowling about a few days before.

—Councilmen Frazee and Weber endeavored last night to have the street commissioner required to do the work of city surveying. NOW FOR A STREET RAILWAY.

Proposals to be Submitted to the Common Council in March.

The street railway question was revived by the common council last night, when the following was unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has been alleged under oath that the written contents which by law are required to be filed with the City Clerk before the Common Council has power to locate the tracts of any street railway, were not procured or filed prior to the adoption of the ordinance approved April 27, 1891, which purported to locate the tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, and that question has been in litigation since May last, and is likely to remain in the courts for many months to come, and said company has done nothing to expedite said cause, and has taken so little interest in the litigation as to allow of the taking of testimony against it without said company being represented by counsel at the examination, and

WHEREAS, The Supreme Court of this State in an opinion by Judge Reed, concurred in by Judges Depue and Dixon, filed January 8, last, decided that an ordinance pretending to vest in a corporation the right to place posts and string wires in the public streets of a city as a part of a system of propelling street cars by the electric motors is a nullity, and the ordinance above referred to would seem to be governed by said opinion of the Supreme Court, and

WHEREAS, It is the sense of the Common Council that the best interests of the City of Plainfield require that a street railway in this city should be constructed, and put into actual operation at the earliest date practicable,

Resolved, That the city clerk be and he hereby is instructed to advertise in the Engineering News and Street Railway Journal, for sealed proposals to be submitted to him on or before Monday, March 7, 1892, to be opened at the regular meeting of the common council to be held on that date at the council chamber in said city at eight o'clock, p. m., which proposals shall set forth that the proponents offer to organize under the Act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey entitled, "An Act to provide for the Incorporation of Street Railway Companies and to regulate the same", approved April 6, 1886, and the acts amendatory thereof, and supplemental thereto, and shall specify in detail the route and routes proposed, the character and description of motive power, rails, street cars and other equipment, and the terms and advantages offered.

PLANNING FOR PUBLIC SEWERS.

Leading Citizens Asked to Co-operate with the Council.

At the suggestion of the committee on water and sewerage, the common council last night adopted the following, all voting aye but Mr. Gallup:

Resolved, That the following named citizens of Plainfield be and are hereby requested to act as a committee to co-operate with the Committee on Water and Sewerage in the investigation of and planning for a system of sewerage for the City of Plainfield (said committee to report their conclusions in writing to the Common Council) viz.: Lemuel W. Serrell, George H. Babcock, Joseph W. Yates, James E. Martine, J. B. Dumont, O. T. Waring, George W. Rockfellow, John W. Murray, George H. Frost, B. O. Bowers, Rowland Cox, H. B. Newhall, Frederick W. Dunn, Nelson Runyon.

Resolved, That the city clerk furnish the gentlemen named in the foregoing resolution with a copy of the foregoing report, and of these resolutions, with the request that they signify their willingness, or otherwise, to act on said committee.

Resolved, That said committee meet for organization, etc., in the Mayor's office on Tuesday evening, Feb. 9, at 8 o'clock p. m.

Resolved, That the Committee when organized, have power to fill any vacancy or vacancies that may occur in the Committee.

Resolved, That the sum of $500 (or so much of it as may be necessary, but that amount not to be exceeded without further action by the Common Council) be, and the same is hereby appropriated for the use of said committee in the employment of expert services, and to meet incidental expenses of the committee; all bills for such expenditures to be presented to and be acted upon by the Common Council in usual form.

Resolved, That the Mayor be invited and requested to act with said committee.

The Peace Street Ordinance Passed.

The ordinance providing for the widening of Peace street from the Broadway bridge to Front street was adopted on final passage last night. J. F. MacDonald, acting for Mrs. S. A. MacDonald, in a letter protested against the passage of the ordinance until it was certain North Plainfield was going to open the street into the borough. He censured the borough's apathy in the matter. This was the only opposition expressed.

The borough commissioners in the Peace street matter will meet to-morrow evening.

The Police Force Enlarged, and All Want Pants.

On motion of Mr. Marsh the common council last night adopted the recent suggestion of Mayor Gilbert and authorized him to appoint three additional policemen.

Captain Grant petitioned that "the small sum of $50 be appropriated to purchase pants for the police". The sum was appropriated, to be spent for trousers.

Young Girls Sent to Jail.

Annie Boughtenhausen and Mollie Stevens were brought before judge Codington to-day for disturbing a Salvation Army meeting. They were adjudged guilty and sent to jail for ten days. Mollie Stevens is only 14 years old, but her mother says she is incorrigible, and wants her sent to the Reform School. Both girls have acquired an unenviable reputation in police circles.

CITY OFFICIALS AND THEIR SALARIES.

New Appointments Made by the Mayor, and Their Municipal Income Arranged.

The only changes made by Mayor Gilbert in his appointment of city officials last night were in the offices of overseer of the poor and first assistant chief of the fire department. The list as confirmed by the common council is as follows:

Corporation Counsel—Craig A. Marsh.
Street Commissioner—Robert A. Meeker.
Overseer of the Poor—Andrew Vanderbeek.
Board of Fire Engineers—Thaddeus O. Doane, chief; James A. Martin, first assistant; John W. Murray, jr., second assistant.

Saunders, Benjamin Alaband.
Members of Board of Health—George W. Endicott, M. D., Lemuel W. Serrell, Henry B. Newhall.

Most of these appointments were unanimously confirmed. Against the appointment of Andrew Vanderbeek as overseer of the poor and of George Rockafellow as special policeman Mr. Frazee alone voted no. He and Mr. Gallup both voted against the appointment of James A. Martin as first assistant chief engineer. Mr. Frazee made a short speech advocating the reappointment of J. Erwin Waters as first assistant. He said that Waters was a gentleman and had always filled the office with ability, and that he would like to see him continued in office.

The salaries of the city officials were fixed for the year as follows:

COUNCILMAN FRAZEE PLEADS FOR THE WORKING MAN.

Mr. Frazee said a good word for the working firemen, and it was through his personal exertion that the salaries of the drivers were raised from $480 to $600 and the engine-house janitor's salary from $120 to $180. He showed by an earnest speech that the increase in each case was a deserving one for the work done by these men, and his motion for increase went through without opposition.

SEVENTEEN WANT LICENSE.

Some of the Applications Are New, and One Is an Old One Under a New Name.

In referring these petitions to the license committee president Ginna asked that they be given a most searching investigation.

The City Gets a Bill "for Gas".

It has been supposed that light for the common council chamber was being furnished free of charge, as had been promised by the electric light company. Mr. Marsh, however, as chairman of the committee on lights, has just received a bill from the company "for gas", for lighting the chamber from October to December. The amount is $7. It will probably be contested.

Tramps Get Their Deserts.

Frank Lally and John Mitchell, the two tramps who were arrested yesterday for insulting women at Evona, were arraigned before judge Codington this morning. Lally got 60 days in jail, and Mitchell got 30.

A boil hurts, but it helps. It shows you plainly what you need. It wouldn't be there, if your blood were pure and your system in the right condition. And they would be, if you'd take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It carries health with it. All Blood, Skin, and Scalp Diseases, from a common blotch or eruption to the worst Scrofula, are cured by it. It invigorates the liver, purifies and enriches the blood, and rouses every organ into healthful action.

In the most stubborn forms of Skin Diseases, such as Salt-rheum, Eczema, Tetter, Erysipelas, Carbuncles, and kindred ailments, and with Scrofula in every shape, and all blood-taints, there's nothing that can equal it as a perfect and permanent remedy.

That's the reason it's the only medicine of its kind that can be guaranteed. If it fails to benefit or cure, in any case, you have your money back. And that makes it the cheapest blood-purifier sold, for you pay only for the good you get.

Can you ask more?

PASTOR DILTS'S RESIGNATION.

He Writes a Manly Letter Defining His Position.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—A word of correction and explanation seems to be in order now. I have never said that I believed or thought that "sharp practice" had been used by the church in avoiding the payment of an alleged debt of $800. What I did say was that another had said that he supposed from the nature of the case that sharp practice had been used.

The truth of the matter is just this: The builders lost $800. This sum, or about this sum, they claim is justly due them from the church. Having carefully looked into the matter, I became convinced that the church ought to make a thorough investigation, and, if it found that the builders had been wronged, to right the wrong. This course I urged upon the officers of the church; but they deemed it unwise to make an investigation. Believing that the matter thus left would be a constant menace of trouble to the church, and would be a hindrance to its spiritual growth, and yet unwilling to act contrary to the wisdom and judgment of the deacons any further than I had already acted, my resignation resulted.

ASA REED DILTS.

Christian Endeavor Day.

This is known in the religious world as Christian Endeavor Day. Only eleven years ago the first society was formed, and now the Endeavorers have over 1,100,000 brothers and sisters in 18,000 societies in all parts of the world. Never was the outlook so bright for Christian Endeavor as it is to-day, not only in every evangelical denomination in the United States and Canada, but in England, Australia, India, China and Japan as well. For this world-wide movement, for the quickened religious life of a million young people, for the 80,000 associate members brought into the churches during the year, the Endeavorers on this their anniversary day thank God.

That Street-Light Investigation.

Seymour G. Smith, ex-president of the common council, has presented to the present council a bill for $119.50, for the work of experts employed by him in testing the electric light service. The bill is being examined by the proper committee, and chairman Marsh says that it undoubtedly will be paid. He also promises developments in the street-light investigation at an early date.

Repealing the Low Franchises.

Ordinances were introduced into the common council last night, adopted on first and second readings, and ordered engrossed and advertised, repealing the ordinances of last year by which J. M. Low and his associates were granted water-works and sewerage franchises.

BY THE WAY.

—The city is to purchase a new desk for clerk Runyon, at an expense not to exceed $35.

—Vincent W. Nash was reappointed delinquent tax collector by the common council last night.

—Mr. and Mrs. David Hand have conveyed to Samuel H. McQuoid, land on the east side of Berkley avenue, for $400.

—Forty-three students received instruction in mechanical drawing and book-keeping at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening.

—The common council last night decided to rent the present council chambers for another year. A rail will be put up to separate the lobby from the council.

—A long communication from the W. C. T. U., protesting against license, and quoting Scripture liberally, was received by the common council last night and referred to the license committee.

—Aaron J. Mattox, who was elected constable in the Fourth ward last December, but who failed to qualify, was re-elected by the common council last night and will now enter on the duties of his office.

—Ovide Musin will sail from this country in a few weeks, together with his entire concert company. Consequently, the people of this city will never have another chance to hear him after Saturday evening next at Music Hall.

—The cast that will play "Alabama" at Music Hall to-night is the best that ever presented it anywhere. Jennie Eustace is far superior to Agnes Booth, while Miss Teuton and Messrs. Bangs, Saville and McIntosh cannot be excelled.

—The councilmen find that the matter of remedying the defective drainage of Liberty street is quite complicated, and that they have to move slowly. They are conferring with the Central railroad officials as to the best way of remedying the matter.

—The selection of Andrew Vanderbeek for overseer of the poor is a wise choice. When Mr. Vanderbeek held the office some years ago he proved most satisfactorily his efficiency, and his administration of poor fund affairs was so judicious that he saved $2,000 for the city.

—There will be a shooting match at live birds on the grounds of the South Plainfield Gun club on Monday, Feb. 8, between Tom Brantingham of South Plainfield and Billy Perrine of Marlborough. Conditions: 25 birds a side for a purse of $100. Other interesting sweepstakes will take place during the day.

Tom, Dick and Harry appear again with their Grandmother's recipes for coughs, etc.; but the people know Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup too well.

A PLAINFIELD WOMAN AT THE HEAD.

Miss Boorman Chosen Local Treasurer for the American Protestant Home in Rome.

Miss Laura Boorman, of 74 Washington avenue, North Plainfield, is one of the chief workers in sustaining the Gould Memorial Home, in Italy, which is an object of special interest to Americans. The institution was established by American, and is mainly supported by them. It is an industrial school and children's home, situated at 18 Via Magenta, Rome. The home occupies a commodious building with ample playgrounds in the best part of the city. The school was founded in 1871 by Mrs Emily Bliss Gould, an American. The building was bought in 1880 and given to the school through the bequest of the late James B. Gould, M. D., resident American physician, as a memorial to his wife. The property is now held in the name of "Societa per la libera Educazione in Italia", by a board of trustees in America, acting under the corporate laws of the State of New York, with power to establish schools of a similar kind in other parts of the Kingdom of Italy. The present trustees are: John Sinclair, president, New York: Chas. E. Whitehead, treasurer, New York; James R. Jesup, New York; A. Julliard, New York; E. G. Porter, Dorchester, Mass.; A. G. Agnew, New York; H. B. Barnes, New York.

Primarily and American charity, its object is to give a home with industrial and primary instruction under evangelical Christian direction to Italian children, orphans or half-orphans, and while not connected with any religious denomination, it is closely allied to all the Protestant churches of Rome. It is the only similar charity in the city not under Papal control. Some thirty children are already provided for, while from 80 to 100 can be accommodated. The management therefore hope to receive contributions from Americans which will enable them to take the larger number. The work accomplished by it has increased the hold of Protestant Christianity on the people.

The home has recently undergone reorganization. It is managed by a Council in Rome—Chairman, the American Consul-General, Mr. Bourne; secretary, the Rev. J. Gordon Gray, D. D.; treasurer, Mr. John Thomas. Associated with the council is a visiting committee of Roman ladies, who may be relied upon to look faithfully after the details of the home. Most of them are American ladies married to Italian husbands and living in Rome, such as Mesdames Berti, Gaiani, Bompiani, Ciocca, and Rossi.

The work of managing, representing, and raising funds for the home in America devolves upon the ladies' committees in New York and Boston. The officers of the New York ladies' committee are: Mrs. E. N. Crosby, New York, president; Mrs. A. R. Smith, New York, secretary; Miss Laura Boorman, Plainfield, treasurer. Contributions may be sent to either of the treasurers of the ladies' committees.

To carry on the home the sum of $5,000 annually is needed. Of this sum about $1,500 has been sent from New York, the same from Boston, and the balance collected in Europe. During the year 1892, the trustees want to pay for a wing costing $5,000, to meet the balance due on which, and the regular expenses, require now about $8,000.

Among the regular contributors are the following:

John Sinclair, Chas. E. Whitehead, Henry B. Barnes, Mrs. Wm. E. Cochrane, Mrs. E. C. Read, Mrs. Frederic Goodrich, Mrs. W. E. Dodge, jr., Miss C. P. Stokes, Mrs. F. W. Downer, Dr. F. S. Dennis, A. E. Cerqua, Mrs. Jonathan Sturges, Mrs. W. H. Osborn, Mrs. Thomas C. Sloane, Mrs. J. G. Holland, Mrs. James McFarr, Mrs. C. R. Agnew, Mrs. S. M. Fellows, Miss Laura Boorman of Plainfield, Mrs. D. W. Gardner, Mrs. E. L. Youmans, Mrs. Sylvanus Beed, Mrs. Chas. Kellogg.

Dr. Carroll May Be a Delegate.

The thirty-fifth annual session of the Newark Methodist Conference is to be held at Morristown, March 30. Bishop Bowman will preside. The last time and the only other time when he presided over the conference was at that held in Jersey City in 1875. An air of importance and interest is lent to the coming meeting by the fact that, on its second day, the delegates to the General Conference will be selected. Dr. Carroll of Plainfield, an editor of the New York Independent, is mentioned as a candidate. The General Conference meets once in four years. Its next session will be held at Omaha, Neb., in May.

Presiding Elder Lowrie of the Jersey City District is the only Presiding Elder who is finishing up his six-year term, and it is understood that he will seek new fields. Rumors prevail that the Rev. Dr. Marshal of Paterson will be made a Presiding Elder.

STOOD THE TEST.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS are unapproachable in curative properties, rapidity and safety of action, and are the only reliable plasters ever produced. They have successfully stood the test of over thirty years' use by the public; their virtues have never been equalled by the unscrupulous imitators who have sought to trade upon the reputation of ALLCOCK'S by making plasters with holes in them, and claiming them to be "just as good as ALLCOCK'S," and they stand to-day indorsed by not only the highest medical authorities, but by millions of grateful patients who have proved their efficacy as a household remedy.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for ALLCOCK'S, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

Right You Are.

Candidates for Congress are abundant, but Union county at present seems to have the field to herself. There is, however, plenty of time for outside townships to be heard from. Among the names that are mentioned are Hon. John T. Dunn, Thomas F. Lane, Judge Gilhooly, Peter Bonnett, Esq., and J. E. Martine, Esq. They are all good men and would, if elected, satisfactorily represent the voters of the Fourth Congressional district. But the Democrats must bear in mind that the contest in this district this fall will be no child's play.

With Hon. John Kean as the Republican candidate for Governor and Mayor Rankin for Congress all the resources that Republican ingenuity can devise and money accomplish will be exerted to swing this Congressional district into the Republican column. There will be no soft snap for a candidate, whoever he may be, and the utmost care should be used in the selection of our nominee, and after the nomination is made no grass can be allowed to grow under the candidate's feet until the night of election.—Elizabeth Herald.

To Move the Freight-house.

President Ginna and councilmen Case, Ackerman, Marsh and Gallup were last night by resolution made a committee to confer with the Central railroad officials relative to the project to remove the freight-house nuisance.

After having expended one thousand dollars for various medicines and with doctors, and growing worse all the while, I considered my case incurable. I was induced to try Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills. After their use for six weeks I can eat meat without distress, a thing that has not occurred before for years. I believe I am nearly cured, and yet it seems too good to be true. Have no doubt but that much of the sleeplessness people complain of is caused by indigestion.—J. W. DRAKE, Centre Market, Newark, N. J.

A Body in the Ruins.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 2.—The remains of an Italian have been found in the debris of Sailla & Fugassis' fruit store, No. 535 Liberty street, which was destroyed by fire about five weeks ago. The firm employed a number of Italians, and it is supposed the body is one of them. No report had been made of anyone being missing.

Blinded By the Electric Current.

When he recovered consciousness it was found that he was blind.

AN ALARMING CONDITION.

And How to Surely Overcome It.

"IF I COULD ONLY SLEEP!"

Sleeplessness is a rapid road to the insane asylum.

Men allow care, anxiety or business troubles to drive sleep from their eyelids, while women, with unstrung nerves and excitable temperments, pass hours upon hours each night in sleepless, restless misery.

What wonder that there are so many shattered nerves, tired brains and debilitated bodies, when we consider the thousands who pass sleepless or disturbed nights, and rise mornings, feeling indescribably miserable, dragged out, with tired limbs, exhausted energies, nerveless and ambitionless.

It is maddest folly to use opium, morphine or chloral. There is one sure way to cure sleeplessness—use Dr. Greene's Nervura. This wonderful remedy is nature's own sleep producer, and is perfectly harmless, being made from pure vegetable medicines.

"WOULD GIVE A FORTUNE FOR A NIGHT'S SLEEP!"

It soothes, calms and quiets the weakened, irritable and over-wrought nerves, producing perfect repose and refreshing natural sleep; at the same time it builds up the shattered nerves, and gives renewed life, strength and vigor to the system. Use it, you who are sleepless.

"I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura as being a good remedy for sleeplessness. Having been troubled in this way for three years, and objecting seriously to opiates, I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura with great benefit. I have also recommended the Nervura to many of my friends, who have been much benefitted by its use. MRS. G. H. BILL, 11 Union St., Concord, N. H."

N. B. ☞ Dr. Greene, the successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases, 35 W. 14th St., New York, can be consulted, free, personally, or by letter. Call or write him about the case, or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter fully explaining the disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free. 22td tts

OSTRICH FARMING.

One of the Most Interesting Industries of South Africa.

History and Habits of the Ostrich—A Peculiar Tribe of Africans Who Claim Descent from the Bird—Profits of the Business.

[Special South African Letter.]

The ostrich plume has been prized from time immemorial as a head and dress ornament; its introduction as such is probably coeval with the advent of brave knights and the budding vanity of the daughters of Eve. At the battle of Crecy, in 1346, the Black Prince, having slain the king of Bohemia, plucked the ostrich plume from the vanquished king's helmet and, placing it in his own, assumed it as the "crest of the prince of Wales," as which it has ever since been recognized. The ostrich, Struthio camelus, is a native of Africa and has been found from Algeria to the cape of Good Hope peninsula. Though there are evidences to be found in the quaint etchings of the Egyptian monuments, and in the writings of some of the old authors, of the domestication of the ostrich, it would be difficult to trace their origin. And for all practicable purposes the taming of the ostrich and transforming it from one of the wildest and most timid creatures of the desert to a domestic and tractable species of farm stock is due to the Boer farmers of South Africa. And its beginning dates back to about 1865. Prior to that period the entire supply of ostrich feathers for the markets of the world was obtained by killing these noble birds. The demands of fashion for these dainty ornaments caused prices to range high; and to obtain them so relentless was the warfare urged upon the ostrich by both white and native hunters that its utter extinction at one time seemed imminent.

But in the indiscriminate slaughter of the ostrich for its plumage there was one race of native Africans never known to participate. These were the Korrannas, a degraded but inoffensive people, a sort of cross-breed between the Bushman and Hottentot races, and who are to be found wandering in small bands throughout the Kalihasa desert and contiguous territory. A peculiar and striking characteristic of these people consists in the abnormal growth and development of the thighs and posterior portion of the body. A tradition is said to be current among them that they are the direct descendants of the ostrich. Whatever the strange infatuation may be, the fact exists that in the rude Korranna the ostrich has a friend and protector.

The first effort at domesticating the ostrich in South Africa was made by a Boer farmer capturing some young ostrich chicks and taming them, a process found not very difficult. But old hunters and travelers from the interior all declared that any attempt to breed them in a tame state would be abortive, it being the prevailing belief that so shy was the female ostrich that if the nest was once viewed by human eyes she would never more return to it. It is needless to say that this theory was soon exploded, and it soon became demonstrated that in a domesticated state the ostrich would multiply far more rapidly than in its wild or native condition, principally, no doubt, because better protected from the ravages of hunters and wild beasts.

From a beginning of a few tame ostriches in 1865, the increase became so rapid that in 1882 the number amounted to nearly 200,000, and the export of their feathers reached the enormous aggregate of $5,500,000 in value. This was the zenith of the industry and the ostrich feather market then became somewhat overstocked. At this period good breeding ostriches readily sold for from $1,200 to $1,500 per pair, and $50 apiece was the ruling price for chicks only a few weeks old. The enormous profits which, up to this period, had been realized in the industry had induced many people to abandon other pursuits to engage in it, and the overproduction and consequent deterioration in prices which ensued created a financial panic throughout Cape Colony, and many a misguided enthusiast was made to realize the wisdom of the old saw: "Every cobbler to his own last." The business has since settled down to a basis of supply and demand, and on that principle continues a profitable pursuit for a large number of persons.

Ostriches have been exported from South Africa to Australia and the Argentine Republic, where they seem to have done moderately well. In 1884 there were twenty-four full grown ostriches shipped from Cape Town, South Africa, to southern California, where they have greatly increased in numbers, and, it is claimed, have proved a source of great profit to the owners. The climate of southern California is very similar to that of Cape Colony, Africa, and on that account will be congenial to the ostrich. For the same reason, New Mexico, Arizona and western Texas should be suitable for ostrich farming.

The ostrich is of a timid, shy nature and in the wild state is generally to be found in flocks, which proves his sociable disposition. In these flocks the number of females is always in excess of the males, which would also indicate that he is polygamous. He likewise possesses a voracious appetite, and while his fancy runs to alkaline grasses, lucerne, cactus leaves, sweet fruits and like herbaceous tid-bits, he does not disdain to eat insects, scorpions, lizards, snakes, frogs, scraps of meat and even bones, which has given rise to the assertion that he is omnivorous. A well nourished five-year-old male ostrich will weigh about three hundred pounds and without using much effort will look over a wall nine or ten feet high. The female is some fifty pounds less in weight and correspondingly lower in stature. The stupidity of the ostrich is proverbial; he will lie down whenever and wherever the inclination takes him, whether in the mud or on the sand, and under sudden fright starts off at breakneck speed and is oblivious to any obstacle which may lie in his course. In this way his legs are often broken, and not infrequently he is killed outright. At the commencement and during the mating season, however, the disposition of the male ostrich undergoes a marked transformation. From the erstwhile stupid, timid creature, as an embryo paterfamilias he becomes wary, sagacious and aggressive. He is a persistent wooer and follows the object of his affections for several days without eating or drinking, and becomes jealous, sulky and spiteful by turns, and occasionally gives utterance to stentorious roars easily mistaken for the roar of a lion. The female is coquettish and uses various female artifices to rid herself of his amorous attentions, but is finally won, and then they do not leave each other again until the time when their offspring can care for themselves.

If the male ostrich is a persistent and ardent wooer he is no less a devoted protector and helpmate to his consort after he has won her. It is he who prepares the nest, which consists of an elliptically shaped hole in the sand about nine inches deep, four feet long and three and one-half feet wide. To do this he squats upon the ground, balancing himself upon his sternum, and scratches the sand away with his powerful claws. When the nest is finished the female begins the serious part of her work by laying one egg every alternate day. About forty eggs is the usual yield of a pair of ostriches. When the laying season is ended the eggs are at first sat upon for a few hours each day by the male bird; but finally all the time, when the pair take alternate watches—the male always is on duty at night. The incubation occupies about forty-five days, when the chicklings come forth—at first limp and weak, but, being soon revived by the warmth of the parent body, begin to run about and within twenty-four hours develop a voracious appetite for insects, small pebbles and almost anything else coming within their reach. The parent birds look on admiringly, but do not assist their little ones in their search for food.

For several years past the incubator has superseded the natural breeding of ostriches in South Africa. In fact, it may be truthfully said that about the only part the domestic ostrich has now in the propagation of its own species is in laying the eggs. The artificial incubator does the rest, and the young ostrich of to-day is literally "brought up by hand," as Pip's sister, Mrs. Joe Gargery, would say. There are few scenes calculated to inspire the traveler with more interest than a visit to a well-conducted ostrich farm. The writer has visited many such in South Africa, and it is to him a source of surprise that there are not to be seen in the southern and southwestern portions of the United States similar ostrich farms. If the first and only effort to introduce ostrich farming in southern California has become a financial success, which seems an established fact, why has the business not been followed up by other enterprising Americans?

J. W. SILER.

Sacred Nuts of Japan.

Although well known to travelers and collectors of curiosities the horn nut or "sacred nut" of Japan was almost wholly unknown to fruit and nut dealers in this country prior to 1888, when a Broadway (New York) commission merchant received the first large consignment. They are called "sacred nuts" because used in certain forms of Japanese worship, where they are placed on the altar and ignited. Being very rich in oil they burn with a hot, bluish flame and give off a peculiar odor, the fumes being supposed to rise as an acceptable incense to the gods. They grow under water and have a leaf like an American lily, the form of the nut itself being an almost exact counterpart of an Asian buffalo's head, drooping horns and all. In the raw state they are hard and tasteless, but when cooked the flavor resembles that of boiled chestnuts. They are said to retain their edible qualities for upwards of twenty years.

Considerate.

"Doctor," said the president of the board of trustees to Rev. Dr. Thirdly "the board has decided to give you a month's vacation."

"But, brother, I had a month not long ago. I don't need another rest so soon."

"Perhaps not, but the congregation does."—Epoch.

Brotherly Foresight.

Little Tom was involved in the difficulties of learning to dress himself, and regarded the buttons which had to be fastened behind his back as so many devices to torment small boys.

One morning he was informed of the arrival of a baby sister, and later in the day was allowed to steal into his mother's chamber to look at the baby as she lay asleep.

Tom regarded the small creature with much interest, and the nurse, wishing to know what his thoughts were, asked him, softly:

"Well, how do you like her? Isn't she a darling?"

"I don't think she looks much good," answered Tom, with uncompromising frankness. "How soon will she be big enough to fasten my back buttons?"—Youth's Companion.

THE WORLD FOR 1892.

"The most energetic, resolute and relentless journal in America when it sets out to accomplish any great object; I can testify to its ready humanity, comprehension and persistence."—GAIL HAMILTON.

We can tell our Republican readers a secret and our Democratic friends a piece of good news:

THE WORLD intends to and will elect another Democratic President this year, as it elected Grover Cleveland in 1884.

Whether the Democratic candidate shall be Grover Cleveland, representing the cause of Tariff Reform, or any one of a number of other Democratic leaders who can be elected, representing all the elements of opposition to Republicanism, THE WORLD will be foremost in his support. The next President must be a Democrat.

But while doing this THE WORLD will give to its Republican readers, as it did in the recent campaign, a fuller and better report of Republican meetings and speeches in the Presidential canvass than the organs of their own party print. THE WORLD never colors news; it photographs events.

THE WORLD is now printing an average of 330,000 copies a day. It has made a net average gain of 36,000 a day during the past year. It will circulate this year, on the basis of this increase only, at least 120,000,000 copies of the ablest, strongest and best Democratic newspaper ever printed.

THE WORLD is recognized as distinctively the Newspaper of the People. It believes that to be the highest journalism which is dedicated to the public service.

THE WORLD puts heart and conscience into its work as well as brains. It is the handmaid of Justice, the unraveller of mysteries, the detecter and the terror of Crime, the friend of the friendless, the help of the poor, the strength of the weak. Realizing that its power comes from the People, it gives back to them freely whatever service its influence and its resources enable it to render.

With a perfect equipment, a thorough organization, capable direction and a deep determination to move on and up to higher ideals and greater achievements, THE WORLD wishes its multitude of readers a successful year, and confidently bids them to expect from it during 1892 even more wonderful things than it has already accomplished.

FOR 1892,

Published every day in the year at

No. 21 PARK ROW,

BY THE NEW YORK RECORDER COMPANY.

THE RECORDER begins the new year with more readers than any 2-cent Republican newspaper published in the United States. Within less than one year it has leaped to the front rank among the newspapers not only of America but of the World.

It has been first in originality, enterprise and news gathering. It is the most complete chronicler of the world's workings to be found.

THE RECORDER is wading straight into the future with the purpose not only of being the best Republican paper published, but the best paper of any sort on the top of the globe.

The women have devoted to themselves a page of women's news and women's fancies. It is the "only" Women's Page in several senses. It is written by women, for women, and it is tempered with wisdom and edited with knowledge.

There is no paper like a home newspaper. THE RECORDER is the Home Newspaper of the Metropolis. It has more subscribers who read it in their family circle than any other paper printed, and this list grows fast.

Every day somebody outside of the routine of news is blessed with attention. Able writers who can talk sense produce THE RECORDER'S "special daily features".

"Howard's Column" is found only in THE RECORDER. That skilled observer never wrote more crisply or entertainingly than in this column. It depicts "Gotham day by day" in vivid colors.

The fame of the witty Marquise de Fontenoy has gone around the world since THE RECORDER gave her letters on the frailties and foibles of European life to the public. The censors of foreign courts—those executioners of news in the old monarchies—have expurgated the letters of the Marquise found in the continental mails, but in this free land the letters will continue to divert and delight everybody.

Cholly Knickerbocker's knowledge of the pleasures and woes of the Four Hundred is revealed daily in THE RECORDER. There is nothing like it or even approaching it in any other New York newspaper.

In the great Presidential campaign of 1892 THE RECORDER will "first of all get the news". Full and fair reports of political proceedings will characterize its columns. Its politics is Republican, its news non-partisan.

HARRIS CONVICTED

Found Guilty of Murder in the First Degree.

FOR KILLING HIS GIRL WIFE.

It Took the Jury One Hour and Twenty-five Minutes to Decide.

The Prisoner Listens Calmly and Was Apparently the Coolest Person in the Room—His Poor Mother Very Much Affected—He May Be Sentenced Monday—The Case Will Be Appealed—Convicted One Day After the Anniversary of the Death of His Victim.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Carlyle W. Harris, the young student charged with having poisoned his wife, Helen Potts, was found guilty of murder in the first degree at 10:45 last night by a jury of his peers.

The case has been one of the most sensational of its kind in recent years, and has attracted a widespread interest.

On February 1, 1891, Helen Potts, daughter of a wealthy railroad contractor of Asbury Park, who was in attendance at a fashionable boarding school in this city, died after a brief illness.

The death, at first, was supposed to be due to natural causes, and preparations proceeded for the funeral. Then, in some manner, the name of Carlyle Harris, also of Asbury Park, who was studying medicine in this city, became linked with that of the dead girl.

The whispers grew as time progressed, until finally the authorities in this city took cognizance of the matter and an autopsy was held on the body of the young lady, which resulted in the discovery that death was due to morphine poisoning.

Harris was arrested and indicted, and then the fact leaked out that he and Miss Potts had been clandestinely married. Facts were developed which showed the young man's character up in no favorable light, and the authorities became convinced that he had murdered the young woman.

He admitted having prescribed some morphine pills for his wife for some affection which he claimed she was afflicted with, but stated that the doses were not sufficiently large to do her harm.

About two weeks ago the case came to trial and has been progressing ever since. Yesterday the summing up occupied most of the day and early last evening Recorder Smyth charged the jury. They went out about 9:30 and at 10:45 returned a verdict of murder in the first degree.

The verdict was very unexpected to the accused, but Harris maintained his composure and was, apparently, the coolest person in the room. His mother, who has been constantly at his side during the trial, was very much affected and created a scene. She fell back in her chair shrieking madly, "It's a lie, a lie." It was several minutes before she again became composed.

It is understood that he will be sentenced next Monday. The case will be appealed.

LOOKS BAD FOR LENTZ.

Everything Points to Him as the Murderer of Mrs. Senior.

MILBURN, N. J., Feb. 3.—The examination of Mrs. Elizabeth Senior's body, who was murdered on Sunday, revealed twenty-four wounds, many made after death.

Everything now points to Gustave Lentz as the murderer, as many of his statements have been found to be false. Lentz has a bad record and is well known in the Fourth precinct. Last night Captain Glori made a tour of the saloons in which Lentz alleges he spent his time from 4 p. m. on Saturday until Sunday at 1 a. m. At every point his alibi was contradicted.

Lentz said he was in George's Concert Hall at 5 p. m. on Saturday. The proprietor denied that he was there. Many minor points of his alibi were also disproved. Other saloons were visited, but no one remembered having seen Lentz in any one of them.

A point argued against him is his talk with Schlosser, the bartender on Springfield avenue. In it the prisoner said that the August Lentz whose name had been mentioned in the case was his brother-in-law.

No blood was found on his clothes. As he threatened if he ever got in trouble he would commit suicide, he is closely watched. Coroner Phelan will hold an inquest on Thursday.

De Ayala Murder Case.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 3.—The jury to try the wife murderer Steve De Ayala has been secured, the regular jury panel as well as a special venire of thirty men being exhausted in finding a jury. The prosecution opened the case, declaring that they would show that De Ayala deliberately planned the killing of his wife and was caught in hiding, in another part of her father's hotel, an hour previous to the commission of the crime.

EXPLOSION AND FIRE.

Two Bodies Found and Another Supposed to Be in the Ruins.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 3.—A terrific explosion took place in J. Rummell & Co.'s hat factory last evening. Two plumbers and an apprentice were at work repairing an alcohol condenser, and it is supposed that the plumbers' torch ignited the gas from some leak.

The explosion resulted in the immediate spread of flames and the 150 employes escaped by jumping from the windows.

After the fire department had controlled the flames a search was made for bodies.

Oscar Lenrich, boss plumber, aged 33 years, was found charred almost beyond recognition. He leaves a widow and five children.

Another body was found, likewise burned to a crisp, which is supposed to be that of the other plumber, aged about 28 years, who had been employed here only two weeks. His name is Daniel O'Keefe. He is from Newburgh, N. Y.

The apprentice was Albert Anderson, aged 19 years, residing at Waverly, N. J. No trace of his body can be found. It is supposed to be in the ruins.

Three other employes were severely injured but not seriously.

The loss on the building amounts to $10,000.

NEW EXTRADITION TREATY.

Our Present One With France Entirely Inadequate.

PARIS, Feb. 3.—Minister Whitelaw Reid has been intrusted with the negotiation of a new extradition treaty between the United States and France.

The one now in existence fails to meet the exigencies of modern criminal life, having been originally signed nearly 50 years ago, in 1845, and cases are constantly arising where the ends of justice cannot be attained owing to the inadequacy of its provisions.

The main points of the new treaty have already been agreed upon by the two governments, and M. Fallieres, the new Minister of Justice, has been ordered to investigate and report as to the proposed new provisions.

The Commission to draft the treaty, consisting of a representative of the French Foreign Office and a representative of the American Legation, has already prepared the draft, which Minister Bibot, of Foreign Affairs, and Whitelaw Reid, the American Minister, will probably accept.

When negotiations are concluded, Minister Reid will resign.

A Relative of Mrs. Cleveland Suicides.

IRONTON, O., Feb. 3.—Charles Wilbur Folsom, a well known commercial traveller, committed suicide at his home on Linden avenue by firing a bullet into his heart while laboring under mental strain produced by a severe attack of la grippe. He lingered several hours after shooting himself and pleaded earnestly with the doctor to save his life. The wound was fatal, death resulting from internal hemorrhages. Folsom leaves an estimable wife and two beautiful children. He was but 30 years of age and a great favorite among business men. He was a distant relative of Mrs. Grover Cleveland.

HELD FOR RANSOM

Little Ward Waterbury Kidnapped in Broad Day.

ABDUCTED LIKE CHARLIE ROSS.

Six Thousand Dollars Demanded for the Child's Return.

The Miscreants Send a Letter to His Father By a Little Companion—Mrs. Waterbury Prostrated and it is Feared She Will Lose Her Mind—The Father Will Pay the Money as Soon as the Little One is Produced and Make no Fuss.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Ward Waterbury, the eight-year-old son of Charles P. Waterbury, a wealthy farmer of Pound Ridge, Westchester county, who was kidnapped by unknown men while on his way to school, has not yet been heard from.

The boy left home carrying his lunch basket and his school books, at 8 o'clock in the morning. As he did not return at the usual hour in the afternoon, his mother felt anxious about him. The boy had always been punctual in returning home from school, and when supper time came his father started out to search for him. He first passed over the road leading to the schoolhouse and then through the woods which skirt the highway. He repeatedly shouted at the top of his voice the name of the missing son, but received no response.

The father returned home worn out by his weary search. When he got home he found his nephew, Charles Waterbury, waiting for him with a letter, which the nephew said had been given by a stranger with instructions to deliver it to Charles P. Waterbury. It read as follows:

"SIR: Unless you are prepared to deliver the sum of $6,000 in cash as a ransom to us, you will never see your son again. The money to be at Miller's bridge, in front of Miller's mill, one mile east of Bradford Courthouse, at midnight Tuesday."

There was no signature to the letter. Mrs. Waterbury, who read the letter over her husband's shoulder, screamed "My poor, dear, little Ward!" and sank to the floor in a faint. It was a long time before she could be restored to consciousness. Mr. Waterbury, although much shocked at the kidnapping of his son, did not lose his presence of mind. He closely questioned his nephew regarding the appearance of the man who had given him the letter.

He said an unknown man had given him the letter. The man was driving a one-horse wagon and two others were walking behind it. He saw something in a blanket lying in the bottom of the wagon, but thought nothing of it.

The nephew could not give a detailed description of the kidnappers and merely could say that they were shabbily dressed and one of them had a beard. Waterbury, after hearing this story, started for New York, but before leaving sent Nehemiah Searles, a nearby neighbor, to White Plains to notify Sheriff Duffy of the kidnapping of his son.

The sheriff sent Under Sheriff Pugsley and Deputy Sheriff Hart to Miller's bridge to be on the watch there at the time mentioned in the letter when the kidnappers wanted the $6,000 paid over to them. The sheriff gave his men orders to arrest any stranger seen loitering about that place. The sheriff's men undoubtedly reached their destination, although they had to take a long drive from Bedford station. Up to this morning nothing had been heard from them.

It is said that five or six years ago a man named Joe Hitchcock worked for Mr. Waterbury as a farm hand, and finally disappeared with a valuable horse belonging to his employer. Hitchcock was afterward captured, the story goes, and was sentenced to a term of five years' imprisonment in Sing Sing prison. Farmer Waterbury and his friends think that perhaps this man is the leader of the kidnappers.

Mrs. Waterbury has been prostrated since she learned that her young son had been kidnapped, and her friends fear that she will lose her mind.

The entire neighborhood is in a state of frenzied excitement.

Mr. Waterbury has drawn $6,000 out of the bank, which he says he will pay to the abductors of his child and make no fuss as soon as they produce his little one.

INHUMAN TREATMENT.

Agitation in Germany Over Revelations of Peculiar Instances of Cruelty.

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—The Socialist journal "Vorwarts," has published an order issued by Prince George of Saxony, to the Twelfth Army Corps, requiring the officers to stop the inhuman treatment of the men by non-commissioned officers, and the paper discusses the subject at some length.

It mentions some cases where men were kept at the arm or knee drill till they had performed the movement nearly 2,000 times, or till they had fainted. In one instance a recruit, who had become bathed in sweat in consequence of the exertion, was unable to continue.

A sergeant thereupon poured a jug of cold water over him and then thrashed him till the whip broke. The recruit's legs were covered with welts and as a result of the treatment he had received he had to be carried to the hospital, where he lay in a high fever.

Sergt. Lohel fractured a man's collar bone by beating him with a rifle. He afterwards tried to commit suicide, fearing that he would be found out.

In addition to his other cruelties Sergt. Pflug compelled several of his men to chew dirty socks, and forced other recruits who failed to stretch their knees properly at drill to lie across two chairs in a certain position. He would then sit upon their unsupported knees until they screamed with pain, when he would have them gagged. He would also slap their faces.

Other indignities reported to have been inflicted by him are too horrible to be mentioned.

SAYS HE WAS BETRAYED.

Murderer Fitzsimmons Gives the Police No Credit for His Capture.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 3.—Fitzsimmons, the notorious Pittsburg burglar and murderer who was arrested in this city, says that the police of this city are not entitled to any credit for his arrest.

He claims to be the victim of treachery. He says that some time ago he befriended a man in Pittsburg who is now a resident of this city. He, Fitzsimmons, had called on the man here and that man had betrayed him to the police in order to get a part of the reward that hung over his head.

Fitzsimmons seems quite proud of his famous escape from the Allegheny County jail. He refuses to make any statement just at present, but would do so in the form of a letter to the press later on. He consented, however, to speak in relation to the murder of Detective Gilkinson.

He declares that at the time of the shooting he did not know the detectives who had come to his home to arrest him for the Homestead burglary, but thought they were two of a gang of Italians who were at work in the neighborhood, and that they had come to assault his wife. He thought at the time that he was simply defending the honor of his home, and says that the idea of cold-blooded murder never entered his head.

TRIED TO SEIZE THE ENGINES.

But They Ran So Fast He Had to Be Content With the Depot.

CARTHAGE, Mo., Feb. 3.—The County Collector has been told by so many taxpayers that they would not pay their taxes until he compelled the St. Louis & San Francisco road to pay up their back taxes, that he decided to make a determined effort to get the money.

He, with two deputy sheriffs, went to the depot with the intention of seizing the freight locomotives as they passed, but the word went over the line, and the trains whizzed through the depot so rapidly that he could do nothing.

He then attached the depot with all furniture and freight therein, and completely blocked the business of the road, as far as this town is concerned, as he holds the books.

Spotted Horse, Pugilist.

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 3.—Frank Wongo, of Portsmouth, the Indian known as Spotted Horse, and a New York pugilist named McManus, fought a prize fight near this city early in the morning for a $300 purse. Virginia sports will back the Indian against any 138-pound man in the United States to the extent of $2,000.

STILL ON THE ROCKS

Hope of Saving the Eider About Abandoned.

WAVES DASHING OVER HER.

All the Crew Except the Captain and Twenty Men Taken Off.

A Report that She is Breaking Up—Experts Say that Her Back is Broken and that there is No Chance of Her Being Able to Float—Taking Off the Mails—The Landing of the Crew of the Eider a Wierd Scene—Desperate Struggles of the Lifeboats.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—It was hoped last night that the government and other tugs would be able to pull the Eider off the Atherfield at midnight, but all attempts in that direction have failed. Throughout the night a high wind prevailed, raising a heavy sea, which caused breakers to sweep almost continuously over the Eider. The result is that her position this morning has changed decidedly for the worse. Her bow has risen out of the water and her stern has sunk lower.

The steamship's propeller during the night was carried away; this morning Captain Heinecke signalled that the size of the leak in the Eider's bottom had increased and that the water was gaining rapidly upon the crew in spite of their ceaseless efforts to keep it down.

It then became apparent that the Eider must, almost beyond a doubt, become a complete wreck, and her lifeboats were got ready to take off the crew when the word to abandon ship should be given.

Seventy-six bags of mail have been landed and a number of the crew have also been sent ashore in the local lifeboats.

The Eider's officers no longer attempt to deny that she is doomed; they now declare that she is full of water, except in the forepeak which is lifted up by the rocks upon which the steamship is fast.

Experts who have examined the Eider as she rests on the rocks have expressed the opinion that her back is broken, and that there is absolutely no hope of saving her.

All the crew of the Eider have been taken ashore except the Captain and twenty others, who remain on board in the forlorn hope that something may be done to float the steamer.

The landing of the crew of the Eider last night was a weird and picturesque scene. A powerful electric light aided the moonlight in casting a bright glare on the waters and guiding the lifeboats. Vast crowds lined the cliffs to gaze on the spectacle, and by their cheers or their silence showed how the incidents of the rescue affected them.

The Atherfield boat nearly capsized several times in the boiling surf, the oars bending under the strain. But the crew kept their heads, and the boat soon righted under their powerful stroke. The lifeboats landed the men within seventy-five minutes from the time of launching. The lifeboats and their brave crews did not delay a moment.

The German sailors were helped out on the beach, to be received with hugs and kisses by the other Germans who had gone before. Within five minutes the lifeboats were off again for the Eider. The surf boiled around and over them, often hiding them from view, and every reappearance was greeted with a cheer from the cliffs.

The trip was accomplished in safety, the last mails on board being landed as well as 125 of the crew. Very little confidence is felt in the ultimate rescue of the vessel, although the captain is still sanguine of being able to save her.

ALL SAVED.

The Last of the Men Blown Out to Sea Reach Home.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Charles Crump and Flavio Carrali of scow No. 5 of the Street Cleaning Department, which with three others and the tug Edwin Webster was blown out to sea from off Rockaway in a northwest hurricane Jan. 26, are safe.

"The missing men of scow No. 5 were landed at Philadelphia by British steamer Ethelburga, from Mediterranean."

Thus of the eighteen men who were exposed to the wild fury of the hurricane and the bitter cold not one was lost.

SHE COWHIDED HIM.

And Now He Has Sworn Out a Warrant for Her Arrest.

BOSTON, Feb. 3.—Herman Babcock, of Norwood, has sworn out a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Butnam, who cowhided him in the street. Mr. Babcock, who is quite prominent, says that he did nothing to provoke the chastisement.

Mrs. Butnam declares that he had all to do with it and that he brought it down upon him and deserved every stroke of the cowhide that she gave him.

It all came about when Mrs. Butnam got jealous of her husband. They had not been married long before Babcock, who was a friend of the husband before he got married, came along and cast his shadow across the happy path of the married couple.

With Babcock came to Butnam memories of the golden and silver days of the past, and so just for once he went off with Babcock, and Mrs. Butnam wouldn't submit.

YOUNG PORTER RELEASED.

Coroner's Jury Pronounced His Killing of His Father Accidental.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 3.—The coroner's jury investigating the killing by his son of David Porter, collector of the port, an officer of the G. A. R. and a prominent Odd Fellow, brought in a verdict pronouncing the shooting accidental and released the boy, who is only 16 years old.

At the inquest he coolly told of the shooting and viewed the body of his father without a tremor.

His mother and sister are greatly grieved, but their testimony upheld the boy.

It seems that Porter came home crazed by hard drinking and began beating his mother, when the boy, to save her from his father's blows, shot at him three times, but one bullet proving fatal, the other two inflicting but slight scratches.

MR. BROWN'S CLASS.

Three Hundred Were Present at Its First Reception.

Charles B. Brown gave a reception, last evening, to the young men connected with his Sunday-school class and their friends. The lecture room of the First Baptist church was nearly filled—fully one hundred and fifty of Plainfield's young men being present, who with their friends made an audience of about three hundred. The evening's programme opened with a piano solo by W. E. Mac Clymont.

Mr. Brown then delivered an address of welcome and congratulated the boys on the work of the past. About one year ago the class started with only four young men, while last Sunday eighty were present, necessitating still another addition to the church building before long. Dr. Yerkes followed Mr. Brown in a few appropriate remarks.

Master Ellis Curry, the boy violinist, was introduced, and received a well-merited encore for his remarkably good playing. Miss Rocap read, in her usual fascinating manner, "A visit to the dime museum", and for an encore, "Answering an advertisement". John Carney followed and captivated the men with his ludicrous descriptions of the stores on Front street. In response to repeated calls, Mr. Carney read some remarkable compositions, written by one of the class when a boy at school. B. T. Barnes sang a bass solo entitled "Honor and Arms". Mr. Barnes sang this difficult piece with great power, and received most hearty applause.

The first part of the programme closed with a cornet solo by Benjamin LaVere. Mr. LaVere is a cornetist of high rank, and the ease with which he handled this difficult instrument, greatly pleased every one present. While the audience were being served with a most liberal collation, L. H. Biglow, jr., took flash light pictures of the class in groups of fifteen each. A special feature of this was his photographing the original "Four" who organized the class in December 1890. These young men were, John R. Johnson, Clarence R. Johnson, John G. McLaughlin and Jed. M. Smalley. Mr. Brown, their teacher, was also in the group.

The programme continued with a reading by Miss Rocap entitled, "Asleep at the Switch". Mr. Barnes then sang another solo, and the evening's entertainment closed with varations on the cornet by Mr. LaVere. In parting, Mr. Brown expressed the hope that at their next reception the class would number two hundred instead of eighty, and requested the men to work for this mark, and they would reach it. The entertainment was a great success in every sense, and the young men were highly pleased with this their first reception.

The book contains excellent portraits of Mr. Mills and Mr. Greenwood, and is a credit to its author, city editor Lowden of the Elizabeth Journal.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Lawrence Meade, the young grandson of the late Lawrence Myers, is ill of scarlet fever.

Andrew D. Mellick, jr., of Broadway, is able to spend some time in New York city this season.

Miss Mary Huntsman of Providence, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. R. F. R. Huntsman of Westervelt avenue.

Edward F. Milliken, of Central avenue, sailed from New York to-day on the steamer "Majestic", for a short visit to the Mediterranean.

The Thomas Opera company will be at the Casino Thursday, Feb. 11, in "The Chimes of Normandy". This is the same company that made such a success in "The Mikado" last spring.

The Rev. Edward Rainsford, formerly rector of Christ church Elizabeth and one of the editors of the Elizabeth Herald, has been deposed from the ministry. The cause has been already told in these columns.

The cause of the death of Leonie Martin, on Monday, at Saranac Lake, was heart failure following an attack of the grip. Funeral services will be held at her late home, 135 Park avenue, to-morrow afternoon at 2:30.

Matthew Hughes, formerly of this city, and brother of Michael Hughes of Midway avenue, died of old age in St. Michael's Hospital, this morning. Funeral services over his remains will be held from St. Mary's church, this city, Friday morning at 10.

Ex-mayor L. V. F. Randolph gave an interesting talk in the First Baptist church mission last evening, and next Tuesday evening George Fountain will speak. This mission is thriving remarkably. The Tuesday evening talks are to be made a feature.

Hugh D. Vail, formerly of this city, has been interesting himself in founding a library fund for Haverford college. An endowment of $10,000, due largely to him, has been secured from the friends of the institution. Mr. Vail is now a resident of Santa Barbara, Cal.

Harry F. Skiff, the courteous, obliging and efficient manager of the United States Express company in this city, is to be married by the Rev. Dr. Franklin, at the bride's home in Philadelphia, to Miss Jennie V. Baker, to-morrow afternoon at 2. The happy couple will take a wedding trip to Washington.

The announcement of an approaching marriage that will be of interest to Plainfield society people comes to THE PRESS all the way from Texas. William D. Craig, the elder son of the late Dr. Lewis Craig, will soon lead to the altar a prominent Texas belle whose father has long been associated with Mr. Craig in the banking business.

The Young Ladies' Missionary society of the First Baptist church gave an enjoyable tea at the home of Dr. Yerkes yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Yerkes was assisted in receiving by her daughters, by Miss Edith Harold, Miss May Taylor, Miss Belle Butler, and by other members of the society. Miss Ella Serrell and Mrs. Walter McGee had charge of the refreshments, which were very daintily served.

But the Mayor Was Convinced That Two-Thirds of the Firemen Wanted Martin.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—As forbearance ceases to be a virtue, I for one wish to condemn the action of the Mayor in his utter disregard of the wishes of the firemen, they having sent a petition signed by nearly all of the firemen in the city and also by numbers of citizens, asking for the retention of First Assistant Chief Waters in his present office. We who volunteer our services at all times, and in all weather, ruining clothes and endangering our healths, with virtually no pay, are treated as slaves and can have no voice in the choice of even one of our superior officers. I know in writing this I express the sentiments of a majority of the members of the Plainfield fire department. ONE OF THEM.

Past Four Score but a Great Newspaper Reader Yet.

The Rev. Joseph Stockbridge, D. D., a retired chaplain of the United States Navy, and for many years a well-known citizen of Plainfield, is spending the closing years of his life with his accomplished wife and son in a pleasant home in Philadelphia. Though he has been for several years confined to his room as an invalid and is now approaching his eighty-first birthday, his mind is clear and active and few persons keep in closer contact with current events through their newspaper reading.

Comes back—every cent that you've paid for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, if you have not found the help that you need. But, if you're a tired and feeble woman, or a delicate and ailing one, it's a remedy that's sure to give it.

Practically, it's sold on trial. That's what it amounts to. If it doesn't give satisfaction, in the building-up and strengthening of overtaxed womanhood, and the complete cure of all the delicate derangements, functional disturbances, and painful disorders peculiar to the sex—then you have your money back.

You'd think that any medicine could be sold so, if it did all that's claimed for it. Exactly.

But the fact remains that out of all the medicines for women, "Favorite Prescription" is the only one that's sold on such terms.

Knowing these things, it's an insult to your intelligence to have something else, that pays the dealer better, offered as "just as good."

ABANDONED BY HIS CAPTORS.

Kidnaped Ward Waterbury Brought Home by a Clam Digger.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.]

LONG RIDGE, N. Y., Feb. 3.—The excitement which prevailed in this section, yesterday, over the kidnaping of 8-year-old Ward Waterbury, had abated this morning. This was owing to the recovery of the boy at a time when both his parents had almost given up hope of getting him back.

This morning at 3 o'clock John Close, a clam digger, who lives in Stanwick, Conn., brought the boy in a buggy to the home of the Waterburys.

Close says that at 2 o'clock this morning there was a knock at his door. He responded and found the missing boy standing outside. The boy told him that he had been left in the road by a strange man and told to go to the house in which Close lived.

MAIL POUCHES STOLEN.

Mysterious Disappearance of Seven Bags of Letters from a Ferryboat.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—A large and most mysterious mail robbery took place last night on a Hoboken ferryboat.

Seven pouches of mail matter, consisting largely of letters, were loaded on two mail-carts. When the mail vans reached Hoboken they were opened, and it was found that the pouches had disappeared utterly. The doors were locked as they left the New York office and there was not a sign to show how the pouches had been taken. The vans showed no signs of having been tampered with.

The returns show that of a total of 400,000 who made known their choice 227,000 favor Blaine, 112,300 Harrison, 23,736 Cleveland, 500 Frederick Douglass, 33 Hill 16,261 Alger, and 20,170 the Republican candidate."

WILL HIS HONOR SIGN THEM?

Warrants Ordered Drawn in Payment of Street Lighting Bills Which Ex-President Smith Says the Mayor Knows Are Not Justly Due.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In the PRESS of yesterday you make mention of a bill presented by me for $119.50, and you say that it is for the work of experts employed by me. I desire to explain through your paper the error in the above statement.

The council of 1891 appointed the following committee to investigate the many complaints coming to them from the citizens of Plainfield, regarding the very poor lights that were furnished—L. Spangenberg, E. R. Ackerman, W. L. Hetfield, and myself. The committee, knowing how easy it would be for the electric light company to fix things from their station so that no positive evidence could be obtained against them, procured the evidence as submitted in their report before the company was aware that such an investigation was to be made. After our appointment, they (not knowing that the evidence had been procured) did just what the committee expected they would do, viz, increased their current, thereby giving nearly the required candle power from every lamp, which most everybody noticed at the time. So you will see that the bills were not wholly contracted by me, but were concurred in by other members of the committee.

The evidence sworn to by the highest electrical authority in the United States, was submitted to the council and is believed to be in the hands of the city clerk, with the report of the committee. A true copy of this evidence is in my possession, and if you desire to place it before the public through your valuable paper, it is at your service. I would state here that the whole matter was placed before his honor, the Mayor, and also that his honor, the Mayor, was present at some of the committee meetings and questioned some of the experts and also the manager and the electrician employed by the Plainfield Electric Light company. He was fully satisfied, as well as the committee, that there had been an injustice perpetrated on the citizens of Plainfield, and fully concurred in the report submitted and did actually dictate a portion of same I would further state that the committee, at the suggestion of his honor, the Mayor, requested Mr. Pope, president of the company, and Mr. Runkle, a large stockholder, to meet him and the committee in relation to the matter, but they did not do so.

The bills were paid by myself and others, and the bill to the city was made out in my name and presented to the council of 1891 with the report, but not acted upon. Now, twice has it been presented to the council of 1892. Mr. Ackerman being a member of that committee, and knowing the claim to be a just one, endeavored to have Councilman Marsh report on the same at Monday night's meeting, but he would not, and stated to the council—with a great deal of gusto—that he had my bill in his pocket and would keep it there until he had had a little investigation of his own, and would probably report on it in a month or two. Then he moved that the Electric Light company be paid in full for the amounts withheld by the council of 1891, and the motion was carried.

This, I must say, is an outrage and a great injustice to the taxpayers, and it is hoped that his honor, the mayor, knowing the facts, will not sign any warrants relating to last year's electric light claims, until the matter is fully adjusted. It is hoped by many that the council of 1892 will soon take the matter up and cause a thorough investigation to be made of this, the only one of many public privileges owned and controled by the powers that be, that the counnail have any jurisdiction over. SEYMOUR G. SMITH.

Very Beautiful and with a Great Future.

The following from the New York Telegram is of interest to the readers of THE PRESS because the singer is one who is to appear at the concert of the Melopoia on the 23d inst.:

The concert at the Lenox Lyceum last evening was the occasion for introducing to the New York public Mrs. Blauvelt, a soprano, whose exquisite voice and charming presence aroused at once the interest of the large audience, and later on her singing carried the house by storm. Her singing of the aria and the soprano part in the two duets in the "Cavalleria Rusticana" was a revelation, her beautiful phrasing and impassioned rendering of this lovely music left nothing to be desired. She so completely identified herself with the part, that those who were so fortunate as to hear her will not care to hear another sing it. Mrs. Blauvelt, who comes from Brooklyn, has been studying for the past two years in Paris, under Jioule.

She is very young and very beautiful, with a great future before her. It is safe to say that no soprano voice heard here this season will surpass in sweetness, fullness and purity of intonation that of Mme. Blauvelt.

Miss Ketcham Proving Herself a Leader.

Miss Julia Jermaine Ketcham of this city, having been chosen conductor of the Mendham Choral society, is now earnestly engaged in rehearsing the members in a number of choice selections that are to make up the programme of their first concert in the near future. The great many Plainfielders who have long recognized Miss Ketcham's thorough knowledge of music and her talent and ability in such a line, will readily understand that she is making a success of her new venture, from the very start.

THOUGHT HIM A COUNTERFEITER.

Policeman Giese Arrests a Plainfielder for "Making" Genuine Greenbacks.

William A. Schorb narrowly escaped being locked up a day or two ago on suspicion of manufacturing queer money. He had a wonderful little machine which he was exhibiting in Kenney's shoe store. He would insert the edge of a blank piece of paper between two cylinders, turn a crank, and the paper emerged at the other side in the form of a crisp bank bill. Kenney said "Chestnuts! I've read all about that trick. You can't fool anyone in town—unless it's a cop."

Word was sent to policeman Giese that Schorb was running an illegal money factory in opposition to the government. The bluecoat promptly put in an appearance, saw the machine operated, and excitedly ordered Schorb to accompany him to the lock-up. Just as the officer was confiscating the machine and things began to look serious, Schorb became alarmed, weakened, and explained the trick. The machine was what all but policemen have read about. The blank paper in reality disappears into the interior of the machine, and the bill that comes out is one of the genuine United States notes with which the cylinders are loaded. Giese was much discomfited by his mistake, and will be on the lookout for the next joke.

$300 a Night for Himself Alone.

Ovide Musin, the distinguished and phenomenal artist who is to make his farewell appearance in Plainfield, Saturday evening, at Music Hall, was born in Liege, Belgium, in 1854. At the early age of eight he evinced so remarkable a talent and strong inclination for music that his father sent him to the Royal conservatory of Liege, where he received the first prize for violin playing when but a boy of eleven. Meanwhile, his father endeavored to persuade him to abandon music as a profession, but this was impossible. The boy rapidly developed a musical talent which is only born of genius.

In 1870, Leonard, the celebrated violin player and composer, having heard Musin, was so well pleased with him that he tried, and succeeded, in persuading his parents to let him choose the career of an artist, and from that time to the present his progress has been a succession of triumphs and ovations, both on the continent of Europe and in America.

In Vienna he played in the celebrated philharmonic concerts, under the direction of Hans Richter, who, in the name of the board, sent him a very handsome letter complimenting him in the very highest terms. It is generally conceded by the best critics that the world has never seen more than one, or, at the most, two violinists who could be considered the equal of Musin. Certain it is, that he now overshadows all others who have been seen or heard on the concert stage.

Musin has received higher prices in large cities than any other virtuoso, and his playing on "one" string is well worth the price of admission. He was recently paid $500 for two solos, and often receives $300 for himself alone. His receipts on fifteen concerts in San Francisco two years ago with his own company, averaged over $1,200 per night.

Is the Council of '92 Omnipotent?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I notice in your issue of yesterday, under the heading of corporation notices, that the council of 1892 have introduced and passed on their second reading two ordinances in relation to sewerage and water, repealing the two ordinances relating to the same passed by the council of 1891. These repealing ordinances drafted by the corporation counsel, are in direct variance with the legal advice given by him to the council of 1891. He then said that if the council attempted to take action of any nature on questions that were in the courts that they would be liable and undoubtedly be proceeded against for contempt. The questions involved are still in the courts, evidence is being taken and will be fought until a decision is rendered.

Are the powers of the present council greater than the powers of the courts?

EX-COUNCILMAN.

After having expended one thousand dollars for various medicines and with doctors, and growing worse all the while, I considered my case incurable. I was induced to try Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills. After their use for six weeks I can eat meat without distress, a thing that has not occurred before for years. I believe I am nearly cured, and yet it seems too good to be true. Have no doubt but that much of the sleeplessness people complain of is caused by indigestion.—J. W. DRAKE, Centre Market, Newark, N. J.

TEMPERANCE WORKERS.

Principles of the Young Women's Christian Union.

An Interesting Interview with Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, President of the Organization—Origin of the Interesting Society.

Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, of No. 14 West One Hundred and Third street, New York city, national superintendent of the Young Women's Christian Temperance union, during an interview with a representative of Once a Week, explained the origin and development of the Young Women's Christian Temperance union, and also expressed her views upon the present outlook for the temperance cause. "The Young Women's Christian Temperance union is one of the forty regular departments of the Woman's Christian Temperance union. It is known amongst the members as the 'Y,' while the parent organization is called the 'W.' I am the chief officer of this department and have under me forty-four state superintendents. We have a total membership of thirty thousand, spread all over the country. I was originally connected with the woman's temperance movement during its earlier days in the capacity of secretary to the president of our order, Miss Frances E. Willard, under whom I worked at Chicago for a considerable period. It was while attending the Gospel meetings, while the movement was yet confined to the object of 'saving the perishing,' as we called it, that my own attention and that of other co-workers was drawn to the necessity of our not merely seeking to reform the fallen, but also of directing our efforts to implanting principles of temperance among young men and women, and enlisting their co-operation in our cause, even while they were yet on life's threshold. We believed, especially, that the influence of young women for good could be utilized profitably in the cause, and thus originated the department over which I preside. The members labor to promote the objects of temperance by means of distributing literature, formation of hygienic and physical culture clubs, courses of readings, flower missions, loan libraries, jail visiting, Sunday-school work, etc. The most notable work attempted during the past year was the circulation of a petition indorsed by all the local branches of our department, thus giving it a total signature list of thirty thousand names, which was sent to every college and educational institute in the country which holds alumni dinners or reunions, asking that the use of intoxicants be discountenanced by each college upon all such occasions. Some of the recipients replied to us in a very friendly manner indeed."

In various parts of the country the Young Women's Christian Temperance union maintains "homes" and reading rooms for working girls, and in some places "holiday houses" have been started, where girls can spend a vacation of one or two weeks at a cost of three dollars per week. There are departments providing for mission work among soldiers and sailors. Prizes have been offered for the best essays on "The Effect of Alcohol," and such subjects as woman's suffrage, hygiene, dress, peace, international arbitration, etc., have been taken up by the order. The strange young girls arriving at large railroad depots in the west are looked after at these points by "a stranger's friend," who stays at the depot for this purpose. In other places sewing schools for colored girls are maintained. The order has a handsome badge, and hundreds of these, made of silver, are sold every year. The official paper is called the Oak and Ivy Leaf. In some districts flower seeds are given to children in the spring, and in the fall a flower show is held, at which prizes are awarded.

During the year Mrs. Barnes travels extensively through the country, delivers addresses at public and parlor meetings, and organizes new local unions. Like all her coworkers prominent in the Woman's Christian Temperance union, she is a lady of marked executive ability, and possesses unusual energy.

She Helped Win Winchester.

Employed in the treasury department is a lady clerk named Mrs. Bonsal, who furnished Gen. Sheridan the information upon which he fought and won the battle of Winchester. She has been in this department twenty-three years, at a salary of nine hundred dollars a year. During the summer of 1864 Gen. Sheridan, then in command at Harper's Ferry, was particularly anxious to ascertain the strength of the confederate forces about Winchester, upon which he was eager to begin offensive operations. Mrs. Bonsal was then Miss Mary L. Wright, and she taught a private school in Winchester, having lost her position in the public school on account of her loyalty. On the suggestion of Gen. Crook Gen. Sheridan communicated with her, obtained the information he desired, and his defeat of Early at Opequan Creek was the result.

Growing Family.

It is figured that 37,000,000 babies are born each year in the world. This means about seventy each minute. A line of cradles containing them would reach around the world.

THE NAVY'S GUNBOATS.

Services for Which Vessels Like the Machias Are Intended.

Although less interest was manifested by the general public in the launch of the 1,050-ton gunboat, Machias, at the Bath iron works, Bath, Me., than in the launch of the 8,150-ton armored cruiser, New York, at Philadelphia, it must not be assumed that this smaller class of vessels play an unimportant part in the new navy, says the New York Tribune. True, the tendency of naval construction all over the world for a few years past, and especially at the present time, in the matter of cruisers, is toward the construction of large vessels. This is caused by the necessity of uniting in a single vessel a battery composed of high-power guns, associated with numerous rapid-fire guns; protection in the form of either vertical side-armor or protective deck, or both, sufficiently heavy at least to withstand the attack of the rapid-fire battery of an adversary; high speed; and, finally, great coal endurance.

In revising the United States navy, the navy department has recognized the necessity of a few light-draught vessels for service in shallow waters, such as the Petrel, the Machias and Gunboat No. 6, the sister vessel to the Machias. It will be observed by the accompanying cut that the Machias, unlike the cruisers Philadelphia, Baltimore and others of their class, is provided with sails as well as twin screws driven by separate engines. She has two masts, of a fore-and-aft rig, and spreading about 6,500 square feet of canvas. This will enable her to sail as well as to steam. Secretary Tracy, in his annual report, urges that the navy needs four more small vessels of a special design for river service on the Asiatic and the South Atlantic stations. For many years the navy employed for river service in China two old double-ender gunboats that were built and did service during the civil war—the Ashuelot and Monocacy. The Ashuelot was sunk in 1882, and the Monocacy, still employed in river service in China, is now unseaworthy and practically beyond repair.

The secretary recommends the building of a vessel specially adapted for river service, but so constructed as to be capable of the highest military efficiency in the quarter where she is intended to operate—a vessel of about 1,200 tons displacement, and having a speed of not less than seventeen knots. Such a type would answer for both the Asiatic and South Atlantic stations.

WASHINGTON BUILDING.

An Elegant Structure for the World's Fair at Chicago.

Plans for a $50,000 building for the state of Washington have been selected. The building is to cover a ground space of 140 by 220 feet and will be constructed entirely of materials from that state. Mr Rochester, who brought the plans to Chicago, says that in case a glass factory is not in active operation in the state sand would be shipped to some factory in the east for making the glass, so that every particle of the building, from the foundations to the top of the flagstaff, a height of 175 feet, would represent the resources of Washington in building material. In the plans for the building the architect has endeavored to give prominence to the timbers of Puget sound, forming the entire exterior of the building so that the grain and firmness of the timbers can be shown. The exterior will be given a hard oil finish. Special attention has been given to the display of Washington's resources in the way of ship-building timbers and spars. The grand entrance to the building is made from ores, granites and marbles. All of the timber has been donated by the State Lumberman's association, and as the site of the building has been selected work on it will be commenced early in the spring.

Before leaving Chicago Delegate Rochester called on Chief Burnham and, on behalf of the Washington state board, agreed to furnish, free of cost, all the flagstaffs used on exposition buildings. His offer was accepted.

Congressman Stone's Wife.

Congressman Stone, of Kentucky, owes his life to his wife. He was in the army, and after dusk one night found himself, dangerously shot, lying in a thicket. There had been a hard fight. His company, in retiring, had taken their wounded with them and he had been left for dead. He was unable to move, and when he heard a footstep coming through the brush it was with relief he recognized it as that of a young woman. On Stone's call she searched till he was reached. Assistance was procured at her home not far away and there Stone was carried. For days the family cared for him, and in the process of recovery he managed to fall deeply in love with his rescuer. Fortunately for his peace of mind she was ready to smile on him, and a marriage later on was the result.

THE WORLD intends to and will elect another Democratic President this year, as it elected Grover Cleveland in 1884.

Whether the Democratic candidate shall be Grover Cleveland, representing the cause of Tariff Reform, or any one of a number of other Democratic leaders who can be elected, representing all the elements of opposition to Republicanism, THE WORLD will be foremost in his support. The next President must be a Democrat

But while doing this THE WORLD will give to its Republican readers, as it did in the recent campaign, a fuller and better report of Republican meetings and speeches in the Presidential canvass than the organs of their own party print. THE WORLD never colors news; it photographs events.

THE WORLD is now printing an average of 330,000 copies a day. It has made a net average gain of 36,000 a day during the past year. It will circulate this year, on the basis of this increase only, at least 120,000 000 copies of the ablest, strongest and best Democratic newspaper ever printed.

THE WORLD is recognized as distinctively the Newspaper of the People. It believes that to be the highest journalism which is dedicated to the public service.

THE WORLD puts heart and conscience into its work as well as brains. It is the handmaid of Justice, the unraveller of mysteries, the detecter and the terror of Crime, the friend of the friendless, the help of the poor, the strength of the weak. Realizing that its power comes from the People, it gives back to them freely whatever service its influence and its resources enable it to render.

With a perfect equipment, a thorough organization, capable direction and a deep determination to move on and up to higher ideals and greater achievements, THE WORLD wishes its multitude of readers a successful year, and confidently bids them to expect from it during 1892 even more wonderful things than it has already accomplished.

STORIES OF HARRIS

The Murderer's First Wife Said to Have Been Found.

SHE WAS ALSO A SCHOOLGIRL.

And Was the Victim of the Practice He Made Common With Women.

Her Name was Lulu Van Zandt and She was but Fourteen Years Old When She Married Him—The Discovery of an Intrigue With Another Girl Causes Her to Leave Him, After Which an Operation Instigated by Harris was Performed Upon Her.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The alleged first wife of Carlyle W. Harris, who on Tuesday night was declared guilty of deliberately murdering his second wife, Helen Potts, has at last been discovered. At least so thinks Assistant District Attorney Wellman. Search had been made far and wide for such a person, but without avail.

One day, about the middle of the trial, a man living in Connecticut wrote to Mr. Wellman, telling him of a case of a secret marriage in which he believed Carlyle W. Harris to be one of the principals.

The pair left Brooklyn soon afterward and went to Connecticut to live, where the young wife soon detected her husband in an intrigue with another girl.

In disgust she left him and returned to New York, where afterward a criminal operation was performed on her at her husband's instigation.

It was discovered that she had been living with her mother for three years in East Ninety-second street, but had left there about a year ago. It was also found that other parties had been looking for the girl a few days previously. These are supposed to have been emissaries of the defendant on trial.

Mr. Wellman and the Connecticut gentleman then called on Inspector Byrnes, who detailed several detectives on the search for the girl, who was finally found at South Amboy, N. J. She was there visited by the gentleman from Connecticut, who found that she had become a physical wreck as the result of the alleged operation. Nothing, however, could induce her to come to New York to testify against Harris, who had threatened her so that she lived in perfect terror of him.

She, however, examined pictures of Harris, and declared it was the face of her husband, grown more mature. Her uncle, who is wealthy and has a great deal of inguence over her, positively forbade her to attend the trial on pain of his lasting displeasure. This was on Sunday last, and there was no time to make further efforts to get her to appear on the witness stand before the close of the trial.

There is also positive proof that Harris wronged a servant in Brooklyn, who, in 1890, gave birth to a child in one of the hospitals in this city. When she got well enough to leave the institution she was penniless and appealed to Harris, who was now secretly married to Helen Potts. Harris gave her a trifle and told her to "get rid of the brat" by leaving it on some doorstep.

INGALLS ON THE NAVY.

The ex-Senator Talks of the Recent Chilian Imbroglio.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—"This whole Chilian imbroglio is an illustration of the danger of our having a navy," said ex-Senator John J. Ingalls, at the Grand Pacific.

"Here the Baltimore was in the harbor of Valparaiso, where she had no business to be.

"She had a right to be there, to be sure, and being there our flag and uniform were entitled to respect, but she had no business there. Her sailors went on shore and got into an altercation.

"Had they and their ship been where they ought to have been, in the harbor of San Francisco, New York, Boston or some other American seaport, they would not have been hurt. But the officials wanted to make a show of action and they sent the Baltimore to Valpaaiso, where she had no business, as they sent the rest of the fleet to other places where they have no business.

"The suppositious trouble with Chili was manufactured by people who have a direct interest in securing a big appropriation from Congress to build an expensive, useless, unnecessary navy.

"It was the annual war scare which is gotten up by the same people just about the beginning of every Congress. The scare is always based on some trifling incident in itself of no importance and out of the question as a casus belli. One year it was the Behring Sea dispute and we were sure to have a war with Great Britain. Then it was the Mafia lynching at New Orleans that was to involve us with Italy. Before that we had some discussion with Spain. Now just watch the course of events and see if Congress is not asked to appropriate forty or fifty million for a navy."

"Do we not need a navy?"

"No, sir. A navy will only get us into trouble, just as the Baltimore did. There is no necessity for this country in sending a lot of warships swaggering around the earth saying 'the United States must be respected.' The United States is respected without any bullying of that sort."

TO SUBDUE GARZA.

Texans Want Gov. Hogg to Call Out Two Hundred Rangers.

LAREDO, Tex., Feb. 4.—The news of the killing of Rufus Clover by a detachment of Garza's band has created intense excitement in this city, where the deceased was well known, and had a host of friends.

The almost unanimous opinion is expressed that Gov. Hogg should at once order out 200 picked rangers, if necessary, and put a quietus to this disagreeable state of affairs.

SANTA FE, N. M., Feb. 4.—Temio Saiz, Jesus Siellas and Pedro Mendoza, who were implicated in the murder of Anchetta during the late troubles at Ascension, Mexico, are now under arrest at Las Cruces, N. M. The Mexican government is attempting to have them extradited, and much trouble is expected to arise, as Saiz claims to be an American citizen, and says he had nothing to do with the killing.

The other two do not claim to be American citizens. They will be held to await investigation of their case.

WORLD'S FAIR POSTOFFICE.

One that Will Do Credit to Any of the Larger Cities of the Union.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—Postoffice Inspector Stoddard has practically completed his investigations for a plan for a World's Fair Postoffice.

Although the inspector could not make public the work accomplished, it is known that his plan contemplates a postoffice at the World's Fair grounds which will not only be ample in capacity to accommodate the 150,000 exhibitors, but will be a postoffice which will do credit to any of the larger cities in the United States.

The employes will number between 400 and 500, and it is believed that Inspector Stoddard will recommend that the office, instead of having a postmaster, be placed under the control of Postmaster Sexton.

A Valuable Gift.

BOSTON, Feb. 4.—A column from the remains of the temple at the Rhenensu of the ancient Egyptians has just been received by the Museum of Fine Arts. It is the gift of the Egypt Exploration Fund of Boston, through its vice-president for America, Rev Dr. William C. Winslow, of Boston. The column is an exquisite specimen of the palm leaf pattern, and this and its twin column, now in the British Museum, are the finest shafts from any Egyptian temple ever taken out of Egypt.

Probably Fatally Injured.

COVINGTON, Ky., Feb. 4.—Steve Brogan, aged 28, a Kentucky Central Railroad engineer, was shot and probably fatally injured by Richard Gray, an ex-letter carrier. Gray was arrested. He is 48 years of age. Brogan had been paying attentions to an unmarried daughter of Gray, who recently became a mother. Gray charged Brogan with being the father.

Democratic Convention Building.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—The local committee of Democrats to provide for the coming National Convention has abandoned all hope of securing the exposition building and has decided to build a wigwam capable of seating 15,000 people in which the convention will be held. A site on the lake front on which to erect the building will probably be secured.

Her Recovery Possible.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The condition of MRS. Howard M. Schneider, who was shot by her husband Sunday evening and supposed to be mortally wounded, is improving, and her recovery is possible. The funeral of her brother, Frank Hamlick, who was shot and killed by his brother-in-law, occurred yesterday.

BANK WATCHMAN SUICIDES.

He Was a Brother of ex-President McCauley of Dickinson College.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 4.—Shortly after 3 a. m., Watchman McCauley, at the Continental National Bank, committed suicide in the bank by shooting. McCauley was seen by the officer on the beat ten minutes before. He was walking up and down, and nothing unusual about his demeanor was noticeable.

At 3 o'clock he should have turned in an alarm, and it was his failure to do so that apprised the authorities that something was wrong.

McCauley was about 60 years of age and exceedingly feeble. He leaves a wife and family. He was a brother of Rev. James A. McCauley, ex-President of Dickinson College, the famous Methodist divinity school at Carlisle, Pa.

LITTLE WARD HOME

And the Abductors Received No Ransom.

TWO OF THEM NOW IN JAIL.

The Police Expect to Have C. E. Waterbury in Custody Soon.

He is Said to Have Originated the Entire Scheme—The Kidnapping of His Cousin was Undertaken to Secure Money for the Proper Handling of Bigger Game—The Second Victim was to Have Been the Son of Hanford Lockwood, and was to be Held for $50,000 Ransom.

GREENWICH VILLAGE, Conn., Feb. 4.—Last night Sheriff Dayton brought two men to the jail in this place who are accused of the kidnapping of young Waterbury from his home in Westchester county, N. Y. Their names are Samuel Sutherland and John McCann. Soon after their arrival the sheriff and McCann had a long conference during which, it is reported, the latter made a full confession, which implicates C. E. Waterbury, a cousin of the stolen boy. The sheriff said later that he expected to have Waterbury in custody in a short time.

Postmaster Knapp, while talking about the arrest, interested William McCann, of Stanwich, who, after hearing the postmaster's story, said that about a week ago Charles E. Waterbury, the nephew of Charles P. Waterbury, whose son Ward was stolen, came to him and proposed a scheme which would net them many thousands of dollars.

It was to kidnap William H. F. Lockwood, the only son of Hanford Lockwood, ex-president of the Greenwich Loan and Trust Company, and a very wealthy man, and hold him for $50,000 ransom.

Waterbury said that he had two men who would do the job with ease, and mentioned Samuel Southerland, a farm laborer residing in West Stanwich, and Everett June, another farm hand working in the same place. McCann says that he refused to take any stock in the affair and Waterbury left him after repeatedly cautioning him to keep silent.

Later he again approached McCann with another scheme, and said that he was able this time to work a trick on his rich uncle, Charles P. Waterbury, by taking his 8-year-old son, Ward. His plan was to take the boy and hide him for a few days in a cave known as "Devil's Den," which is situated back in the hills, about half way between Bangall and Long Ridge, N. Y.

He reasoned that they could keep the boy there until the old man came down with the cash. McCann again refused to interest himself in the scheme and he kept silent until he gave the story to Knapp.

The plan was to kidnap young Lockwood probably by getting him into a carriage on the pretext that his father was very ill, and had sent for him. Elaborate preparations were to be made, with the aid of the ransom money to be secured for young Waterbury, to insure the success of the plan, and keep young Lockwood in hiding until his father should give up the $50,000.

PINE RIDGE, N. Y., Feb. 4.—Ward Waterbury, who was kidnapped from his home here, has returned. He was brought home by Mr. Close who lives at West Stanwich, Conn., at whose house Ward knocked at 2 o'clock in the morning.

Ward then told the story of his capture.

He had been enticed away from his companions and when out of sight the men had forced him to accompany them. He denied the story of his cousin, C. E. Waterbury that the men had a wagon with them. He said that when he became too tired to walk the men had taken turns carrying him on their backs. At last they put him down in front of Mr. Close's door, told him to knock, and ran away.

$10,000 A TON.

A Remarkable Strike of Silver Ore in the Mollie Gibson Mine.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 4.—One of the most remarkable strikes of rich ore ever found has been made in the famous Mollie Gibson silver mine at Aspen. A nine-foot body of ore has just been discovered which is worth fully $10,000 a ton.

A drift run continued and penetrated a seven-foot body of ore, averaging over 9,000 ounces to the ton.

Huge pieces weighing 300 pounds were hoisted which were almost pure metal. One of these big chunks have been sawed into bricks which some of the principal stockholders will preserve as specimens.

The news of the wonderful strike has been kept from the public and is now made known for the first time.

Cut His Throat.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 4.—Abraham Hilton, 43 years old, living at 98 Bergen street, made a murderous attack upon his wife at their home last evening and afterward cut his own throat. His recovery is doubtful.

MORRELL MACKENZIE DEAD.

The Eminent Physician Passes Away in London.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Sir Morrell Mackenzie, the eminent physician, died unexpectedly at 10 o'clock last night.

Sir Morrell Mackenzie was born July 7, 1837, in Essex county, England. His father was a well-known surgeon, and the son was bred to the same profession. He rapidly acquired distinction, especially in regard to diseases of the throat. He was patronized by royalty and the nobility, and acquired considerable wealth.

Twenty-three years ago he founded the Hospital for Diseases of the Throat, in Golden Square, London, and was always devoted to its service. His fame as a throat physician caused him to be called upon, by recommendation of Queen Victoria, to attend the late Emperor Frederick, then Crown Prince, when the affection of the throat, which ultimately proved fatal, began to develop itself seriously.

After the death of Kaiser Frederick, Dr. Mackenzie was pursued vindictively by the criticism of German medical men, being, on the other hand, upheld by the English royal family and the Empress Frederick. His connection with the case brought him world-wide fame and also much annoyance. He published his defence of his treatment which excited much attention.

He was made a knight in 1889. Besides being consulting physician of the Hospital for Diseases of the Throat, he was for some time physician to the London Hospital, and was the author of several medical works.

LORD SALISBURY'S SPEECH.

His Utterances at Exeter Criticised by the Conservatives.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Lord Salisbury, in his speech at Exeter, made no reference to dissolution beyond ridiculing the idea that Parliament ought to be dissolved by the Ministry because of "a few adverse bye-elections"—a rather amusing euphemism for the overwhelming defeats of South Molton and Rossendale.

The Conservative press regards as most important the opinion which he expressed that a general election will be speedily followed by others.

The Unionist "Chronicle" reproaches him for resorting to the silliest subterfuges of the political arithmeticians in trying to prove that a Unionist majority is inevitable. The "Chronicle" says that "this is an absurd way of ignoring the fact that the Gladstonians are winning all along the line."

More Mysterious Than Ever.

MILLSBURN, N. J., Feb. 4.—Dr. Wrightson, county physician, after a microscopic examination of the clothes worn by Lentz, who is under arrest charged with the murder of Mrs. Senior, declares that he has not found a trace of blood on them. This makes the murder more mysterious, as the physician says it would be impossible for a man to commit the crime without leaving some trace of blood on him.

Parcels Post Convention.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British Minister, accompanied by the Secretary of the Legation, called upon Postmaster-General Wanamaker yesterday and signed a parcels post convention between the United States and British Guiana to take effect on April 1. The convention is similar to those in operation between the United States and other foreign countries.

The Suit Dismissed.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The suit against John Hoey, ex-President of the Adams Express company, has been dismissed in the Supreme Court. The suit was brought to recover $100,000 claimed to be due Henry C. Sherbourne as his share in a scheme by which certain New England exprtss companies were to be bought in by the Adams Express company.

Against Russell Sage.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—A telegram has been received saying that the decision in the case of the St. Paul, Stillwater & Taylor Falls Railway vs. Russell Sage at St. Louis had been reversed. The case involves about $250,000, and is the first of a series involving about $1,00,000. By the decision the case of Sage is entirely thrown out of court.

British Ship Ashore.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The British ship River Nith, Capt. Jones, from Portland, Ore., Sept. 30 for Sligo, is ashore at Broadhaven, a small bay on the west coast of Ireland, County Mayo, between Benwea and Errishead. The ship is leaking so badly that her pumps are not able to keep her free of water.

Danvers' Destructive Fire.

DANVERS, Mass., Feb. 4.—A most destructive fire last night totally consumed Joseph E. Farrar's shoe factory. His loss on the building is $15,000, partly insured, while the loss of the tenants, C. C. Farwell & Co., is $70,000, insured for $50,000 and that of W. H. Burns, another tenant is $20,000, insured for $15,000.

Newark to Have a Baseball Club.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 4.—It now looks as if Newark would be represented by a professional baseball club next season. The Newark Baseball and Exhibition company will soon be organized with a capital of $10,000. A number of prominent citizens have already subscribed for the stock.

House of Rest Hotel Attached.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 4.—The House of Rest Hotel at Ocean City, N. J., valued at about $10,000, of which Postmaster-General Wanamaker is the reputed owner, has been attached by the sheriff. The hotel has been the summer resort of members of the Bethany Sunday School of this city.

RECIPROCITY TALK

Is Secretary Blaine to Reopen Negotiations?

SO SAYS THE DOMINION PRESS.

Report That Three Commissioner Will Go to Washington Next Week.

The Canadian Government, Knowing the Important Factor the Reciprocity Question is in Dominion Elections, Has Lost No Opportunity of Heralding That the United States Still Wishes to Negotiate.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 4.—From one end of the Dominion to the other the Government press, on evidently inspired information sent out from Ottawa, intimate that, at the request of the United States Government, three representatives of the Dominion Cabinet will proceed to Washington next week to reopen negotiations with Secretary Blaine for reciprocity between Canada and the United States.

Knowing the important factor the reciprocity question is sure to be in the pending Dominion election, the Government have lost no opportunity to herald it abroad that Secretary Blaine has shown a disposition at last to negotiate.

Speaking with a member of the Cabinet, the latter said that no official announcement had been made, although admitting that there was a striking significance to the uniformity with which the information had gone abroad through the Government press.

The Ottawa "Free Press" says it is an election fake on the part of Premier Abbott, and that Secretary Blaine's confirmation of having invited the Canadian ministers to Washington to negotiate a treaty of reciprocity will have to be received before they will believe it.

Leading Liberals deprecate the government's action in attempting to use Secretary Blaine by false representations to assist them in fighting their elections if he has held out no further inducements for the Canadian delegates to visit Washington.

THE PAPAL SUCCESSION.

Leo XIII Canvassing the Views of the College of Cardinals.

ROME, Feb. 4.—It is stated that Pope Leo has addressed an inquiry to the members of the Cardinals' College, both in Italy and abroad, asking for their opinions as to whether the successor to the Papacy should be an Italian.

The object of the inquiry is understood to be to allay the jealousies between Catholic countries in Europe, each of which is afraid that a cardinal from the other may be selected for the tiara.

Until the Pope receives answers from the cardinals abroad, he will not communicate the result to the powers. It is said, however, that the Italian cardinals are unanimous for one of their own countrymen, and this practically decides the question.

Short in His Accounts.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., Feb. 4.—Albert M. Johnson, town clerk, treasurer and tax collector of the Township of Wilmington, has disappeared since Monday, and efforts to learn of his whereabouts have been futile. Mr. Johnson, who, in conjunction with his many public offices also pursued the vocations of dentist and jeweler, had a large jewelry safe in which he always placed the funds of the town. The auditor opened the safe after some difficulty, the combination having been changed, and investigation disclosed a deficit of $1,300 in the town's funds.

Was She Drowned While in a Trance?

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 4.—When the body of Frances Burke, who was buried in Dunkirk, was exhumed yesterday, the casket was found to contain, besides the corpse, a quantity of water sufficient to have drowned her. This discovery strengthens the belief that she was buried alive and drowned in the grave ere she could awake from the trance in which she was buried. Coroner Blood has taken the sworn statement of the girl's family and, while he has not yet made a report, he censures those who brought about the funeral before the permit had been obtained.

Senator Werts Appointed.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 4.—Senator George Werts, of Morris County, was yesterday appointed a justice of the Supreme Court to succeed Justice Knapp, who died on the bench in Jersey City. Senator Werts has resigned as senator. His nomination was promptly confirmed by the Senate. There will be a special session of the Supreme Court to-day for the purpose of making the new justice a counselor-at-law, as he has never passed an examination as such.

Louisiana Lottery Gives In.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 4.—John A. Morris, the principal owner and director of the Louisian Lottery company will give notice in the newspapers that he intends to withdraw his proposition for the re-chartez of the company and that the concern will wind up its affairs and retire from the field when its charter expires in 1894.

Underwent a Dangerous Operation.

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—Dr. G. Russell Ogden, a well-known physician and athlete, has undergone a dangerous operation for strangulated oblique inguinal hernia, and his recovery will be a matter of doubt for some days to come.

Payments on Warships.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The Navy Department has made the 22d payment of $89,550 on the New York and the 16th payments of $81,750 on the Pirate, cruiser No. 10, to Cramp & Son, ship builders.

THE SPECIE LANDED.

But There Are Still Four Hundred Sacks of Mail on the Elder.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The lifeboats have made several journeys to and from the stranded North German Lloyd steamer Elder, aground on the Atherfield ledge, and have succeeded in landing all the specie from the steamer.

They have also landed several sacks of mail, which is in a wet condition. It is reported that there are still 400 sacks of mail matter on the steamer.

The North German Lloyd steamer Havel, Capt. Jungst, which sailed from New York Jan. 26, has arrived at Southampton.

The agents at Southampton had arranged for all the passengers of the ill-fated Elder who desired to proceed to Bremen from Southampton by the Havel. They boarded that steamer and have sailed for Bremen.

It now transpires that the Queen was deeply interested in the fate of the Elder and her passengers and crew. Her Majesty when informed that the steamer was ashore gave orders to be hourly notified by telegraph as to the progress made by the lifeboatmen and others in rescuing the imperilled passengers and crew.

The Queen sent a telegraphic message to Atherfield, through the President of the Board of Trade, the Right Hon. Sir Michael E. Hicks-Beach, Bart., stating that she warmly appreciated the gallant conduct of the crews of the three lifeboats engaged in saving the crew and passengers of the stranded German steamship.

The local Secretary of the Lifeboat Society read the Queen's telegram, which was briefly worded, to the assembled lifesavers of Atherfield amid a scene of great enthusiasm.

—Although Edward Schenck recovered a verdict of $29 against Firman Gise of Dunellen, for damage done to his horse and wagon, the lawsuit has gained little to his purse. The five arbitrators are now to receive $25 for their work, which expense is to be borne between Gise and Schenck.

—Speaking of manager Codding's signing Hammill, who last year pitched for Plainfield, the Westfield Leader says: "It will be remembered that Hammill was the only pitcher that scored two victories over the Westfields last year, and the acquisition is doubtless a valuable one. With O'Neil and Hammill, Westfield will be pretty well equipped in the way of pitchers.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The many friends of Mrs. James H. Olly of Arlington avenue will be sorry to learn of her serious illness.

RUSSELL SAGE, JR., DEAD.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Russell Sage, jr., died at the Windsor Hotel at 11:15 this morning.

He was taken ill several weeks ago with meningitis, complicated with other ailments.

Later Bright's disease of the kidneys set in, and all hope of his recovery was abandoned.

He became unconscious the early part of last week and had remained in a comatose condition ever since.

Russell Sage, jr., was the nephew of the well-known financier of that name, and would have been his heir had he lived.

COUNSELOR MARSH REPLIES.

No Contempt of Court to Repeal the Water-works and Sewerage Ordinances.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—From a communication in yesterday's PRESS the following quotation is extracted:

"These repealing ordinances drafted by the corporation counsel, are in direct variance with the legal advice given by him to the council of 1891. He then said that if the council attempted to take action of any nature on questions that were in the courts that they would be liable and undoubtedly be proceeded against for contempt."

The writer of the above probably tried to tell the truth, but he would better try harder next time. Judges and lawyers are often amused at the shape which a legal proposition assumes after being filtered through the mind of a layman. The process in the present instance has produced the grotesque.

I have often advised that to enforce an ordinance would be a contempt of court: I have never advised that to repeal an ordinance would be a contempt of court.

Feb. 4, 1892. CRAIG A. MARSH.

Maxims for Plainfield Commuters.

It is better to let the heels of your shoes go unblackened than to miss a train.

When you have invested in accident insurance policies, the accident always happens to some other train than the one in which you are traveling.

Late to bed and early to rise will shorten the road to your home in the skies.

Always try to eat at least one meal each week with your family. It keeps up the acquaintance and conduces to sociability.

Late trains are not unmixed evils. Sometimes you start to the station with a few minutes to spare, intending to travel on the 9 o'clock train, and are just in time to catch the 8 o'clock train, which has come along 55 minutes late.

Be not deceived by ecstatic visions of rapid transit from your home to the station. It will not come in your day.

When you give up your seat in a crowded car to a young woman and she thanks you for it, control your surprise. It is impolite to stare in astonishment at a young woman who is unused to the ways of suburban travel.

A Great Success at the Brooklyn Academy.

The New York World says: "There was a brilliant gathering at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, last night, the occasion being the Ovide Musin concert. Rarely has a more fashionable audience been seen within the walls of the Academy. The musical programme, which was furnished by M. Ovide Musin and his excellent company, was thoroughly enjoyed by the large and brilliant audience. M. Musin gave his best, including his own Caprice No. 1, the "Meistersinger" arrangement by Wilhelmj, and Paganini's prayer and variations de bravura from "Moses", on the G string. M. Musin played with his usual brilliancy and the splendid warmth of tone characteristic of his work. He also played the instrumental part of the Artot Air Varie, for soprano and violin, to Mme. Tanner's singing.

North Plainfield Means Business.

Last night's borough meeting concerning the Peace street extension project was well attended. The subscription committee was enlarged, and a report was made by the committee and adopted by the meeting favoring immediate action in the matter. A spirit of progress has been aroused, and at a meeting next Monday night definite action will probably be taken.

—The Plaquemines Tropical Fruit company, organized in the State of New Jersey, has purchased recently the Pacard plantation of 32 000 acres in Plaquemines Parish, just below New Orleans, and purposes engaging in the cultivation of lemons, bananas, and other tropical fruits that have never been grown in Louisiana. It is a singular fact that a few years ago this tract of land was only 1 300 acres in extent; sediment from the Mississippi's tide has made it what it is to-day.

PRESENTMENT OF BATTLE ROW.

Investigating Men and Women Find a Deplorable State of Affairs, and Insist on a Janitor for Plainfield's Poor-house.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I inclose a copy of the report of the visit to Plainfield made last week by our committee, with the hope that the suggestions which it contains may meet with your approval, and may find a place in your paper.

CAROLINE ALEXANDER,
Chairman of the committee on almshouses of the State Charities Aid association.

CASTLE POINT, HOBOKEN, Feb. 2, 1892.

Several members of the standing committee on alms-houses of the State Charities Aid association of New Jersey, with Mrs. Williamson, the general secretary of the association, visited, on the 27th of January, the row of houses in Plainfield known as "Battle Row", and rented by the city for the occupation of the poor. The row consists of apartments of two rooms each, of which a number were unoccupied. The general condition of the buildings was one of dilapidation, filth and vermin abounding. A great deal of this was owing to the lack of care of the occupants, which was proved by the fact that the rooms of an old colored woman (Mrs. Manning) were clean and pleasant, but the authorities are responsible for the terrible condition of the buildings themselves. The ceilings in the upper floors are so low that proper ventilation is impossible, and in some rooms the walls are almost denuded of plaster. One of the great evils of these buildings is the indiscriminate hoarding under one roof of men, women and children without anyone to place restrictions on their intercourse. It is the opinion of the committee that the present state of affairs will continue as long as these under the care of the city are allowed to live without proper supervision.

The occupants of "Battle Row" can be divided into two classes: those who are capable of self-support and who ought not to be a charge on the tax-payers, and those who through age or infirmity cannot support themselves. The latter should be provided for by the city in a properly-appointed alms-house, whose discipline would render them more respectable, clean and moral.

The present deplorable state of affairs is the necessary effect of the present system. It is a well-known fact that the most model tenement house that is without a janitor with sufficient authority to enforce certain rules and regulations, will soon degenerate and be dragged down to the level of its occupants. There can be but one result when persons of the class who generally people our alms-houses are housed and supported by the city under the present arrangement where unrestricted liberty must soon turn into license.

General Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association of New Jersey.

Just like clock-work—that's the way your whole system moves along, when Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets have put it in order. That's what they're made for—to regulate the system as well as cleanse and renovate it.

These are the original Little Liver Pills, tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules; mild and gentle in their action, but thorough and effective—no pain, no griping. One little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

They're the smallest, easiest, and best to take—and the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

Can you ask more or better proof of the superiority of these little pills?

These lectures are to be held at the Casino. Some of the lectures are to illustrated by a stereopticon, and tickets have been placed in the hands of the directors for sale and also with Miss Adams at the library building, where anyone may get them.

Bad Results of a Slight Accident

The recent accident to Charles Boice, one of Dunellen's oldest citizens, proved to be much more serious than was first anticipated. While walking from the Plainfield station he slipped and fell, striking his face on the iron fence, causing a very severe wound. Mr. Boice did not think he was very badly hurt at first, but when his friends got him home he took a turn for the worse. Erysipelas of the brain set in, and he was unconscious for two days.

He is some better now, and it is hoped that he may soon recover.

A New Map of Plainfield.

F. A. Dunham, civil engineer, who has been engaged for some time on a new map of this city, is now pushing the work to its final completion and is including all changes which have occurred during the past year. All owners of property, whether prospective purchasers of the map or not, are cordially invited by him to call and examine the map, and to make any suggestions as to the lotting up of their property, that may occur to them, or give notice of recent changes of ownership.

BY THE WAY.

—A regular monthly business meeting of the Reform club will be held to night at 7:45. A full attendance is desired.

—The Crescent League bowlers defeated the Fanwoods on the latter's alleys, last night, by the score of 790 to 767. Lyman rolled 196.

—All boys and girls are cordially invited to the Loyal Temperance Legion in the Y. W. C. T. U. rooms, corner of Peace street and North avenue, to-morrow afternoon at 4.

—Under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of Warren mission, a dime entertainment will be held this evening at 8. The committee in charge have arranged a pleasing programme for the occasion.

—The Westfield bowlers were defeated on their own alleys, last night, by the Americas. The score was 802 to 719. Earlier in the season the Westfields won on the America's alleys by the score of 817 to 797.

—Mayor Grant, Comptroller Myers, and Chamberlain Crain, of New York, have added the Market and Fulton Bank, of which Alex Gilbert, Mayor of this city, is cashier, to those in which New York's money is deposited. The rate of interest will remain 2½ per cent.

—Seymour G. Smith's hand—despite the efforts of all the best surgeons in the country and a number of painful operations—is no better, and he fears now he may have to have it amputated. The beginning of the trouble was merely a sprain while bowling, but since then the bones in the back of the hand are decaying rapidly.

—Those who have been so fortunate as to be favored with some of the luscious oranges from Kelly & Campbell's Crescent Grove in Florida, that Ellis Campbell is distributing among his friends, have enjoyed the richest fruit that ever grew in any country. Those sent to THE PRESS are all gone long ago, but the staff can taste them yet.

—Bitter feeling is still rife among some of the firemen concerning the alleged disregard of their petition asking that J. Erwin Waters be continued as first assistant engineer. Last night a committee was appointed to wait on the mayor in reference to the matter. The committee is to ask if he ever received the petition in Water's favor, or if it was diverted from reaching him. Action further than this was postponed.

Probably Only a VanZandt by Marriage.

An effort was made in all the New York papers, this morning, to connect Carlyle Harris, the wife-murderer, with a Charles Harris who 12 years ago had married and deserted a Lulu VanZandt who at one time lived at Plainfield, Conn.

A PRESS reporter interviewed the VanZandt family, of this city, in relation to the story, but they were unable to shed any light on it. A cousin of the late Thaddeus VanZandt named Egbert, had, it was remembered, left a young daughter years ago named Lulu, whose subsequent career the VanZandt family know nothing of.

Fanwood's Favorite Tenor.

Musical circles in Fanwood have been delighted of late with frequent favors by Col. Charles K. Moore, whose sweet high tenor voice is the pride of Quality Hill. DOMINIE DILL DISFIGURED.

A Gasoline Explosion Mars His Beauty, But He Comes up for Trial in Good Spirits.

The New Jersey Presbyters, after a ten days' respite, assembled again at Morristown yesterday, and continued in a leisurely sort of way the trial of the Rev. A. C. Dill, former pastor of the Stirling Presbyterian church, who is charged with saying immoral things in conversation and with improper conduct and untruthfulness.

The appearance of the Rev. Mr. Dill, though it was the result of a serious accident, was the occasion for unrestrained hilarity. In spite of a radiant narcissus in his buttonhole and his scrupulously neat attire, he presented but a sorry caricature of his former self. Old "Aunt" Catharine Boyle, with whom Mr. Dill lives in Stirling, was taken ill with pnuemonia, and on Saturday night the gasoline stove in her room exploded when Mr. Dill was standing over it. As a consequence, his eyebrows are missing, his silky moustache is singed to a stubble, and his scalded upper lip is so puffed out as to interfere seriously with his fluent speech. Even this, however, did not prevent the young pastor from displaying his usual good spirits and joking with his counsel about his recent misfortune.

No sooner had the session been called to order in the morning than the question of the newspapers' reports of the secret proceedings, which has been a constant source of worriment to the Presbytery, was brought up for renewed discussion. Mr. Dill himself was called to the stand, as an object of suspicion, and asked whether he had not furnished information to the reporters.

"How was it, Mr. Dill,"—asked one of the Presbyters when Mr. Dill had answered in the negative—"that even your own testimony on the last day of the trial got out to the papers?"

"If you remember"—replied Mr. Dill with a smile—"I frequently gazed at the ceiling when I was giving my testimony. I was thinking at the time that perhaps some reporters were concealed in the loft of the chapel."

At this a committee of the Presbytery was straightway appointed to examine the loft and the cellar in search of concealed reporters. The session was suspended meanwhile. In a short time the committee returned with the announcement that they had searched the cellar and the loft with great care, but had found no reporters.

Considerable further testimony was given about the clergyman's immoral conduct. No sooner had it all been concluded than a new wrangle began among the Presbytery about the right of voting. According to the Book of Discipline if a member of the Presbytery is absent from a session during a trial he forfeits his right to vote. In this long-protracted Dill trial, however, the number of Presbyters that have been absent from a session is very large. The question was whether, in view of the circumstances, they should be allowed to vote by a suspension of the rules. The meeting adjourned before any decision was reached.

The case for both sides has now been presented. Three weeks will be allowed for the printing of the testimony, and the next meeting will be held on Feb. 24, when it is thought the verdict will be reached.

New Club-house for Westfield.

At a meeting of the directors of the Westfield Athletic association, Tuesday evening, the offer of the Westfield Investment and Improvement company of their lot on Elm street for $2,500 cash was formally accepted. No conditions were attached to the sale except that the club-house proposed to be erected should contain a hall capable of seating five hundred people. The papers will be signed to-day.

Plans are already under consideration, and work will be begun soon. The design calls for a building with spacious parlors, smoking room, billiard rooms, etc., entirely separate, with bowling alleys, hall, and all the accessories that go to make up a first-class, modern club-house. The structure will be one of the handsomest of the kind in this part of the country. It is to be ready for occupancy by October 1.

Nearly $2,000 has been subscribed for the purchase of the lot, and the remainder will probably be raised within a few hours. The funds for the erection of the building, it will be remembered, have been already provided by one of Westfield's most generous and public-spirited citizens.

The W. A. C. have just cause for congratulation in the extremely favorable outlook which seems to be theirs at the present; and THE PRESS concurs with The Leader in the feeling that no one man, perhaps, has greater cause to feel satisfaction therewith than C. D. Codding, to whose persistent zeal and intelligent efforts, the high position of the club is largely due.

Preparing for a Turnfest.

Delegates of the Independent Turn Verein of Elizabeth, the National Turn Verein of Newark, the Independents of Plainfield, the Gowanus and the Young Men Verein of Brooklyn, met in Elizabeth Sunday, and decided to hold a Union Turnfest in the spring. The place was not determined on.

Oh! ye who teach the ingenious youth of our great nation, let them learn the noble art of self-defense, as Salvation Oil is the specific for hurts.

Little Annie yesterday told us, in her way, what a good medicine Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is; it had cured her of a very severe cold.

A Charming Monthly Visitor from the West.

The Overland Monthly for February is a very attractive magazine in its new cover, which is still familiarly like the old one, but with a more artistic and unique character. Its contents are beautifully and profusely illustrated, especially the leader, an account by Prof. Geo. Davidson of the great exploit of the Coast Survey in occupying the all but inaccessible tip of Mt. Conness for a signal station, a year and a half ago. They actually built and have kept up an observatory on a summit barely big enough to hold it, reached by crawling across a knife-edge of rock, a few inches wide, with a thousand feet precipice on either side. Professor Davidson's descriptions and illustrations, from photographs taken by the survey, show how the achievement of carrying lumber, the great theodolite and other valuable instruments, camp equipments, etc., thither, and getting the needed observations, was carried through.

Camping with Fox Hounds in Southern California, and An American Tin Mine, are also finely illustrated and very readable articles. The account of the mine, by Judge Knight, is a very clear and authoritative statement, from official and confidential figures, of the status of the much discussed mine of San Jacinto.

The magazine has a stirring story of A Night Ride in Apache land; another story is a pretty Hawaiian legend, The Stone Maiden; and other stories, poems, and sketches, make up a most interesting number. The Overland is a most charming monthly visitor from the west. It is published in San Francisco at the reduced price of $3 a year.

An Inland Waterway Across New Jersey.

The Engineers' club of Philadelphia is considering the problem of an inland waterway to connect the Atlantic Coast cities. The idea was originally suggested by Capt. Spencer S. McCorkle of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey in a paper which he read before the club last April. Subsequently a committee was appointed to formulate a plan, and this committee at a meeting a few days ago decided to request the boards of trade of Atlantic Coast cities to join in a memorial to Congress asking for an appropriation towards the expenses of a survey of the route proposed. Briefly, the waterway, which is to begin at New York and end at Charleston, would pass through Raritan Bay and up the Raritan River to New Brunswick, through the Raritan and Delaware Canal to Bordentown, down the Delaware River to Delaware City, through the Delaware and Chesapeake Canal to Chesapeake Bay, down this bay to Norfolk, Va., from Portsmouth (opposite Norfolk) up Southern River and through the Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal, North Landing River, Currituck Sound, a short canal and the North River into Albemarle and Pamlico Sounds; and thence through Core Sound to Beaufort and Moorehead City, N. C.; thence by sheltered inlets, on which some work would be required, to Cape Fear River, N. C., and from this point by a series of streams and bays and sheltered inlets, aided by canals, existing and contemplated, to Charleston, S. C. This land-locked route would be for light-draft vessels, and no doubt would be the means of giving a great impetus to local trade between neighboring cities.

Facts About the Firemen.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Concerning Mayor Gilbert's recent appointment of first assistant fire engineer, permit me to say that the statement is not true that a majority of the Plainfield firemen signed a petition asking that Erwin Waters be retained. As a matter of fact the majority of the firemen, including every man in one whole company, refused to sign. THE PRESS is right as usual in saying that the mayor was convinced that two-thirds of the firemen wanted Martin. AN OLDER FIREMAN.

ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY.

W. J. Arkell, publisher of Judge and Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, writes:

"JUDGE BUILDING,
Cor. Fifth Ave. and Sixteenth St.,
NEW YORK, January 14, 1891.

"About three weeks since, while suffering from a severe cold which had settled on my chest, I applied an ADLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER, and in a short time obtained relief.

"In my opinion, these plasters should be in every household, for use in case of coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, or pains of any kind. I know that in my case the results have been entirely satisfactory and beneficial."

"Seeing is Believing."

And a good lamp must be simple; when it is not simple it is not good. Simple, Beautiful, Good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only, it is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.

Look for this stamp—THE ROCHESTER. If the lamp dealer hasn't the genuine Rochester, and the style you want, send to us for our new illustrated catalogue, and we will send you a lamp safely by express—your choice of over 2,000 varieties from the Largest Lamp Store in the World.

BACK NUMBER DUDES.

They Were Just as Silly as the Modern Chappie.

Louis XIV. and His Toilet—A Dandy of Cromwell's Time—Beau Brummell and Beau Nash—The Love for Gaudy Wearing Apparel.

[Special Letter.]

WHAT the subject of personal adornment is a time-worn theme, is shown by the accompanying little sketch from an ancient English work, which stood above this stanza:

"I am an Englishman, and naked I stand here,
Musinge in my mynde what raiment I shall were.
Now I will were this, and now I were that,
Now I will were I cannot tell what."

The popularly accepted definition of the term dude is a male individual whose abilities concentrate upon dress. The partial injustice of this is attested by the number of those historical characters who, while noted for great attention to their attire, have shown marked powers in other lines of effort. Alexander, of Macedon, for example, was an exquisite of the first water; few great generals in fact have been slovens.

Louis XIV. was one of the most thoroughy dandies ever known. Even when forced to wear the mourning dress of violet velvet which court etiquette prescribed. he took care to cover his garments so effectually with jewels that the color of the material could not be seen. An account of the ceremonies attending his morning toilet is laughable in the light of our modern American life. We read of one set of high dignitaries after another being admitted to the royal chamber; one party to witness the sublime ceremony of assuming the shirt; one great lord being permitted to draw on the august silken stocking, another presenting a collection of wigs for his majesty to choose from, while still another enjoyed the privilege of carrying away the slippers. A throng of less-favored courtiers stood meanwhile in awe-struck silence to witness these thrilling scenes.

One of Thackeray's most amusing caricatures shows the old king shorn of his ambrosial periwig, his high-heeled shoes and robe, embroidered with fleurs-de-lis. By his side stands the same figure decked out in all the royal plumage. The first is only little bald, plain, insignificant Louis Capet. The second, Louis plus his clothes—Le Grand Monarque!

But even granting the luxurious Frenchman to have been unduly devoted to self adornment, we must admit that the fashions he set were artistic and graceful. Enough so, at least, to have been since revived from time to time; reappearing now in a waistcoat, now in a ruffle, or again in the decoration of a room, as in the case at the present time. The same cannot be said of the attire worn by English "anticke" of the Restoration period.

This gay youth was clad in a fashion which roused the indignation of the satirists, one of whom declared it impossible to know from men's appearance "who is noble, who is worshipful, who is a gentleman, who is not;" adding, with due solemnity: "God be merciful unto us." The lace ruffles strengthened by "the devil's liquor, starche," make this zealous saint absolutely boil over with wrath; while nothing gave him more righteous joy in those umbrellaless days than to behold his dressy enemy saturated in a sudden shower.

The fop in question, Sir Percy Westbrooke, let us read his name, when he went abroad, wore a tall hat with a bunch of ribbon on one side and a drooping plume upon the other; his face was spotted with patches; a lovelock on each side of his head hung upon his bosom and was tied with ribbon bows. His broad collar was edged with lace; he wore a tight vest partly open and short in the waist, with his shirt protruding above his breeches. The latter garment was adorned with dozens of points at the knees, besides two great bunches of ribbon of various colors. His legs were encased in wide lace-trimmed boots provided with jingling spurs and having the toes two inches too long. On his left arm he carried his cloak, and in his right hand a stick, which he "played with," as he "straddled" along the streets, "singing."

The straddling was necessary. A character in a well-known old play complains: "One of my silver spurs catched hold of the ruffle of my boot, which being of Spanish leather and subject to tear, overthrew me." They therefore "walked wide" to prevent accidents.

A very serious matter was a gentleman's toilet, in those times; so serious that it grew tiresome to the wearers, who, after becoming sobered by the plague, the great fire and other calamities, dropped one ribbon and yard of lace after another, until they could safely take their minds from their boots and hats and walk about intent upon their business. Let us hope upon their behavior also, for the "pretty fellow" under the Stuarts was pretty only in respect to feathers and velvet doublet. His language was coarse, his manners coarser, his vices coarsest of all.

When the prince regent was posing as the "first gentleman of Europe," the dress of a dandy was a matter of constant study and care. "In black velvet breeches he put all his riches." His heavily-scented garments shed the fragrance of musk and orange-flower water upon the air. The macaroni of a later day was accustomed to carry two watches, which seldom agreed; "one to tell him," as Walpole said, "what o'clock it was, and the other what it was not."

At this period there lived two beaux, one of whom Lord Byron called the greatest of the three great men of the nineteenth century; placing himself third, Napoleon second and Beau Brummell first.

Possibly Byron was correct in one sense, Brummell was as great in his own line as the Corsican was in his. Both rose from obscurity by unlimited self-assurance, and it may have required as much administrative power to subjugate the arrogant though disordered British society, as to take the lead of the French at a time when they were fairly crying for a leader. One of Brummell's defenders declares "he was no fop, but merely the best dressed man of his day. We would all have dressed like him if we could." This statement may be considered along with the fact that, the Beau never removed his hat even to a lady, as it might have disarranged the hairs of his wig, and besides might not have been replaced in the same exact position. His boots, which he blacked with champagne, were always polished on the bottom of the sole. All are familiar with his famous snub of the prince of Wales, when he audibly inquired upon the prince's bowing to his companion and ignoring Brummell: "Ah, who's your fat friend?"

Beau Nash, the McAllister of the past, was styled "King of Bath." He was the son of a humble glassblower, but rose, by the power of impudence and a fine coat, to a position which enabled him to refuse Princess Amelia another dance and to snatch off the white apron of a duchess, with the remark that only kitchen maids wore aprons.

Neither Brummell nor Nash had the sense to die soon enough; but while the former ended his days in slovenly poverty and imbecility at Calais, Nash was more fortunate. He was claimed by death ("and much good it got of him,") says his biographer, at the good old age of eighty-eight, having retained his sway so well that he was thought worthy of a grand funeral at the expense of the corporation.

EMMA M. S. MCDOWELL.

LOVE IN POVERTY.

Another Evidence of the Fact That Thorns Do Grow on Mistletoe.

She was sweet looking and had considerable style about her, but the quality of her clothes indicated that her purse was not plethoric. She seemed out of her element in a jewelry store and as the clerk set out before her a tray of gold-plated cuff buttons and gave her the prices, she looked appealing at him and said:

"I don't know much about these things and I would like you to help me make a selection. Tell me what you would like."

"What I would like? Well, now, I think I would like to have a pair like these," and he reached into the case and brought out a pair of solid gold with a very small diamond in the center.

"What are they worth?" she said.

The price was far beyond her means.

"Yes, they are very pretty," and then she turned her eyes on the tray that contained the cheaper class.

"You see, those are rather common," he said, "not the thing for a present."

"Thank you," she replied, "I am very much obliged to you and sorry to have put you to so much trouble. If I don't see anything I like better I will come back."

As she went out she had a very disappointed look on her face, and I wondered whether her sweetheart would fail to get a Christmas token of love from her just because a man incapable of appreciating a present from any standpoint except intrinsic value had led her to believe that all men were like himself.—St. Louis Post Dispatch

Many a man who formerly possessed a powerful physique, and strong, steady nerves, wonders at his feeling of weakness, dullness, exhaustion. There is an extremely nervous condition, a dull, cloudy sensation, disagreeable feelings in head and eyes, bad taste in mouth mornings, the vision becomes dim, memory is impaired, and there is frequent dizziness, despondency and depression of mind. The nerves become so weakened that the least shock will flush the face or bring on a trembling with palpitation.

Luckily, there is the great and wonderful restorative, Dr. Greene's Nervura, which will give back to the weakened and exhausted systems the strength it has lost imparts vigor to brain and nerves, vitalizes and invigorates the physical powers, dispels despondency and restores again that grand degree of lusty strength and power which in ignorance or folly we have exhausted. Druggists sell it, $1. Purely vegetable and harmless. "Try it and you will never regret it."

"I deem it my duty to the public to state the wonderful effects of Dr. Greene's Nervura in my case. My improvement has been most gratifying, and language cannot describe the change in my feelings and prospects. 'Where all was gloom and despondency, there is now light and hope.' I gained 13 pounds, and am still gaining. Not alone myself, but I know many others who can testify to the merits of Dr. Greene's Nervura.

CRANKDOM INVADED

No Longer Monopolized By the Sterner Sex.

FAIR WOMAN TAKES A HAND.

Instead of Dynamite She Wields an Umbrella With Deadly Precision.

Says She Owns the Building of the Manhattan Club, New York, and Demands Toll from Members—If She Is Refused She Promptly Jabs the Offending Person With Her Umbrella—Her Wrath Said to Have Fallen on ex-President Cleveland and Others.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The crank industry which has so long been monopolized by unshaven men with suspicious looking black satchels, has at last been invaded by a woman.

Like the men, she wants money, and she has exhibited an astonishing amount of bravado in calling attention to her demands.

Her base of operations is upon the marble steps of the magnificent building occupied by the Manhattan Club, at Thirty-fourth street and Fifth avenue, famous as the home of the millionaire merchant, A. T. Stewart.

She stands in front of the Manhattan Club almost every night between 8 and 9 o'clock.

An experience which one an Assistant District-Attorney had is typical of others.

He started to go up the marble steps when the woman, who was standing at the foot, said: "Hold on, sir; you cannot go in there without paying me."

The lawyer turned and looked at the speaker, who held out her hand for money. He continued up the steps and she chased him and jabbed him in the back with an umbrella.

"This is my house," declared the woman, brandishing her umbrella threateningly, "and I ought to be in there instead of on the steps. If I cannot have possession of my mansion, nobody else shall go in unless I am paid something for the privilege."

The woman declared that she was one of the heirs of the Stewart estate.

She said that she had endeavored several times to gain possession of the house, but had been driven off by the attendants.

"A. T. Stewart left me the house and I am going to have it, or else charge for admission to it," declared the woman.

It is reported that such eminent Manhattan Club members as ex-Mayor W. R. Grace, William M. Ivins and ex-President Grover Cleveland were threatened with the woman's umbrella in case they did not pay an admission fee.

One of the club porters said yesterday: "We have driven the woman away a dozen times, but she comes back, rain or shine, and takes up a position near the steps. We have regarded her as harmless heretofore, and did not care to have her arrested. Now that she has become so bold as to strike members with her umbrella, some action will have to be taken.

In appearance the woman is ladylike and refined.

When she begins to talk about her supposed ownership of the Stewart mansion she becomes excited and voluble, and raises her voice to a high pitch.

JOHN L.'S LATEST.

While on a Spree He Interrupts Stuart Robson's Performance.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 5.—John L. Sullivan, the pugilist-actor, is in this city with his company. He has been on a big spree over since arriving in the city.

The big champion, having surrendered to Bacchus, left the Broadway Theatre, where he was acting, and visted the theatre where Stuart Robson was holding forth.

Sullivan fought his way into the stage in the midst of a scene and, seizing Robson's hand, exclaimed: "Shake with 'Honest Hearts and Willing Hands.'"

As the audience "caught on" they applauded loudly, and Sullivan started to make his little speech, but was removed by stage hands.

Charged With Stealing $500.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—Philip Lessert, alias Frank Lachinsky, aged 39 years, was arrested in this city last night on the strength of a telegram from Police Inspector Byrnes, of New York. Lessert is charged with stealing $500 from Simon Brooks. Inspector Byrnes was notified of the capture and Lessert will be held to await a requisition.

For the Late Justice Bradley's Seat.

ALTOONA, Pa., Feb. 5.—The members of the Blair County Bar Association have unanimously indorsed a petition to President Harrison to appoint the Hon. Edward M. Paxton, chief justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, to the position on the United States Supreme Bench made vacant by the death of Justice Bradley.

Robbed of All He Possessed.

CAMDEN, N. J., Feb. 5.—It is now said that "Spider" Anderson, the colored jockey, who was acquitted yesterday of the charge of the murder of "Buddy" Robinson, was robbed of all he possessed while imprisoned, and that his horses were sold at ridiculous figures by his partner, who has fled to Texas.

THE SENIOR MURDER.

Two More Witnesses for the Prosecution—Lentz Undisturbed.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 5.—The investigation of Detective Cosgrove in the Millburn murder, has resulted in the statement that a farmer who lives near Millburn and who was acquainted with Lentz, saw the latter as he was driving home on Saturday night, at 5 o'clock, passing through Irvington. He offered to give Lentz a ride, but he declined.

Another clew was obtained from a man who knew Lentz by sight, and who saw him get on a Pennsylvania Railroad train at the Chestnut street station on Sunday afternoon before 4 o'clock. He had his overcoat tightly buttoned. Both these men are to be used by the prosecution.

A peculiar feature of the investigation was revealed yesterday by Dr. Wrightson. When Lentz was captured he wore a blue flannel shirt, but in his trunk at Daniel Daisy's in Orange, which was searched, there were none other than white linen shirts found. The report that Dr. Polhemus, of Milburn, had found some pieces of Lentz's clothing in the Senior house proved to be unfounded.

Conrad Schlosser, the saloon keeper's son, still holds to his original statement that Lentz was in the saloon on Springfield avenue at 11 o'clock on Sunday night, the hour which the New York hotel clerk says he was in 5 New Chambers street. Schlosser says also that Lentz fell asleep in a chair and had to be awakened. This is confirmed by another bartender in the same saloon.

Lentz still maintains his cool demeanor and eats his meals with zest. He does not appear to be at all perturbed.

The Men of the Abandoned Florida Reported to be on a British Steamer.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The White Star line steamer Britannic, Capt. Smith, from New York, Jan. 27, for Liverpool, has arrived at Queenstown.

She reports that on Feb. 2 she signalled the British steamer Victoria, Capt. Gray, from Philadelphia, Jan. 19, for Hamburg. The latter vessel reported that she had on board the crew of the Norwegian bark Florida, Capt. Ellefsen, from Pascagoula, Dec. 21, for Dordrecht.

The Florida is the vessel whose crew shortly after leaving Pascagoula mutinied, compelling the captain to put into Havana. There the Norwegian Consul instructed the captain to place the crew in irons and procure a new set of men to work the vessel to Dordrecht. This was done and the vessel proceeded.

The next heard of the Florida was that she was seen abandoned. Some of her sails were set and she was slowly sailing along, a menace to navigation.

She had sustained some little damage, but those who saw her say that it was not apparently such as would warrant her abandonment.

Won on a Foul.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Feb. 5.—A fight of eleven rounds occurred in a barn near Wappingers Falls, Dutchess county, between George Wright, the Canadian light-weight champion, and George Strong of California. Wright frequently disregarded the Queensbury rules, under which the battle was to be fought, by fouling Strong, and after repeated warnings, referee George A. Bunnell, of the Pastime Athletic Club, awarded the fight to Strong in the eleventh round on a foul. Considerable money changed hands on the result, as Wright had been a favorite in the betting which was one hundred to sixty.

Osborne is reported to have said that his wife is full of courage and would endure such punishment as the courts might inflict without flinching or shirking. She would be content if the penalty did not exceed one year.

ABDUCTORS IN COURT

Arraigned Before Judge Hoyt at Greenwich, Conn.

M'CANN PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

Waterbury and Sutherland Held to Appear in the Superior Court.

John McCann Turns State's Evidence—As the Extreme Penalty in Connecticut for Kidnapping is Only Three Years, Efforts Will Be Made to Have the Abductors Extradited and Taken to New York, Where It is Fifteen Years—A Great Crowd Witness the Preliminary Proceedings.

GREENWICH, Conn., Feb. 5.—Charles E. Waterbury, arch plotter in the conspiracy to kidnap Ward Waterbury, his little cousin, together with John McCann and Samuel Sutherland, his fellow-plotters, were arraigned before Judge Hoyt, in this town.

Waterbury was captured by Constables O'Neil and Fillick. He made no resistance.

Later Waterbury and McCann, who has turned State's evidence, handcuffed together, were taken to the room in Waterbury's house which the kidnapped boy identified as the one in which he was kept. John McCann admitted that it was the room in which he and Waterbury had kept the boy. Waterbury vehemently denied any complicity in the crime, but when McCann repeated his story, weakened and said: "Well, seeing as he's squealed, I suppose I did it." In the room were found a false beard and mustache.

A great crowd clamored for admittance to the little room in which the preliminary hearing was held. McCann pleaded "not guilty." Waterbury refused to say anything. He was represented by Lawyer James Mead.

The first witness was Constable John Dayton, who heard McCann's confession which implicated Sutherland.

The latter, however, had not been an active participant in the kidnapping. Constable Fitzroy said that Waterbury had admitted being the author of the note demanding $6,000 ransom. Ward Waterbury, the abducted boy, told the story of his adventures as already published.

Waterbury was held to appear before the criminal part of the Superior Court in Bridgeport on February 16. McCann was held for the same court, but Sutherland was held in $5,000 bail to appear in the court at Greenwich.

District Attorney Platt, of White Plains, N. Y., has issued subpœnas for Charles E. Waterbury, his wife and the abducted boy to appear before the grand jury. If indictments are found an application will be made to the Governor of Connecticut for the extradition of Waterbury and McCann. In Connecticut the extreme penalty for kidnapping is three years, but in New York it is fifteen years.

FITZSIMMONS WILL DIE.

The Desperate Act of the Murderer of Detective Gilkinson.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 5.—Murderer Fitzsimmons, who recently killed Detective Gilkinson and made a remarkable escape from the Allegheny County jail, cut his throat in the parish prison here yesterday and will die. Detectives were to have started with Fitzsimmons for Pittsburg last night.

Fitzsimmons left a letter addressed to C. H. Fitzsimmons, William Fitzsimmons and the "Times-Democrat" and "Picayune." In it he states that the sunny South and the Crescent City are pleasant recollections to him.

He made his first visit here fifteen years ago, and has never found the citizens other than charitable and humane.

He says that the last year of his existence was of a lamentable character, and that he has pursued crime, which has placed his liberty in jeopardy.

Preferring death to imprisonment, he made up his mind to kill himself, which would prevent further mental worry and relieve his parents from further disgrace.

He says his wife was improperly convicted at the Allegheny Court House of murder in the second degree through the perjury of a detective and the prejudice of the judge and jury.

He swears, before hurling himself into eternity, that his wife was innocent of the crime she was convicted of, and says he made his escape from the Allegheny County jail because he knew beforehand that he would be convicted.

Thrown Out of Employment by Fire.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 5.—The braiding building of the John A. Roebling Sons & Company wire works was destroyed by fire last night. The building is a three-story brick, and was used for the purpose of putting braid on telephone and electric light wires. The loss on the building and contents is estimated at $140,000. Four hundred people are thrown out of employment by the fire. The cause of the fire is supposed to be spontaneous combustion.

DILL DISCHARGED.

Judge Mayer Takes the Case from the Jury.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 5.—A Clearfield special dispatch says: The trial of President Dill of the First National Bank of Clearfield and of the Houtzdale Bank has come to a sudden ending. From the nature of the evidence Judge Mayer took the case from the jury and ruled that the First National Bank was responsible for the amount of the draft, and that Dill could not be convicted in the light of the evidence adduced.

The Judge directed that a verdict of "not guilty, but pay the costs" be entered on the record and Dill was discharged.

Attorney Snyder then made a motion for Dill's discharge from answering the charges of embezzlement on the ground that two terms of Court had elapsed and no bills of indictment had been found. The order asked for was granted and Dill was discharged on all the Commonwealth cases on the docket in this county.

The depositors of the Clearfield National Bank are much exercised over Judge Mayer's rulings, while the Houtzdale depositors are much elated.

The civil suit to recover the $90,000 by the Houtzdale Bank receivers will be tried next week.

WILL ASK FOR A NEW TRIAL.

Harris' Counsel Believe Their Motion Will Be Favorably Considered.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—On Monday counsel for Carlyle Harris, who was found guilty of poisoning his young wife, Helen Potts, with morphine, will apply for a new trial.

Both Mr. Jerome and Mr. Taylor are confident that their motion will be favorably passed upon, but others who are interested in the case think otherwise. The defence has expended $10,000 in the case, and, it is said, are willing to spend as much more in the attempt to save Harris's life.

Should an appeal be denied, then sentence of death will be passed on the young man who is now anxiously awaiting developments in the Tombs.

The notice of appeal will act as a stay of execution. Should it be argued before the Court of Appeals in April the decision, it is likely, will not be announced until May.

A REIGN OF TERROR

Due to an Organized Gang of Desperadoes.

INCENDIARISM AND MURDER.

White County, Tenn., Patrolled by Property Owners.

Protecting Their Homes From the Torch—Hundreds of Arrests and a Dozen Lynchings—The Martin Boys' Mother Shot Dead by a Mob, and the Sons Thought to Have Been Killed—Suspicious Looking Persons Will Fare Badly—The Whole Section in an Excited State.

GALLATIN, Tenn., Feb. 5.—A reign of terror which has existed for two years in this county, due to the depredations of what appears to be an organized band of barn burners, has again broken out. The hotbed of these criminal operations appeared to be in the neighborhood of Henderson, ten miles from here. In this one vicinity over $100,000 worth of property has been burned. By one of these fires the $10,000 barn of Henry Berry was destroyed with all its contents, including $15,000 worth of blooded stock.

The crimes were generally attributed to the negroes and over one hundred arrests have been made at various times.

The evidence was in most of the cases insufficient to convict the men arrested and they were released, but the mob spirit got in its work. Frayne Haynie was hanged by a mob and four or five dead negroes with bullet holes in their heads, found in the road, were supposed to have lost their lives because they were suspected of complicity in the barn burning.

Almost every week some building has been burned, and the county is agitated from end to end. Recently Andrew Epps, Abe Youree, the Martin boys and eight other "river rats," all white men, were arrested for participation in the crimes, but were acquitted.

The greatest excitement prevailed, and every house owner in the country armed himself.

The second trial came on and the Martin boys and George Arbuckle were cleared, but the sentiment was so strong against them that they fled the country. The convicted men appealed and the court reversed the sentences except in the case of one person.

This only added to the excitement and it reached the danger point when last Tuesday it became known that the Martins boys had again returned.

A mob visited their house and demanded their surrender. This was refused, and when a moment later a head was seen at the window the mob fired. Then it was discovered they had killed the mother of the boys.

They left immediately and the sons, after burying their mother and telling a neighbor what they had done, disappeared. It is said in the neighborhood that they had been overtaken, shot to death and their bodies left in the woods.

The handsome farm house of William Dixey, not far from the Martin home, was burned as the result of an incendiary fire, and four barns also went down before an incendiary's torch.

White County is aroused. Armed men are patrolling every farm and suspicious looking persons will fare badly. There are rumors of several killings, but affairs are in such an excited state that it is not possible to learn the exact facts.

JUSTICE AT LAST.

Judge of Crimes Foster Sentences the Assailants of Our Sailors.

VALPARAISO, Feb. 5.—Judge of Crimes Foster has passed sentence in the Baltimore assault case. The finding of the court is as follows:

Carlos Arena, alias Gomez, sentenced to 540 days' imprisonment for wounding Wm. Turnbull, the coal heaver of the Baltimore, who died of his injuries; 300 days for public disorder, 60 days for carrying a knife and 20 days for giving an assumed name. This makes a total of 920 days.

Jose Abumads sentenced to 320 days' imprisonment for injuring Turnbull.

Frederico Rodriguez sentenced to 140 days' imprisonment for wounding Boatswain's Mate Charles W. Riggin, another of the murdered American seamen, for public disorder and for carrying a knife.

It is held by Judge Foster that the evidence does not show that Rodrigues killed Riggin. On the contrary, it is claimed that Riggin's death was caused by a shot which was fired by some unknown person.

Gomez and Rodrigues, under the Chilian penal code, must pay the families of Turnbull and Riggin damages.

Imagined Himself the Devil's Deputy.

EGBERTON, O., Feb. 5.—Last night Clem Williams, a farm laborer of abnormal strength, became suddenly insane. He imagined he was sent by the devil to scourge the place. For several hours he patrolled the streets, firing frequently at persons he saw at windows. He broke down many doors, smashed windows and committed other depredations before he was caught and secured. It required a dozen strong men to hold him. Many women and children are ill from the awful fright. Williams is now in jail.

How They Differ.

In make up: Most baking powders contain ammonia or alum. Cleveland's does not; not a particle.

It is made of pure cream of tartar and bi-carbonate of soda, with a little flour to keep the strength, nothing else. Cleveland's is wholesome.

In strength: A rounded spoonful of Cleveland's does better work than a heaping spoonful of any other.

A large saving on a year's bakings. Cleveland's leavens most.

In results: Cake made with Cleveland's is fine grained, keeps moist and fresh.

Cleveland's leavens best.

THE SHADOW OF DEATH.

It is Fast Closing Around Murderer McIlvaine.

SING SING, N. Y., Feb. 5.—The shadow of death is fast closing around Murderer McIlvaine. He has but two days more which he can with certainty count upon living.

McIlvaine's bravado has not yet deserted him, and when asked this morning, "How do you feel?" he replied, "Oh, same as usual."

Warden Brown is being deluged with applications for invitations to witness the electrocution, which will probably take place next Monday. Physicians are the most persistent applicants for these invitations.

As the number of witnesses permitted by law is very limited, Warden Brown's position is not an enviable one.

The machinery of death is all ready. It has been kept in order since the quadruple electrocutions last July. The inclosed walk for the witnesses, from the warden's apartments to the death chamber, has not yet been erected, but will be to-day.

Father Creden has begun his daily visits to the doomed man. While he accepts Father Creden's ministrations, his penitence does not impress his keepers. One remark made by McIlvaine just before Martin D. Loppy walked to death is characteristic of his demeanor.

"Well, Loppy," he shouted, "you'll get in hell before I do, anyhow."

McIlvaine is confined in the new part of the condemned-cell building.

Since the week of death was fixed by the court, McIlvaine has not been quite as talkative as before.

YORK, Pa., Feb. 6.—An explosion occurred at the Baker quarries and limekilns at Campbell's Station, this county, yesterday. W. H. Throne of Stoney Brook had his leg broken in two places, and Adam Ream was injured, but not seriously. The explosion startled everybody for miles around.

Anti-Pinkerton Bill Passes the Assembly.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 5.—The Anti-Pinkerton bill just passed by the Assembly, after a long and heated debate, prohibits the hiring of any private detectives by corporations. He had respect and was in sympathy with all laboring men but not with these men.

Every inch above 100 feet must pay an additional insurance rate on the basis of ten cents on the dollar. Chicago has one sixteen-story building and several others are planned.

Cardinal Manning's Will.

Of the large sums received by him, all had been disposed of in charities during his lifetime.

Somerset Clings to the Borough.

[From The Somerville Unionist-Gazette.]

We are glad to see that our contemporary, the Messenger, coincides with the views of THE UNIONIST-GAZETTE in the matter of losing North Plainfield borough. There ought to be no politics in such a matter as his. The welfare of the county should, alone, be considered. Can we afford to lose the revenue of the borough? Is the question for every citizen of Somerset to ask.

A BRILLIANT SOCIAL EVENT.

Ex-Councilman and Mrs. Isaac W. Rushmore Give a Grand Reception at Their Home on West Seventh Street—Those Who Were There.

The handsome home of ex-councilman and Mrs. Isaac W. Rushmore, on West Seventh street, was a scene of gaiety and splendor last evening, when a reception was given to ex-councilman and Mrs. Townsend Rushmore and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rushmore.

It was one of the largest social events of the season, and a vast throng of Plainfield's people were present. Shortly after 8 the guests began to arrive, and by 9 the rooms were all well-filled. During this time Ellis's orchestra discoursed sweet music.

The rooms were very prettily decorated with evergreens and choice flowers, from Denton's Hillside avenue greenhouses. These were neatly arranged so as to present a most attractive appearance.

The young people indulged in dancing, while the older ones enjoyed conversation, in which many small groups were formed. The supper was finely served, and was very elaborate.

JUPITER AND VENUS.

Conjunction of the Planets To-morrow Morning.

Astronomers and the public generally are much interested in the approaching conjunction of Jupiter and Venus, which have been getting nearer and nearer to each other for some time, and at eight minutes past five to-morrow morning will be together. The planets will then be below the horizon, so that they will not be seen in this city. Although the conjunction may not be seen here, their approach to each other has been a source of enjoyment to those who have watched the heavens during the past few days. To-night the planets will be but twenty-one minutes apart, and if it is clear it will repay observers to watch them until they set, which is comparatively early in the evening. Last night they were brilliant, in spite of the light from the moon, and Venus was slightly to the north and west of Jupiter. To-night she will be much nearer, and to-morrow night she will be slightly to the eastward of Jupiter. For several days the spectacle will be a beautiful one.

—At the Seventh day Baptist church, to-morrow, the theme will be "Grieving Divine Love".

Miss Marsh Was the Star of the Evening.

A delightful entertainment was given at Warren mission chapel last evening, when the following programme was rendered:

Singing....Choir
Dialogue
Reading....Miss Susie Marsh of Westfield
Cornet Solo....Dewitt Frazee
Tableau—"Before and after the Explosion"
Recitation....John Voehl
Solo and Chorus—"Tell My Mother Not to Weep"
Dialogue—"Country Cousin"
Recitations....Miss Marsh
Tableau—"Evening Prayer"
Dialogue—"Aunt Betsy's Beaux"
Solo and Chorus—"Write a Love Letter to Your Mother"
Charles Farlee and Choir
Tableau—"Rock of Ages"

The social committee and the friends taking part are to be congratulated upon the success of the entertainment throughout. Special mention is deserving the recitations by Miss Marsh of Westfield, and by John Voehl; also of the closing tableau. The effect of the red light upon the one clinging to the cross and the children surrounding the same was beautiful. Miss Marsh won much applause for her charming recitations, and was clearly the star of the evening.

When North Plainfinld people, their 1 50 per Centage of taxation want to join the Plainfield friends in paying their $2 22 assessments they will probably make these wish known to the Legislature through their natural representatives Hons. Any of the earlier stages of Consumption can be cured. It's a matter of evidence—strong enough and complete enough to warrant the makers of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in promising this:

If it's taken in time and given a fair trial, they'll refund the money in any case where their medicine fails to benefit or cure.

But it's a medicine that doesn't fail; it goes to the root of the trouble. Consumption is developed through the blood, and must be cured in the same way. It's a scrofulous affection of the lungs—a blood-taint. And the surest remedy for Scrofula in all its forms, the most potent blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and flesh-builder known to medical science, is the "Golden Medical Discovery." It cures Scrofula; it cures Consumption; it cures all Bronchial, Throat, and Lung affections, Asthma, Weak Lungs, Severe, Lingering Coughs, and kindred ailments—through the blood.

And if there's no help, there's no pay.

Solving the Dressmaker Problem

The McDowell Co., of 6 West Fourteenth street, New York, are now preparing ladies to use the garment drafting machine so as to enable them to take a position as a cutter or to do their own dressmaking. One can learn to cut two different styles of garments each day and attend the special lessons on basting, finishing, draping, fancy waists, ball costumes, seamless waists, or waists with one, two or three darts, and all the different styles of skirts. By these one is so thoroughly drilled in taking measures and cutting that in ten days or two weeks one will be able to cut any style from a fashion journal. One can enter the class and take her first lesson at any time They have classes forming every day. Each pupil gets one of the famous garment drafting machines. The company will be glad to show ladies through their rooms where they can see the cutters at work and where they can also see just how the finest work is done. The McDowell French fashion journals, "La Mode de Paris", "Album des Modes" and "La Mode", are the finest ever placed before the public. Send for the beautiful February issues.

COUSINS WANT HIS WEALTH.

Contesting the Will of Old Mr. Payntar, Formerly of Plainfield, Who Willed Trinity Church of This City $5,000 but Afterwards Changed His Mind and Left Most of His Money to a Young Wife.

A very eccentric old gentleman was John Goldsmith Payntar, who for many years lived at Hotel Netherwood and at the corner of Park avenue and Sixth street. He accumulated a large fortune, and on his death made bequests to a number of friends and relatives, not forgetting either his favorite charities or his new church. But the Rev. Mr Schenck's church on West Second street, whose trustees had been told by mutual friends that Mr. Payntar had the church down in his will for $5,000, was crossed out before he died.

His wife, Mrs. Mary B. Payntar, is entitled by the terms of his will to the greater part of his estate. Whether she will ever receive it or not is a matter for the courts to decide, as a contest has been brought, and the first hearing is set down for this morning before Surrogate Ransom.

Mr. Payntar was fully seventy years of age and very infirm. He had had several apopletic strokes and was under constant medical treatment. He had been a bachelor and had lived in handsome style in his house in Lexington avenue.

He had not been in active business for about a quarter of a century, his only occupation being to care for his property in New York and Brooklyn. His wealth was variously estimated at from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

MARRIED AFTER MANY YEARS.

Under the circumstances there was great surprise among his acquaintances when it was announced less than a year ago that he had just married Miss Mary Burrill Ellis, of Willsborough, N. Y., who was barely half his age. It was known that he had been engaged to Miss Ellis at one time, perhaps fifteen years ago, as told in THE PRESS, but that engagement had been broken off not long afterward.

He had made arrangements just before the momentous event showing that he expected to remain a celibate. The wedding ceremony took place on February 10, 1890, at Willsborough. He had to consult a physician on the very day of his marriage. Four days later he signed a long and elaborate will in New York. He went to a sanitarium in the interior of the State on June 1. About a fortnight later a codicil was added to the will. The old man died on August 11.

TERMS OF THE WILL.

The will contains thirty-four clauses, and is devoted mainly to bequests ranging from $1,000 to $5,000. Mr. Payntar gave $61,920 25 to the First Presbyterian church of Newtown, L. I., giving directions how the money was to be spent. A new church building should be erected on the site of the present church, but fifteen feet further back from the road, at a cost of $35 500; for the spire $4,000 should be paid, for the windows $550; for the heating apparatus $500; for carpets $500; for cushions $720 and for matting $55.

Detailed directions were given about filling in marshy ground, erecting carriage sheds, putting up monuments, building a stone fence, painting and other things. A special fund was made for keeping the place in repair and arranging the shrubbery and for paying the organist and choir.

A monument was to be erected in memory of the Rev. John Goldsmith, the pastor of the church during Mr. Payntar's boyhood, and other monuments for deceased relatives.

Other bequests included $5,000 to the Manhattan Working Girls' society and to the Bethany Day Nursery. Several pieces of real estate, in addition to the entire residue, after paying the bequests, were specifically given to Mrs. Payntar. The executors appointed were Edwin S Gorham, of Stamford, Conn., and Abraham Marshall Hyatt, of No. 163 West Seventy-third street, New York city.

By the terms of his codicil Mr. Payntar made several additional bequests; among others one of $2,000 to his lawyer, Oliver J. Wells.

The contestants, who are represented by counselors Mooney & Shipman, of Temple Court, and Charles Blandy, are John E. Payntar, Amanda J. Payntar, Catharine E. Wood, Mary Helen Pierce and Charity M. Morris, who are all cousins of the old man.

Too Late to Save the Clergyman.

Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon, now at Mentone, is gradually recovering from his long and serious illness.

In view of the fact that Spurgeon died Sunday night, it is deplored that the Courier's health editor failed to rise to the occasion earlier, and get in his convalescence business last week.

DROVE THROUGH THE FIRE OF THE MOB.

Interesting and Exciting Incidents in the Career of Senator Keys.

Somerset county's senator, William J. Keys, occupies two entire pages of the biographical department of the recently-published Legislative Manual. The story is an interesting one, and in reading it Mr. Keys's political opponents cannot help admiring the senator for his excellent qualities of head and heart, while his many friends in this section will read it with great pleasure:

Senator Keys was born at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., April 13, 1838. His father was one of the original builders of the old Hudson River railroad. At the age of thirteen the present senator found employment in New York city, where he remained for a number of years. He was an active member of the old volunteer fire department and served for eleven years.

During the war Mr. Keys, through the recommendations of the Hon. Horatio Seymour and Gen. John A. Dix, was awarded the contract for hauling and delivering the supplies, provisions, etc., for the eastern department. Chester A. Arthur then had charge of that department, and Mr. Keys was brought in close contact with the late President, and a strong friendship was formed which lasted until President Arthur's death.

Mr. Keys's contract was a big one, and during those exciting days he had his hands full. It was during the draft riots that the greatest trouble was experienced, and the contractor had much difficulty in getting drivers for the wagons to deliver rations to the hungry soldiers stationed in and about New York city, as it was worth one's life to ride the streets in the interest of the government.

On one particular afternoon during a riot, an attempt was made to blow up the gas-house at the foot of East Twenty-first street, and a large body of soldiers was stationed at the arsenal on Seventh avenue, between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth streets, in readiness to be called out at any time.

A requisition was sent to the Battery Barracks for cooked rations to be delivered at the arsenal. The streets were lined with angry men, and not a driver would venture out with a team. The only way the rations could be delivered was for Contractor Keys himself to drive, and this he did.

He ordered the best team hitched to a loaded truck, and, mounting it, he started out. Going up Greenwich street he was assailed from every side with stones, bricks and other missiles, and several shots were fired, but undaunted he urged on the team, and reached the hungry soldiers in safety, except for a few cuts about the head.

On another occasion he made a similar trip to Gen. Dix's headquarters at the old St. Nicholas hotel on Broadway. He was again attacked by the mob, but being recognized by some members of the fire department, they came to his rescue, declaring that "Bill Keys should not be molested". He drove up to Gen. Dix's headquarters in triumph, and received the thanks of that general and Gen. Lew Wallace and others.

Perhaps no man living, except Senator Keys, can say that he stabled his horses in City Hall Park, on the very ground now occupied by the post-office. The government granted him that privilege during the early days of the war.

Early in life he was engaged in the produce business in old Washington Market, and later became connected with the Citizens' Steamboat Line, of Troy, and still has interest in that and other lines. He also carried on a large livery business in the city.

He has always been a stanch Democrat, and was a warm personal friend and a great admirer of Samuel J. Tilden. While in New York he took an active part in politics, and was a member of Tammany.

The Senator always wanted to live on a farm, and when the late Senator R. H. Veghte, of Somerville, who was his intimate friend, advised him to purchase a farm at South Branch, he did not ponder over the matter, but closed the bargain, and became a Somerset county farmer.

He did not attempt to become conspicuous in Somerset politics, but it seems Somerset county Democrats know a good man when they see one, and in 1890, when that party was at sea for a winning candidate for Senator, on the very morning of the convention, Mr. Keys's name was suggested, and the convention nominated him on the first ballot.

The campaign was a very lively one, and Charles A. Reed, a young lawyer, was his opponent. It will be remembered that the Republican Executive committee, in order to induce the voters to believe that to vote for Keys would be throwing their votes away, circulated, on the very afternoon before election, handbills and posters setting forth that Mr. Keys was not eligible to the office, not having lived, as they stated, in the county and State for the required number of years.

With only a few hours in which to procure evidence to prove such statements untrue, Mr. Keys set about and by morning the county was flooded with posters and such, denying the charge. This proved a boomerang for the Republicans, and Keys was elected by 394 plurality, in a county naturally Republican, and which had not sent a Democrat to the Senate in many years.

Senator Keys is a great lover of horses, and has a stable of them, valued at not less than $60,000, at his beautiful home, the Ellis stock farm, on the south branch of the Raritan river, about three miles west of Somerville.

Last year he served as chairman of the committees on finance and commerce and navigation, and as a member of the committees on education, elections, unfinished business and reform school for boys.

An Attractive and Useful Number.

That exceedingly practical and beautifully illustrated magazine The Art Amateur appears again, with its usual varied table of contents. The February number opens with a striking portrait of Mrs. Emma Eames Story, the prima donna, from the painting by her husband, Julian Story. An article on "The Raphael of Cats", J. Eugene Lambert, with several pages of studies of animals by that genial painter, will excite general interest. Mr. Knauft continues his invaluable articles on free-hand drawing, which should be in the hands of everyone, young or old, who wishes to study art or to appreciate pictures. The statement in "My Note Book", that the famous Spitzer collection is probably coming to this country, gives additional value to the article on the arms and armor in the collection, with its two full-page illustrations. A new illustrated department, "The Strolling Critic", bring together some sensible comments on a variety of subjects. Special articles are those on portrait painting in oil, on painting from still-life, on china painting, on poker work or pyrography, and on painting on gesso. In the correspondence are answered many queries concerning oil, water color, china, and pastel painting, painting on zinc, wood-carving, pen-and-ink drawing, etc. The department called "The House", with its illustrations, shows how completely transformed an old and severely plain dwelling may be. The supplement gives designs for needlework, wood-carving, china painting, and pyrography. There are besides many other excellent features to this most useful number. The color plates comprise a charming study, in progressive stages, of La France Roses, by Mrs. C. Goodyear, for execution in either water or mineral colors, and an amusing group of animals, entitled The Sick Puppy, by W. H. Trood, for reproduction in oil. Price, 35 cents, monthly. Montague Marks, publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

Plainfield Women Will Throng to Hear Her.

Plainfield people will welcome the privilege accorded them of hearing Mrs. Custer, the author of "Boots and Saddles", who has consented to give her charming talk on "Garrison Life on the Plains" at Seminary Hall to-morrow. Mrs. Custer's power of graphic description and her vivacious, unaffected style are familiar to all readers of her books, and her talk cannot fail to be entertaining, replete as it is with thrilling personal experiences of army life. Mrs. Custer writes from direct personal knowledge, as during her husband's lifetime she followed him through every campaign, enduring with him the hardships and privations of war. Mrs. Custer is a woman of charming manners and strong personal magnetism. She is one of the literary favorites of New York, where she leads a busy life, and in the midst of her intellectual pursuits finds time to work in the interests of many of the charities of that city. She was secretary of the New York Decorative Art society for six years before she began writing, which she was induced to undertake by the importunities of her friends, who never tired of hearing her recount her thrilling experiences, and urged her to give her story to the world. The result has been three distinct additions to women's literary achievements in the form of her books. A year ago she revisited many of the western garrisons. Mrs. Custer will be the guest of warm personal friends while in town.

Opera at The Casino.

The popular comic opera "Chimes of Normandy" will be given at The Casino, on Thursday evening of next week, by the Thomas opera company of New York city. This company, last season, gave an exceedingly clever performance of "The Mikado" at the same house, and those who heard them then will be pleased to know that they will appear in Plainfield again so soon.

The cast will include the following well-known people: Miss Emma Henry-Thomas, Miss Alice Mesereau, J. Williams Macy, Charles Parsons, George S. Sturgis, William D. Preston and C. A. Hetzel. The chorus in "Mikado" was noted as a feature. This point will be fully sustained in "Chimes of Normandy". A good orchestra, under the direction of W. W. Thomas, will assist in making a complete and enjoyable performance. Tickets will be on sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner of Park and North avenues.

MIDWINTER FASHIONS.

The Revolving Street Brushes That Border Gowns.

How the Street Cleaning Machines Are Manned by Woman Power—The Skirt a la Mode and the Manner of Its Manufacture.

It is always a comfort when an idea that has been wavering uncertainly on the horizon of the brain advances a pace or two and allows you with some approach to definiteness to make out its shape. This morning I was watching a tall woman dressed wholly in gray. She suggested something to me, but the suggestion was tantalizing because so dim and misty in its outlines. Her dress was a tailor gown of deep Russian gray, in which she loomed big and imposing. Over it was a coat of gray velvet trimmed with gray silk passementerie and fur, which looked wonderfully well in company with a princesse bonnet of the same material, with full gray ostrich tips, relieved by one scarlet feather in the middle. The gray velvet strings and bow were lined with the vivid relieving color.

But it was something about the bottom of the dress which teased me with an idea that seemed to be playing hide and seek and never fairly coming into view. There was a band of gray Astrakhan at the foot and above that a three-inch heading of gray velvet; the skirt was long in the back, of course, and as its wearer passed in state and dignity, head up, chest out, some sort of small scarlet flower ablaze on her bosom, the shaggy border seemed to turn over and over, whisk itself about with its lapping tongues upon the pavement in righteous zeal to do its full duty in life, and as I looked at it I knew it was mutely trying to remind me of a revolving street brush and was giving itself an extra roll or two of playful congratulation because it saw that at last it had succeeded.

I said it was comfortable to force an idea into declaring itself, but when the idea spoils a bright winter promenade the comfort is only momentary; for once the eyes are opened it makes the head swim to look up, down and across and see nothing but brushes, brushes, turning fast, turning slow; black brushes, brown brushes, gray brushes; big brushes that turn with pompous dignity behind a portly matron in velvets and brocades; little brushes that flop themselves round and round with nervous haste behind a thin woman in a tailor dress, who gesticulates as she explains some knotty point in the ethics of shopping; brushes that roll straight ahead with quiet regularity and brushes that jerk to one end of the sidewalk and then to another; brushes that are worn down and do only perfunctory service and brushes that keep little jets of street refuse flying out in front and at the sides of them; fur brushes and brushes economically made to look a little like fur; brushes of all sorts and conditions uncomplainingly maneuvered by all women who wear gowns.

It is wonderful how universal the brush mania has become. Of twenty-three women who passed me in four minutes only five were without that shaggy fur border spinning round and round most energetically at their heels. It gets monotonous in spite of the variations in its movements, for in the, brush itself there is very little variation. Almost every street dress of any pretensions has a skirt after this order; at the hips it is close fitting; at the bottom it becomes fuller and has some added length behind, more or less according to the relations sustained between the wearer's common sense and her imitativeness; around this added portion is a roll of beaver or Astrakhan or other close napped or long-haired fur, or sometimes a frill of velvet just edged with feathers. When a fur sweeper cannot be afforded—and, indeed, it seems unjust to expect women in their discharge of their voluntarily undertaken municipal duties to use such expensive appliances—imitation Astrakhan is made to do service, and there are new short pile plushes woven expressly to meet the demand for fairly durable, medium priced brushes for winter cleaning.

When the eye can free itself for a moment from the constant turning and rolling the long Russian coats of black velvet attract attention. A woman who has a pale bluish-purple orchid in her buttonhole comes out of a florist's shop wearing one. It has a long, slender back, close-fitted, and in front it is single-breasted and has sloped bias seams to give fullness to the skirt, which reaches to within a couple of inches of the bottom of the dress below. It has big Continental side pockets, and as the orchid shivers across the sidewalk and the carriage door is thrown open a black brocade lining shows, with pale bluish purple flowers dotted over it like the orchid that nods in relieved contentment as the woman steps to her warm seat inside.

A girl with the clear pale skin that in a different sort of a woman might hint at opium smoking comes down the avenue quaintly muffled in one of the long black velvet capes that would hardly venture outside of New York city, with its high shoulders, flaring collar and full breadths reaching quite to the girl's knees. Its yoke is of pale golden yellow satin thickly covered with costly passementerie designs in black arabesques, and it has a delicate satin lining to match the yoke and a narrow band of sable fur for a border.

Next comes a picture in green. A very slender, dark girl is its animating spirit, and she wears an emerald green velvet skirt, short in the back, for a wonder—that is, short for these days—and a rather lighter green cloth redingote almost covering it and fitted with scrupulous exactness to the figure. About the tunic is a band of glossy green lophophore feathers, more of which edge the wrists and neck. The redingote is turned back from a high cloth collar at the throat with deep velvet revers, and over the girl's smooth black hair is a green velvet hat with green feathers and ribbons.

The green girl nods to a girl with a boa. The boa is worth seeing. All this world's boas are large; this one is very large, indeed. The girl who wears it seems to get the cue of her toilet from the long lashes of her gray eyes. Her face is not at all noticeable except for her eyelashes, which droop like a fringe. Everything about her is cleverly designed to heighten the effect of this peculiarity. Her dress is a gray vigouqne; its plain skirt is trimmed with three rows of the hairy fur of the gray Mongolian goat. The fur bands are in themselves very narrow, but the long hairs hang down all around. The round mantle has two short capes covering the shoulders, and both capes and mantle are edged with narrow glittering steel braid winking over the top of more long fur fringe. About the top of the standing collar is disposed the huge round boa, its ends reaching almost to the ground, its smooth silky hairs drooping curtain-like most decorously. The gray felt hat is non-committal enough with its steel and velvet trimmings and its bunch of stiff feathers in two shades of gray not to interfere with the general effect of the whole outfit, which is eyelashes and eyelashes and eyelashes over again. It takes an uncommon pair of window curtains to stand this sort of iteration.

It doesn't take many minutes on the street to bring to notice all sorts of novel things in millinery. There are small hats round as plates; now one in black felt with a pink velvet crown dotted with jet and now one in gray felt with plaited scarlet velvet brim. Hats with strings are worn with the new costumes, very broad strings often and frequently of white velvet, even when not another touch of white shows about the person. Ruched wreaths of ribbon are used for trimmings and match with feathers and fur almost as oddly as do the muslin ruches that are hitched with fur capes in most incongruous company. A sealskin pelerine stands out in a shop window, the girl with the eyelashes is just passing. It has a stand-up Medici collar of fawn-colored silk tying in front with fawn-colored ribbons. The eyelashes are lifted with evident surprise as the gray girl stops and studies the new and curious combination, which is matched for oddity by only one other feature of midwinter fashions, the long, broad, velvet ribbon streamers, after the manner of the old "follow me, lads," which began to show themselves in the autumn in the comparative privacy of the tea-room, and have now sufficiently advanced in courage to walk not infrequently, even when the wind blows, out of doors.

KANSAS' NEW SENATOR.

Bishop W. Perkins, Successor to the Late Preston B. Plumb.

Bishop W. Perkins was born at Rochester, O., and was fifty-nine years old October 18 last. He was educated in the public schools and at Knox college, Galesburg, Ill. After leaving college he went to Colorado, and on his return in 1862 enlisted in company D, Eighty-third Illinois volunteer infantry. He served as sergeant and lieutenant, and in December, 1863, was appointed adjutant of the Sixteenth Colorado infantry. Later he was assigned to duty as captain of company C of the same regiment. He served as judge advocate on the staff of Gen. Gillem, and also in the same position on the staff of Gen. Steadman; was mustered out at Nashville in May, 1866; returned to Illinois and resumed the study of law, reading with O. C. Gray at Ottawa.

After being admitted to the bar in 1867 he located at Pierceton, Ind., where he remained until he came to Oswego, Kan., in April, 1869. The same year he was appointed county attorney and the following year probate judge, which office he held till February 1, 1873, when he was elected judge of the Eleventh judicial district. He was reelected in 1874 and 1878, and in November, 1882, was elected a member of congress.

Mr. Perkins is a republican, sincere in his convictions and aggressive in his expressions. He was a delegate to the Chicago convention in 1880. He was elected member of congress from the Third district, and was reelected for three successive terms, but met defeat a year ago at the hands of the Farmers' Alliance. He was editor and proprietor of the Oswego Register from 1871 until appointed district judge in 1873.

THE FLAG INSULTED.

American Colors Torn to Pieces by a Russian Sailor.

A piece torn out of an American flag adorns the quarters of Capt. Alexander McLean, late commander of the American sealing schooner James Hamilton Lewis, on the wharf of the quarantine station at Angel island, San Francisco.

When the Lewis was seized by the Russians off Copper island and a prize crew put on board Capt. McLean had the American flag run up to the mizzen peak and the halyards jammed in the block and cut, so that the flag could not be pulled down. Two days later a Russian sailor succeeded in climbing up to the masthead. He was unable to get the flag down, so taking out his sheath-knife he cut the flag a few inches from the peak and tore off as much of it as he could. What was left only amounted to a few square feet. The tear began a few inches from the top, increased to about thirteen inches half way down, and ran back to a width of about eight inches where the tear ended.

The remains of what once formed the colors of an American vessel stand today at the head of the bed of her late captain, and they will not go out of his sight until they are filed as evidence in an action for damages to be commenced against the Russian government by Capt. McLean.

A Princess' Choice.

A sister of the late king of Spain consented to mingle her proud Castilian blood with that of the people by marrying a doctor of medicine who had not a solitary handle to his name. When the courtiers heard of the infanta's choice they turned up the whites of their eyes to the sky like ducks in a thunderstorm at the bare notion of this superb patrician lily giving herself to a husband belonging to the professional classes. The doctor in question is well provided for mentally and physically and his spouse is evidently proud of him, for when she was twitted with marrying an untitled individual she said: "I preferred a man without a title to a title without a man."

Powerful Odor.

The musk antelope can send forth such a powerful odor of musk that even at the distance of one hundred yards he can smother his enemy to death.

Russian Isinglass.

The best isinglass comes from Russia, where it is obtained from the giant sturgeon which inhabits the Caspian sea.

High-Priced Hair.

The Empress Eugenie paid 1,000 francs ($200) an ounce for a braid of hair that exactly matched her own.

HIS TALE OF WOE

Charles Brayley's Unfortunate Matrimonial Ventures.

TWICE ROBBED OF HIS WIFE.

Both the Mrs. Brayleys Elope With Their Husband's Brother.

A Strage Story of Marital Experiences—Mrs. Brayley No. 1 Skips, and After Securing a Divorce Mr. Brayley Marries a Runaway—No. 2 Also Flees With His Brother, and No. 1 Pays Her Former Husband a Consolation Visit.

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—Charles Brayley, a man 40 years old, a resident of Brighton, has had a strange matrimonial experience. He has been married twice, and each time the wife has eloped. The man in the case on both occasions was Brayley's own brother Alfred.

About fifteen years ago Charles Brayley married at Canaan, N. H., a handsome young woman. Everything went along swimmingly for a couple of years, until in an unfortunate moment, Charles invited his brother Alfred to visit him. Alfred took a fancy to Charles' wife, his attentions to her were encouraged, and as a natural sequence an elopement followed. Charles waited for quite a while for his wife to return, but she never came. He then procured a divorce.

Seven years ago he made the acquaintance of Mrs. Frank Gould, of Danbury, N. H. She, too, was a runaway, but Charles cared little for that, and a marriage is said to have taken place.

Mrs. Brayley No. 1 and Alfred lived together for a short time and then separated. The woman decided to lead a better life and remarried. She is now the wife of a well-to-do business man of Lynn, and is a prominent member of a society which has for its object the rescue of fallen women.

Alfred, in the meantime, continued his reckless career, and two months ago completed a year's sentence for running away with another man's wife. There was still another charge pending against him, to escape which he came to Charles' home to remain in seclusion.

Charles was happy with wife No. 2, and forgave his brother for running away with the former Mrs. Brayley. His happiness did not last long. Alfred, who had no conscientious scruples against despoiling another man's home, soon gained the confidence of Mrs. Brayley No. 2, and the couple have eloped. Charles Brayley is heartbroken.

An interesting feature of the case developed when wife No. 1 journeyed from Lynn to console her former husband. To a reporter who called at the house while the woman was present, she explained that she was interested in that sort of work now and intended to do all she could for Charles.

To Head Off Coal Ships.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The Navy Department is just now endeavoring to head off several coal ships that were started from New York during the recent Chilian war preparations, headed for the Pacific. There were four ships in all, carrying a total of 180,000 tons of coal. One of them has been intercepted at Montevideo and ordered to discharge cargo there and return to the United States. Another one is expected there in a few days, and they are trying to learn the whereabouts of the other two so as to lessen the expense as much as possible.

Banquet to Gov. Boyd.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 6.—Arrangements have been completed by Gov. Boyd's friends to give him a banquet on Feb. 16 to celebrate his victory in the Supreme Court. The meeting will be in the nature of a reunion of Western Democracy. Gov. Boies of Iowa has promised to be present. Invitations have been sent to a number of prominent Democrats of national fame, among them being ex-President Cleveland, Senator Hill, Calvin S. Brice, Carter B. Harrison, and Senator Gorman. The banquet will be preceded by a grand demonstration.

Jones Brothers' Case.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 6.—Developments in the case of Jones Brothers, the cotton men who fled after defrauding their European and Eastern clients, transpire daily. It is evident now that everybody in the firm was let into the game except D. J. Howland, the Tupelo, Miss., member. He was badly left and loses about $9,000. The aged mother of the men is prostrated at her sons' disgrace and it is feared that she will not survive the blow. The opinion is general that all interested in the firm have fled into Mexico.

Corbett Signs.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Articles have been signed by Arthur Lumley, acting for the Olympic Club of New Orleans, and James Corbett, by which the latter accepts the offer of the club of a $15,000 purse to meet the winner of the Slavin-Jackson fight two months after that contest in the Olympic Club, and to fight to a finish. This will make the latter contest take place in July. Corbett agreed to put up $1,000 to guarantee his appearance.

BLAINE NOT A CANDIDATE.

His Letter Declining the Presidential Nomination to Be Published Soon.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—It can now be positively stated that Secretary Blaine will make known publicly within the next few days his determination not to permit his name to be used as a candidate before the Minneapolis Convention.

There have been many efforts made by statesmen during the past few months to get some expression of opinion from Mr. Blaine as to his intentions regarding the Presidential nomination, but to all of them, without a single exception until this week, he has made no more definite response save to state that he would make known his position at the proper time, as he viewed it.

Mr. Blaine has stated to a prominent Republican, who called upon him, that he had it in mind to publish a letter, already written, in a few days, asking his friends to desist, and insisting that those disgruntled Republicans who have endeavored to drag him into a false position shall cease their unwarranted use of his name. He does not class these among his friends.

THE KIDNAPPING CASE.

White Plains, N. Y., Grand Jury Adjourns Until Tuesday.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 6.—In response to the summons of District-Attorney Platt, Charles P. Waterbury and his little 8-year-old son, Ward, of Long Ridge, came to White Plains prepared to give testimony in the famous kidnapping case.

As the grand jury has adjourned until Tuesday next, nothing, of course, could be done.

The case will be brought before the grand jury next Tuesday, and indictments will undoubtedly be found. In that event Gov. Flower will be asked to sign a requisition on the Governor of Connecticut for the transfer of the three criminals to New York State.

Desperate Thieves Captured.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 6.—Railroad detectives Moran and Posse have arrested, near Thompson, John Caldwell, of Newark, Thomas Ryan, of Buffalo, and George Bowen, residence unknown, for the robbery of a store and the depot at Elmhurst. The fellows were heavily armed and attempted to draw weapons, but the officers had them covered before they could do so. The thieves were loaded with booty and are believed to be members of a marauding gang that is operating in many of the small villages throughout Northeastern Pennsylvania.

No Confirmation of the Report.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Indian officials have received no confirmation of the report that trouble is feared among the Arraphahoe, Cheyenne and Osage Indians in the Indian Territory, on account of their belief in the coming of the Messiah. They do not believe the Indians are on the verge of an outbreak, but say that while the Indians will always anticipate the Meesiah and may dance in consequence, they do not believe any serious trouble should be apprehended.

Electric Car Jumps the Track.

AMESBURY, Mass., Feb. 6.—An electric car on the Amesbury and Merrimac line jumped the track at Pleasant Valley and rolled down an embankment 20 feet high to the Merrimac river. The accident was caused by the spreading of the rails.

Indictments Against Papers Dismissed.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Indictments against nine newspaper publishers of this city have been dismissed by Judge Martine. Doubt Its Correctness.

SING SING'S WORST

Murder Charles McIlvaine is Hopelessly Hardened.

INDIFFERENT TO HIS FATE.

He Becomes Furious When Any One Talks of His Approaching Death.

Prison Life Evidently Agrees With Him, For He Has Gained Sixty Pounds Since His Entrance Into the Institution—Very Dainty About His Food—The First Electrical Execution Reporters Have Had the Privilege of Witnessing.

SING SING, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Murderer Charles McIlvaine, who butchered Grocer Luca in Brooklyn about two years since, will be killed by electricity in a day or two, Monday perhaps.

McIlvaine's electrocution will be the first to be witnessed by reporters, and as Warden Brown has sent a letter to each of those who are booked to see the execution, notifying them to be in the prison before 10 o'clock Monday morning, it is believed that the execution will take place within twenty-four hours thereafter.

Anticipating the opening of the electrical executions to newspaper men, two-thirds of the editors and reporters between the Adirondacks and the metropolis have sent in telegrams, letters and petitions asking Warden Brown to let them see McIlvaine killed.

McIlvaine remains stolidly indifferent to his approaching death, and treats with scant courtesy the clergymen who have labored assiduously to make him appreciate that death is nigh. He has been one of the most unruly, incorrigible and hopelessly hardened prisoners ever in Sing Sing.

McIlvaine's every desire in the eating way is supplied, and when he asked for a fresh mackerel yesterday morning one was brought from New York for him. He sleeps nine or ten hours every night and that prison life agrees with him is proved by the fact that he has increased in weight sixty pounds since he has been in Sing Sing.

He reads the newspapers, but his chief amusement is cutting figures out of colored paper. Red, green and blue imitations of beasts, birds and men adorn the walls of his cell.

Although McIlvaine is not at all cast down by the near approach of death, he becomes furious when any one but the clergymen refer to it. The Rev. Fathers Creeden and Smyth visit McIlvaine daily, but their kind offices in the main have been rudely repulsed.

When his wife visited him she was forced to cut her visit short because of his profanity and abuse. She will not visit him again. McIlvaine's sister has been most zealous in trying to save his life, and yet he rewards her faithful love with vulgarity and oaths.

On her last visit she begged him to listen to the teachings of the priests who call upon him every day, and he replied: "I know my business. Let me alone." Aftes she had gone McIlvaine said to Keeper Dowling:

"Women make me sick with their snivelling, and if she ever tries it on me again I'll never see her no more."

His keepers say he has recently become more sullen than ever and that they often hear him grinding his teeth in impotent rage. When asked why he did so he invariably replied: "Sharp'nin' me teeth for more grub."

Warden Brown asked if he could do anything for him.

"Yes," quickly answered McIlvaine, "let me alone and don't bother me."

He knows that he will meet death some time between Monday and Saturday next, but never refers to the subject. The keepers think he will fight at the end.

No Baseball Club for Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 6.—Samuel W. Trott, who has been in this city for the past few days trying to organize a baseball club, has given up the job. He said that after a careful canvass of the city he finds it impossible to secure the required capital of $5,000 to start the club. He could only get $2,000 pledged.

The Philadelphia Delayed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The Navy Department has not heard from the Philadelphia since she left Port au Prince, some weeks ago, en route for Montevideo. She was expected to have arrived at Montevideo on Thursday. Her delay in not arriving in the South Atlantic, however, causes no uneasiness.

WORLD'S FAIR FINANCES.

Chicago Will Ask for $4,000,000 for the National Commission.

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—The Chicago directors of the World's Fair have concluded they can run their part of the great exposition without any financial help from Uncle Sam. Congress will not be asked to loan or appropriate a dollar for the local directory.

All the funds necessary to complete the buildings and grounds, in readiness to turn over to the President of the United States and the National Commission will be supplied by Chicago bankers and capitalists, who, it is said, have already guaranteed to make good any possible deficit.

Congress will, however, be given a bill for consideration which will provide for an appropriation of about $4,000,000 to be handled entirely by the National Commission in the execution of work expressly delegated to the Commission by the act creating the exposition.

AFRICAN SLAVERS.

Emin Pasha Writes of Their Terrible Doings.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—A letter just received here from Emin Pasha, dated at Oswa, on the west coast of Albert Nyanza, in August last, tells a terrible tale of the doings of the African slave traders.

He says that there is a fearful crop of them between James Gordon Bennett Mountain and the Ruenzovi.

While following the Omar Bpochalid for six days, the letter says, he, Emin Pasha, found fifty-one emaciated corpses and thirty-nine bodies with broken skulls.

Emin Pasha estimates that twelve hundred persons have been carried away from that district into slavery.

Sheriff Dunn's Murderers.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 6.—It has been decided by the Attorney-General of Seward county, that the six men under arrest for the murder of Sheriff Dunn, shall be tried at Springfield, Feb. 15. Mr. Beauchamp, an attorney of the county, says he is confident a jury will be obtained which will give the men a fair and impartial trial. As yet a judge has not been agreed upon to preside.

IN ACCORD WITH LAW

The Decision of Judge of Crimes Foster.

HIS ACTION TO BE REVIEWED.

Says There Was No Direct Evidence of the Cause of Riggin's Death.

Has Done His Utmost to Fix the Responsibility for the Killing on Some One—Renewed Expressions of Hope for the Speedy Resumption of Friendly Intercourse Between Chili and the United States—Many Chilians Want a Line of Steamers Between Valparaiso and San Francisco.

VALPARAISO, Feb. 6.—Judge of Crimes Foster says that his entire review of the Baltimore case occupied ten days.

"I have rendered sentence upon Arena, Abumada and Rodriguez," he said, "in strict accordance with the Chilian law. The only regret I feel is that there was no direct evidence showing the immediate cause of Charles W. Riggin's death. I have done the utmost in my power to fix the responsibility for his killing upon some one."

The Court of Appeals, which will review the action of Judge Foster, will reconvene next month.

On all sides there are renewed expressions of hope that there will be a speedy resumption of friendly intercourse between Chili and the United States.

Since the loss of the steamer John Elder there has been a great deal of talk among the residents of this city against the Pacific Steam Navigation Company.

Many people here, in view of the approach of the World's Fair, are desirous to see a line of American steamers between Valparaiso and Panama or direct to San Francisco. Some are even in favor of traffic with New York by way of the Argentine and Uruguay ports. There seems to be no doubt that the opening of an American line along the Chilian coast in conjunction with the Chilian Steamship Company would prove a paying investment.

TO SAVE TIME.

Proposed Air Line Between New York and Chicago.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Ex President Finney, of the Soo line, proposes to build an air line from Chicago to New York, and is now in this city making preliminary arrangements. He outlines his plan as follows:

"A straight line drawn from Chicago to New York city passes almost directly through Cleveland, Ohio, and a straight line from Cleveland to New York is about 234 miles shorter than the distance between the said cities by way of Buffalo and Albany.

"Now, with the enormous volume of business between Chicago, the greatest depot of the West, and New York, the great seaboard port of America, it seems as if a saving of 234 miles in distance and of six hours in time by express trains would warrant an outlay sufficient to accomplish the construction of such a railway.

Three Killed at a Country Dance.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 6.—A gang of rowdies attended a country dance near Gordonville, Putnam county, and, after filling up with whiskey, interfered with the dancers. George White and Sam Donelson, who tried to eject them, with White's wife, Mary, were killed, and the other respectable people left the house in the hands of the toughs. No arrests have been made.

A Weighty Matter.

NEWPORT, R. I., Feb. 6.—During the visit here of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt they drove down Bellevue avenue to inspect the marble cottage that is being erected by W. K. Vanderbilt. No Trouble in Bridgeport.

Alexander Mackenzie Very Ill.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 6.—The Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, ex-Premier of Canada, sustained a fall last Tuesday, from the effects of which he became delirious, and now his condition is believed to be critical.

The four Official Reports,

Cleveland's Baking Powder strongest of all pure cream of tartar powders, yielding (average) 12.87 per cent. carbonic acid gas.

The Scientific American, after a most careful examination of the Official Reports, says: "The showing Cleveland's makes, compared with all the principal brands, is such as to put it emphatically at the head."

DIVORCES FOR $3.50.

Peculiar Documents Issued By Jewish Rabbis in Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 6.—Kate Goldberg has been arrested on a charge of polygamy. She married Aaron Goldberg after securing an alleged divorce from a Jewish rabbi in New York.

Her arrest has caused considerable comment and severe criticism among the Jewish residents of this city. The justice who issued the warrant for the arrest has received a letter which reads as follows:

"You should know, if you will not do anything to help the lady to be discharged, that I will bring fifty families into the biggest danger. In the case of one couple named S——, the wife has a divorce from a husband who is now in Newark. Another man has been divorced from two wives and his present wife is also divorced from a man, making three divorces by rabbis in that one house. There are seventy-five others of the same kind. With a few words there will many of them be made to suffer and the world will have to listen to something."

The divorces are peculiar documents, anyone can buy one for $3.50.

WHAT THE MAYOR SAYS.

MR. GILBERT TALKS ABOUT FIREMEN AND STREET LIGHTS.

He Believed that in Appointing Mr. Martin as First Assistant Engineer He Was Putting in Office an Efficient and Popular Fireman—The December Street-Light Bill Has Not Been Paid, and the Investigation is Proceeding.

Mayor Gilbert was interviewed by a PRESS reporter last evening concerning two public questions which are just now prominent—the fire department controversy, and the street-light investigation. Mr. Gilbert was decidedly averse to talking for publication, as he did not wish to be drawn into any newspaper controversy; but what he had to impart was given with that candor and dignity, frankness and sincerity, which have marked his messages to the council and his speeches in public.

"It would be unwise"—said the mayor—"for me to express any opinion in the present state of affairs concerning the fire department controversy. When the question of appointing a first assistant to the chief engineer came before me I carefully and conscientiously considered the matter, and felt assured that in appointing James A. Martin I was putting in office one who was not only a most excellent fireman and reserving of the position because of his capabilities, but also one who was popular among his fellow-members of the department. I have the utmost esteem for Mr. Waters's qualities and for his services of the past, and even so have I a kindly feeling for many other people; but I cannot give them all offices. Mr. Waters served his term satisfactorily. But is one man to be kept in one office always? Are official changes so infrequent that their coming must cause an unpleasant stir? It is of course to be regretted that discontent should be manifest in such a matter, but I feel that I have only sought to do my duty to the city in this as in all other of my official acts.

"With reference to electric light matters, I have read the article that appeared in THE PRESS of the 3d inst. over the signature of Mr. Smith, and did not notice anything therein that I could take exception to. I think his statement of the case is essentially correct. I met with his committee on one or two occasions and was shown the various tests that had been made by the Stevens Institute and other parties, which seemed to show conclusively that the lamps submitted by Mr. Smith's committee for inspection were considerably under twenty-five candle power. I think the average deficiency was shown to be about twenty per cent. Whether this deficiency was the result of design or of a careless system of inspection I am of course unable to say. I prefer to believe the latter. A conference with Mr. Moore and Mr. McClurg held at my office in relation thereto failed to elicit any satisfactory explanation of the matter. Mr. Smith did submit his report to me, and with one or two changes it met with my approval. The electric light bill ordered paid by the council at its last meeting was the November bill, which was ordered paid by the last council, but was not paid because Mr. Smith refused to sign the warrant. The December bill has not yet been paid, but is held over pending a further investigation. I have no doubt the committee having the matter in charge will fully investigate it, and until they make their report I do not care to say anything further."

BOLD BURGLARY.

Two LaGrande Avenue Residences Robbed in Broad Daylight.

The local police are looking for a jaunty young man of genteel dress who is suspected of being the fellow who broke into and ransacked the houses at 49 and 51 LaGrande avenue yesterday afternoon. No. 49 is occupied by the families of Henry C. Nomer and G. W. V. Moy. Some time between 2 and 5, when every-one was out for the afternoon, a thief broke into the house through a rear door, ransacked the house from top to bottom, and departed with probably $300 in money and jewelry. From Mr. and Mrs. Moy he stole a ladies' gold hunting-case watch and other jewelry and several dollars in change. From Mr. and Mrs. Nomer he took $11 in money, two amethyst rings, an open-face silver watch, gold chain and charm. With a buttonhook and poker as tools the thief wrenched apart the lock on the trunk of Mr. Bedford, Mr. Nomer's brother-in-law, and abstracted a $50 ring and $15 in money. The ring had an initial B set in small diamonds, and had Bedford engraved inside.

The thief entered the residence of Mrs. Hawkins at No. 51, through a cellar window. He unlocked all the doors in the house and secured $15 in cash. As in the case at Nomer's, all the family were out. A servant girl at the house of John H. Doane saw a well-dressed, dapper young man prowling about the rear door of Nomer's house. He had a light silk handkerchief about his neck. She saw him try the door that was later found forced open, and he is believed to be the thief.

—It is rumored that the doctors of Plainfield are intending to raise their rates and fees. They'll experience a reduction in business if they do. The people won't feel called upon to pay for their physicians' new houses.

Love and Marriage in Japan.

Sir Edwin Arnold, who has been enjoying an interesting trip through the United States, has made a careful study of the conditions which govern the family in Japan and embodies his ideas in a paper called "Love and Marriage in Japan" in the February number of The Cosmopolitan. The article is illustrated by the quaintest possible Japanese sketches running down the sides and across the bottom of each page. An excellent photograph of W. D. Howells serves as a frontispiece, and his work as a writer of fiction is reviewed in the same number by H. H. Boyesen. The President of John Hopkins University gives a most practical paper for parents on "Boys and Boys' Schools", illustrated by cartoons of the famous Attwood. Murat Halstead turns back lovingly to his early farm days, and tells of the "Pets and Sports of a Farmer Boy". The petroleum industry fully illustrated; An Afghan Story by Archibald Forbes; The Story of the Brazilian Republic by Adams, late Minister to that country; and The Leading Amateurs of the United States in photography, are other leading articles of the month.

This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup and whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. All ages, and all conditions of womanhood will find just the help that woman needs, in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. That's a matter that's guaranteed. If it can't be done, then the medicine costs you nothing—its makers don't want your money.

Get it, if you're a tired or suffering woman, and get well. It builds up and invigorates the entire system, regulates and promotes the proper functions, and restores health and strength. At the two critical periods in a woman's life—the change from girlhood to womanhood, and later, the "change of life"—it is a perfectly safe and an especially valuable remedial agent, that can produce only good results.

For all the derangements, irregularities and weaknesses peculiar to the sex, "Favorite Prescription" is the only remedy so certain that it can be guaranteed. If it fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

You pay only for the good you get. Can you ask more?

After having expended one thousand dollars for various medicines, and with doctors, and growing worse all the while, I considered my case incurable. I was induced to try Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills. After their use for six weeks I can eat meat without distress, a thing that has not occurred before for years. I believe I am nearly cured, and yet it seems too good to be true. JERSEY CENTRAL CONDUCTORS.

1. Phil Backer—The Ladies' Man.

"Oh, Nellie! That is the same dear little fellow we went up with."

With coat neatly buttoned and smoothed—with a pink of the regulation shade in his lapel, and the customary smile of self-satisfaction spread upon his countenance—the unconscious cause of the above remark waltzed down the aisle of the ladies' car of the train under his control. Approaching the seat occupied by two ladies residing in a certain suburb of this city, evidently returning home from a shopping expedition, one of whom is above quoted, he politely touched the peak of his cap and in an undertone interrogated them as to their proposed destination. Being assured on that point, the next problem to be solved was as to the manner in which the railroad company was to be reimbursed for their transportation. "Here are our tickets"—remarked one of the ladies with a sweet smile.

"But, madam,"—answered the conductor—"these tickets read in the opposite direction from that in which you are traveling, though being between the stations named."

"What must we do: pay our fare over again? It was not our fault the conductor on the train going up tore off the wrong end of the ticket."

"Madam, I am very sorry; but the rules of the company must be complied with;"—said the ladies' man—"and you must pay your fare. I never make mistakes."

The additional fare was paid; but not until the ladies had alighted from the train and exchanged confidences did it occur to them that "the dear little fellow" was the same conductor with whom they rode to Plainfield, and that he had taken the wrong end of their tickets himself.

Although obliged to pay twice for their ride, confidence in this conductor is evidently unshaken, as one of the charming creatures was heard to remark to the other: "Really, love, he is indeed a dear little Phil."

The Standards of Fashion.

Common sense and good judgment are the qualities for which American ladies are noted. When they find any article which will add to the comfort of their homes or to their personal appearance they speedily adopt it, being quick to discover the superiority of the new over the old. It is to this trait that the firm of A. McDowell & Co., of 4 West Fourteenth street, New York, owes the wonderful success of their French fashion journal among American women. Whenever these journals are critically examined, their superior merit is at once recognized. They not only give the styles one month earlier than the American fashion journals; but the variety, originality, and practicability of those styles lift them so far above all others, that they are now recognized as the standards of fashion for this country, as they have long been in France.

When Pastor and People Do Not Agree.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

The Park Avenue Baptist church of Plainfield did not investigate the claim of the contractor who built the edifice, and therefore the pastor, the Rev. Asa Reed Dilts, resigned. He did not think as his deacons did with reference to this matter, and therefore concluded to leave. It was not merely a matter of pique, it was a matter of Christian principle, and on this Mr. Dilts acted. When pastor and people do not think the same, a separation is the best thing that can happen.

Statistics of the Petition.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The statement of "An Older Fireman", in your issue of Feb. 4, is not true, as there were one hundred and two firemen out of one hundred and sixty, that signed the petition asking the mayor to retain J. Erwin Waters as first assistant engineer; also over one hundred citizens, asking the same. In reference to the company that did not sign any petition, that was because they had none offered them.

A YOUNG FIREMAN.

"Laws grind the poor, and rich men rule the law." But let us be thankful that any poor sufferer can buy with only 25 cents a bottle of Salvation Oil.

The enormous sale of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has developed many new remedies; but the people cling to the old reliable, Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

CHURCH MEMBERS AND RUM.

Parson Haines of Netherwood Talks on Temperance to a Detroit Reporter.

(From The Detroit Free Press.)

Among the arrivals at the Russell House last Saturday was S. A. Haines, a New York traveling man who has a charming home at Netherwood, N. J., and who is known from one end of the country to the other as "Parson" Haines. Mr. Haines is a large, fine-looking man of commanding physique, bears a strong facial resemblance to ex-President Cleveland, and is a hearty, whole-souled, broad-gauge Christian gentleman anxious at all times to do his utmost to better the condition of his fellow-man. He has been on the road since 1856, is therefore one of the veterans of the traveling man's army, an organization whose members are the subject of deep solicitude and interest on his part. He is the supreme chaplain of the United Commercial Travelers' association of America, and chaplain of the Travelers' Protective association, and is personally known to and beloved by a large proportion of the 250,000 sample men of this country. Mr. Haines, beside making frequent temperance addresses under the auspices of Y. M. C. A. and W. C. T. U., often fills pulpits in the various cities that he periodically visits, preaching regular sermons from scriptural texts.

Asked how he came to take up the work to which he devotes all of his spare time, Mr. Haines replied: "For many years I was a believer in the idea that a man could be a consistent church member and at the same time take a drink whenever he felt so disposed. Many times I have sat at a card table in my own house playing whist with my rector, a bottle of wine before us. I also used to drink wine at my rector's house, and we both thought it all right. After a time I learned to look at the manner in a different light, stopped drinking entirely, and was so gratified at the change in myself that I wrote to Edward Everett Hale, with whom I had discussed the matter before, and informed him that I was all right. I had become a temperate man. I shall never forget what he said to me in reply. 'No man is sure he is temperate himself, until he tries to make other people so.' Those words set me to thinking most earnestly, and the result was that eight years ago I began addressing public meetings for the purpose of doing whatever I could to induce other men to stop drinking and live sober, God fearing lives.

"There is no doubt in my mind that men come to hear me preach or deliver a temperance address who won't go to hear a regularly ordained minister for the reason that I talk to them, not as a clergyman or a professional temperance lecturer, but as one business man to another. They know that they have n't an ambition, a hope or an aspiration that I have n't in common with them, they know that I am in touch with the things they are, and so whenever I am announced to speak I am reasonably sure of a crowded house. As an example: Last Sunday night I preached in one of the churches in Fort Wayne, Ind., and forty traveling men marched over to the church in a body from one hotel to hear me. After the services were over sixty-seven traveling men, not one of whom I had ever met before, came forward, shook me by the hand, and said: 'Mr. Haines, I am glad to meet you.' That was a compliment that did me a world of good, and I can remember a time when it would have been impossible to draw that number of traveling men to a church to hear anyone.

"Speaking of traveling men, in whose welfare I take an absorbing interest, I don't know of any class of men in this country whose sudden dropping out of existence would so thoroughly paralyze business as would the annihilation of the 250,000 commercial travelers of the United States. If merchants or their salesmen should be swept away, others would soon spring into the ranks and fill their places, but where would you look for commercial travelers, men who know the trade? There was a time, immediately after the war, when the traveling men of America were deservedly regarded, as a class, in the light of profligates and mischief makers, but happily there has been a radical change during the last twenty years, and now there are many men on the road, who in addition to being exceptionally bright and capable are as well behaved and circumspect in their demeanor as any class of men living.

"What do I think of the temperance outlook in this country at the present time? The wheat and the tares are both growing. Temperance in society and in the church tarough the various organized efforts in that direction, is increasing. On the other hand there never was a time when there were so many gilded and polutive saloons as now, and so therefore it seems as though drinking in such places was on the increase, too. What would I do to stop the crime of liquor selling? Have the federal government and the various state governments stop legalizing it. Repeal the internal revenue laws, all liquor license and tax laws, place rum selling right where it belongs, and we can fight it with every hope of success. As a saloonkeeper said to me in Indianapolis not long ago, pointing to his license tacked up behind the bar in his place, 'So long as the government will sell me that little piece of paper, I shall continue in this business; when it refuses to do so any longer, then I will look around for an opening in some other line'.

"Now, is n't it a monstrous shame for the government, national or local, to barter away the privilege of drunkard making?"

NEW JERSEY'S PAROLE LAW.

What Is Said of Its Workings by the Head Keeper of the State Prison.

Mr. Patterson, head keeper of the State Prison, in his annual report to the Governor has considerable to say about the Parole Law, which has been in operation during the past year. He believes that the Legislature has given to the prison authorities of the State the best law of the kind now in existence. The trouble is in the enforcement of it. If all the requirements are observed it will prove to be a valuable factor in the reduction of crime, but if it is loosely observed, it will become a curse to the community.

Of the entire number that have been paroled so far, none of the men has been returned. He suggests that it would be a good move for some philanthropic citizen to organize an agency for securing employment for those who are entitled to the privileges of the new law. This organization could watch over the men and encourage them.

No parole, he says, should be allowed until after the petitioner, by experience in prison discipline, has been able to appreciate its vigor and to understand what would follow the breaking of the condition of the parole. The parole should be dependent upon the good standing of the prisoner, and only granted on satisfactory assurance of its being acceptable to the general sentiment of the reputable citizens of the community from which the prisoner was received. It should not be applicable in any case of second conviction.

The report shows that the State Prison is a cosmopolitan institution. Twenty-eight States are represented and twenty-four foreign countries. Out of the 939 prisoners in the institution on October 31, 1891, 281 were born in New Jersey, 139 in New York and 73 in Pennsylvania. One of the prisoners was born on the Atlantic Ocean on shipboard, and one of them "on the Irish coast". Seventy-seven were born in Germany, 66 in Ireland, 30 in England, 33 in Italy, one in India, and one in Poland. It is curious to note that 804 prisoners are serving their first commitment, 129 their second, 40 their third, 11 their fourth, 3 their fifth, one his seventh, and one his ninth. Seven hundred and eighty-five of the prisoners are white males, 21 females, 175 colored males, and 8 colored females.

Keeper Patterson adds some general remarks to his report on the increase of crime in the United States. He says that owing to the Federal system of government it is impossible to accurately estimate how much is spent in the prevention and punishment of crime. Fifteen million dollars annually is considered a moderate estimate. Omitting State prisons entirely the police forces of the United States require for their support an amount equal to one-tenth the National expenditures. A large percentage of the immigration from other countries is from the lowest strata of society, and leading penologists have ascertained that crime is increasing faster than the growth of the population. Such increase, says the keeper, is more to be dreaded than war; war has become a transitory incident, but there is not the faintest prospect of crime coming to an end. If crime continues to increase at its present ratio the condition of the next century will be absolutely appalling.

A Fanwood Idyl.

New Yorker (advancing upon the octogenarian in charge of the Union News stand at the Fanwood station): Paper of Virgin Leaf."

Octogenarian: "Ain't got none."

New Yorker (pointing): "I see it in that box."

Octogenarian: "Oh!" (Produces it.)

New Yorker throws down a quarter, and receives fifteen cents in change.

New Yorker: "Five cents is the regular price. Now if I wished to buy a copy of the Plainfield PRESS what would you charge?"

Octogenarian: "Five cents."

New Yorker: "So it is true that my friends here cannot be supplied with that paper without paying one hundred and fifty per cent. profit to the Union News company!"

Octogenarian: "I don't know nothin' about it." Closes the window.

New Yorker (soliloquizing): "Well! Five cents for a PRESS; four cents for an edition of any city daily: the PRESS men must edit a great paper!"

Planning for Better Roads and Lights.

The North Plainfield borough council last night elected Lewis Kline to take the place of George Brown on the election board, ordered the proper committees to investigate the distribution of street lights and the condition of the roads in "Bull-frog City", accepted as a public highway Summit avenue from Grandview to Westervelt avenue, authorized the laying of a board walk along Grandview avenue, and adjourned to Feb. 19, when the yearly reports will be made.

[COPYRIGHT, 1892.]

The present social season will show more fine dresses than have ever appeared in Washington before. A great number of the gowns of the wives of our senators and diplomats were made in Paris last summer, and you may see a dozen Worth's dresses at the most ordinary reception. There is scarcely a lady of prominence who has not an almost entirely new wardrobe, and the cost of the clothes at any white house gathering now runs high into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. Mrs. President Harrison has a number of handsome new gowns, and she wore a very fine one on New Year's day. It was made for that occasion, and it consisted of a rich pomegranate satin embroidered in bright bouquets in natural tints, opening over a front petticoat of canary satin. This had a deep brocaded border with draperies of amber and embroidered lace, and the slight V-shaped opening at the throat was filled in with the lace and fastened with a handsome diamond pin and pendant. At this same reception Mrs. McKee brought out one of the new gowns which she had made in Paris last summer. It was a princess of white satin brocaded in velvet, with a design of rose petals. The sleeves were full and the bodice trimmings were of pink chiffon. A wide sash of pale blue moire was fastened to the front at the left side in a big bow, and this had long floating ends. Mrs. McKee has a number of other fine gowns which she got in Europe, and the most of these are to be worn with a broad sash and two wing-like bows at the back. Among Mrs. Harrison's new gowns, which she will bring out later in the season, is one of sage-green brocade with a vest of rose pink embroidered crepe, and another of Mrs. McKee's is a steel gray silk, the waist of which has a tablier effect of Irish point.

Mrs. Wilmerding, the widowed daughter of the secretary of the navy, appeared on New Year's for the first time at a public reception since the sad tragedy which a year since visited the home of Secretary Tracy and within a few moments laid in ruins not only his hearthstone, but deprived him of his wife and daughter at one fell blow. Though sadly broken by the terrible trial, Mrs. Wilmerding has bravely smothered her own grief and for the sake of her father and child again assumed the obligations of her position. Her appearance among the ladies of the cabinet at the white house was a source of sincere pleasure to all, not one of whom but fully appreciated the self-sacrifice of the brave effort. This made Mrs. Wilmerding's gown of white point de soie, trimmed with simple ruffles of chiffon, bespeak the mourning garb, yet evidence the delicacy of her sorrow in the eyes of the world.

Mme. Romero, the wife of the Mexican minister, wields an enviable popularity among Washington hostesses. She recently spent six months abroad, during which time she visited all the capitals of the east, and brought with her upon her return several large trunk loads of superb toilets purchased in London, Paris and Constantinople. Among her elegant Parisian toilets is a dinner dress of heliotrope satin, with long court train, the entire skirt elaborately embroidered in vines and blossoms in cut steel and iridescent passementerie, thickly studded with jewels. The high bodice is trimmed with a fall of lace about the curved opening at the the neck and down the front, a ruffle of the same edging the basque, the whole elegant in its rich simplicity. Another most unique and tasteful gown was purchased in the east. It is a Turkish costume such as is worn by ladies of high rank. The material is a delicate white silk mull elaborately embroidered in gold, the figures being predominant among the Egyptian figures of the border and gold and blue crescents scattered over the surface. She has also a figaro jacket of white broadcloth heavily embroidered in gold, and tied with gold cord and tassel over a shirred tight-fitting waist. One of her handsome reception dresses is of dark sage-green corded silk, brocaded in stripes of roses and white lilacs, the high cut bodice elaborately trimmed with Spanish lace edged with a fall of lace about the hips. An elegant visiting costume is of sage-green satin merveilleuse, combined with embossed panels of richly colored birds poised among rose vines. The postillion basque, with square cut tails, crossed with a broad band of velvet ribbon, forming a loose belt, with long floating ends at the back, high leg-of-mutton sleeves of velvet of the same shade, and moderately high round collar with a jabot of black lace at the throat, completes a most superb costume.

Mrs. Howard Ganson White, of Utica, N. Y., daughter of Senator Sawyer, is distinguished among Washington hostesses for the richness and elegance of her toilets. A woman of fine personal appearance and devoted to social life, she each season presides over her father's handsome house at the capital with a grace and attraction that renders it one of the most charming among social centers. Mrs. White has but recently returned to the city, and has not as yet unpacked the larger portion of her wardrobe. Among the list of those already noticeable is a handsome carriage dress of golden brown cloth ornamented with white and trimmed with ostrich tips. This has a long close-fitting basque of the same and hat and feathers to match, and the combination makes a very stylish and simply elegant costume. A very beautiful evening dress is of pearl-white satin brocaded in bow knots of delicate blue forget-me-nots with their green leaves. A broad band of velvet is fastened around the waist with a big bow at the back; the low-neck bodice is trimmed with sprays of forget-me-nots and lace. A handsome carriage dress, conspicuous for simple elegance, is of brown and white trimmed with ostrich feathers. This has a long basque and felt hat with feathers to correspond. A variety of other equally rich toilets will later be worn by the possessor, whose artistic taste is not only noticeable in her gowns, but in the beautiful furnishing and unrivaled decorations of her father's home, one of the most beautiful interiors in our city of handsome residences. The bride of Gen. Schofield has many elegant new gowns, most of them ordered from New York, that for taste and rich simplicity will outrival some of the newly-imported toilets. Already Mrs. Schofield has had occasion to don a variety of luncheon and dinner dresses upon the numerous occasions during the anti-official entertainments given in her honor. One of her prettiest gowns is of white brocade figured in tiny pink daisies. The skirt and bodice are in one, made with short baby waist with a wide fall of French lace around the neck, and the elbow sleeves are of point d'esprit with ruffle of the lace and capped with the brocade. A broad belt of seed pearls forms a point at the back and front, and a fall of the lace is slashed across with the brocade, the skirt, like all of the new gowns, being bell-shaped with a narrow quilling around the bottom.

IMPORTANT IN SPRING.

Advice What People Should Take.

In the Spring everybody begins to think of taking a Spring medicine. Not only is this a very common practice, but a very necessary and healthful one. It is a fact which physicians acknowledge, and the people recognize generally, that a Spring tonic taken during the months of March, April and May is absolutely necessary.

In the Spring there are great and important changes going on in the body. Perfect health cannot be maintained when the nerves are weak, the system clogged and the organs sluggish. There will be a weak, tired, languid and nervous condition, with sleepless and restless nights, a tired waking in the morning, no appetite for breakfast, a bad taste in the mouth, dull head, biliousness, and a general dispirited feeling.

For such cases as these be sure and use Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great nerve, brain and blood invigorator. It is pronounced by everybody, doctors as well as the people, to be the best Spring medicine in existence, and has taken rank as the greatest and most important medical discovery of modern times. Under the use of this wonderful remedy, the weak, tired and nervous feeling disappears; the nerves become strong and steady; the sleep natural and refreshing; the appetite returns, good digestion and regular action of the bowels are established the kidneys and liver are restored to healthy action, and the vital energies, strength and vigor of the system perfectly built up.

This greatest of all health restorers, is purely vegetable and harmless. Druggists sell it, $1.

N. B. ☞ Dr. Greene, the successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases, 35 W. 14th St., New York, can be consulted, free, personally, or by letter. Call or write him about the case, or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter fully explaining the disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free. 2 2td ttas

A SPROUTING YOUTH.

Loving Uncle (about to visit his sister)—I suppose I ought to buy a few toys for little Henry, my dear little nephew.

Little Henry (of three years ago)—Hello, unk! Put 'er there, ole man! When did yer come down, eh?—Judge.

Association of Ideas.

"John," said a loving wife, "I wish you would sing two or three lines of a song for me."

"What on earth do you want me to do that for?"

"There is something I want you to bring home and I've forgotten what it is, but I think I'll remember it if you sing."

The good-natured husband complied, and the charming wife said:

"I remember now. It's a file I want."—N. Y. Press.

A Clear Case.

"I've been cudgeling my brain for an hour over this thing," said a young Detroit attorney to the older one with whom he is associated in a knotty case.

"Be careful," was the quiet response, "or I'll have you arrested for assault and battery. I'd be sure to win the case, when a man of your size would jump on a little thing like that with a cudgel."—Detroit Free Press.

Tired.

Mrs. Sidon—I've been shopping all day. I am just ready to die, I am so tired.

Mr. Sidon—So am I.

Mrs. Sidon—Goodness! what should make you tired?

Mr. Sidon—The bills that came to the office.—Puck.

The Pity of It.

First Swell—There goes Miller, the richest man in town. What a pity the old fellow has no daughter. Don't you think so?

Second Swell—I don't know. Why?

First Swell—Because she would make such a good wife for me.—Texas Siftings.

She Had Heard So.

What number of facts are still unrecorded in any book! A teacher was hearing her class in natural history recite, and asked a bright-looking little girl:

"What is a ruminating animal?"

"One that chews her cubs," was the innocent reply.—New Moon.

The Only Use for Money.

"If I gave you a quarter what would you do with it?" asked Uncle John.

"Spend it, of course," replied Tommy; "that's all it's good for."—Harper's Young People.

Appreciated.

He often was told in his wife
That a treasure to him had been given;
Yet'twould be the joy of his life
Could he "lay up his treasure in Heaven."

Terrible Scenes at the Hotel Royal Fire.

NO ONE KNOWS HOW MANY DEAD

Seven Blackened Bodies Removed—One Identified.

THE STORY OF AN AWFUL NIGHT.

Crazed With Fear Guests Hurl Themselves from Windows.

Eye-witnesses Tell of the Awful Rapidity With Which the Fire Consumed the House—Miraculous Escapes from Death in a Most Horrible Form—Heroic Acts of a Fireman—He Makes a Bridge of His Body and Several People Cross It in Safety—No One Knows How the Blaze Originated — A Place Where Registering Under Fictitious Names Was Common—Grotesque Crowds Assigned to Rooms at the Gedney—Men, Women and Children, Nearly Naked and Suffering from Cold, Seek Shelter.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The destruction of the Hotel Royal by the fire yesterday paralelled the disaster in Park place some time ago. One hundred firemen are still at work examining the debris.

Where the hotel stood is to-day a mass of debris that lies in a jagged pile not more than four feet above the pavement. That is all that is left to represent five stories of a human habitation—of a hotel that housed from 300 to 400 nightly.

Under that ragged mass lies the crushed, burned, mangled bodies of scores of men and women. When these bodies may see the light of identification is a matter of conjecture.

The number of dead can only be guessed at. There were 110 rooms and suites in the house, and every room was taken at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. A large majority of the rooms had two occupants. This would indicate that there were more than three hundred people in the ill-fated hotel. Less than one hundred have been accounted for.

Every one known to have escaped was either injured or suffered so much from shock that a removal to a neighboring hotel or hospital was necessary.

Story of the Fire.

The fire broke out a few minutes after 8 a. m. and never had fire better food. The building was composed of several very old buildings, amalgamated into the Hotel Royal some years ago.

The flame kindled at the front of the elevator shaft, in the basement, at about the middle depth of the building.

The janitor was at work in the basement at the time, and he was suddenly startled by the flashing up of flames. He rushed to the street and notified the policeman on the Sixth avenue corner, who sent in an alarm while the janitor rushed back into the building to arouse the sleeping guests.

The blaze had already shot up the elevator shaft, finding kindling as inflammable as tinder in the framework.

The Instrument of Death.

The elevator shaft—that instrument of death in scores of great fires—had drawn the flames up, and by the time the alarm was turned in the fire was breaking from the roof, the building was doomed and its occupants in the hands of Providence.

While the elevator shaft was an element of destruction, it was also an instrument of salvation. The flames shot up this great flue with a roar like that of a cyclone, and this great noise aroused many to a realization of their danger, and warned them to escape from a horrible heath. Those aroused by this great roar of the flames shouted the warning to their fellow guests.

Then came a scene of terror and horror probably never equaled in the city of New York. At almost every window on the Fortieth street and Sixth avenue fronts of the hotel appeared white-robed figures of men and women, their faces blanched and distorted with terror, and their voices raised in a heartrending chorus of supplication to God and man to save them.

Story of an Eye-witness.

The most intelligent description of the holocaust was given by James T. Powers, who is stopping at the Gedney House.

"I have been trying to sleep," said Mr. Powers, "but I can't; do it. No sooner do I close my eyes than the whole thing comes back to me like a horrible nightmare.

"My God! It was terrible! Those poor men and poor women! I can hear them shriek even now.

"I was standing on the corner, just outside the hotel, smoking a cigar and talking to a friend.

"I happened to glance through Fortieth street over to Sixth avenue, when I saw a little bit of flame break out of the roof of the Hotel Royal.

"'Hello!' says I, 'I guess the roof's on fire,' and I went over leisurely to see what it amounted to.

"I had gone but a few yards when the whole roof seemed ablaze in an instant.

"I ran over and looked through the office windows, and saw one big sheet of flame that appeared to run from the ground floor straight up the air shaft to the roof, illuminating every floor like a furnace.

Piteously Crying to Be Saved.

"Instantly every window seemed filled with men, women and children crying out piteously for those below to save them.

"'Take us down!'

"'For God's sake, save us!'

"'Don't let us burn to death!'

"My God! It was terrible! I can see them and hear them now. Oh, what a terrible old fire-trap it must have been.

"The few men who were on the scene acted like madmen. I suppose I must have done so myself, but I shouted to the men on the sidewalk to keep quiet and not urge the people to jump.

"As soon as I got there, I grabbed a man and told him, for his life, to run to the nearest fire alarm box and send in an alarm. He did so.

"Then I called to the poor wretches in the building:

"'Don't jump! Wait! The firemen will be here in a minute! Wait! Wait! For your lives wait!'

"But it seemed an age before the firemen got there, and I really believe it was ten minutes before the first ladder was raised, and the building was then one mass of flame.

Crazed With Fear.

"The poor wretches, many of them crazed with fear, jumped from the windows. One man especially attracted my attentin.

"I shut my eyes so as not to see him, but I heard him strike with a sound that made my blood run cold.

"I saw one man jump from the fourth story. The poor devil's clothes were on fire, and he came down like a stone and struck the sidewalk only a few feet from me.

"When I opened my eyes he lay there a mangled corpse, with his brains scattered over the sidewalk.

A Brave, Heroic Act.

"I saw a man, too, at the third-story window furthest toward Thirty-ninth street take three little girls and a woman and pass them along the cornice into an adjoining window in the next building. Then he followed them.

"It was a brave, heroic act and fearfully dangerous, but all were saved.

"There seemed to be more people on the third floor than elsewhere, and God only knows how any of them were saved.

"I saw at least fifteen men and women rush to the windows, look out despairingly, and then fall back in the flames. Whether any were saved I do not know."

Daring Rescue.

Among the daring rescues was that performed by Lieutenant John R. Vaughn of Fire Patrol No. 3. When engine No. 26 arrived at the scene Vaughn saw a man at a third story window. He was half-dressed and waving his hands frantically.

Vaughn seized an axe and rushed to the door of No. 690 Sixth avenue, next to the hotel. He beat in the door and made his way through the smoke upstairs to the third floor. It was a flat house. The fireman called to the man, who was leaning out of the hotel window, saying: "Don't jump; I'll help you."

At that moment George Burke of Patrol No. 3 appeared, and Vaughn lay down flat on the sill, and Burke sat on his feet. Vaugh reached to the window of the hotel where the man was, with his hands resting on a telegraph wire, thus forming a bridge.

Passed Over a Human Bridge.

The first one to pass over this human bridge from the burning building was Mrs. Phelps, wife of one of the proprietors of the hotel. She was quickly followed by an employe of the hotel, then the son of Mrs. Phelps. The strain upon the fireman was very great, but he heroically held on. When drawn up to the windowsill he fell inside the room exhausted. He quickly jumped to his feet, however, and said that he was ready for more work of the same kind.

It was soon at hand. A man was seen standing on the coping on the Fortieth street side of the hotel crying for help, and Vaughn bolted downstairs to the street and made his way to the building adjoining. There was apparently no means of effecting a rescue from there. The man still stood in the window. Vaughn, supported by a member of his company, hung down from the window of the next house and rescued the man, who was pretty badly burned.

Remarkable Escape.

Charles Carson and Thomas Kelly of Engine No. 1, went to the rescue of a man on the fifth floor, which they had reached by scaling ladders. The rescuers got the man to the third floor, when the ladder gave way, and, clasping hands, the three men leaped to the pavement and escaped unhurt.

Lost His Son.

J. E. Avery, manager of the salesmen's department in the American Tobacco company, occupied a room on the fourth floor with his son. "I was awakened by the glare of the flames rushing from the elevator shaft. I ran into the hall, but was met by flames and smoke. In the confusion I lost sight of my boy. God knows what has become of him.

"I got out of the window and hung by my fingers to the ledge until I was taken off by the firemen. That is all that I can tell. If I were to talk an hour I could give no more facts."

Dr. O. Laske, who was a resident of the hotel, says:

A Mass of Flames.

"I was awakened by the noise of the flames rushing up the elevator shaft. I opened the window of my room and saw the 'L' portion of the building on the Fortieth street side a mass of flames. I ran into the hall and shouted 'fire' and [illegible]

"Then I climbed on a fire escape to the roof of the cafe, which was level with the second-story windows.

"There I met Mr. Levy, a liquor dealer. Both of us were barefooted and wore only our night-shirts.

"Women were screaming from windows all around us, almost naked, like ourselves.

"I and Mr. Levy, instead of making our own escape, set about to save those around us, and I broke with my feet a window on the roof and dragged a mattrass from the bed.

"This I threw to the ground in the yard. Then, taking the frantic women, we dropped them from the roof to the mattrass.

Dr. Laske's Escape.

"The distance was about twenty feet, but the fall was broken and at least fifteen women were able to escape through the basement of a neighboring house. Both of us were fairly cool and did our work as carefully as possible.

"At last as the last woman was let over the edge of the roof we thought of escape for ourselves. The tin roof was becoming unberable to our naked feet and the air around us was scorching.

"Breaking a glass in a skylight in the cafe roof, we dropped to the floor inside. There we groped about in the stifling smoke until we reached the Sixth avenue door. Levy broke the glass in the door with a chair, and we reached the outer air through the apperture thus made just as the interior to the cafe was filled with flames.

"I was taken at once to the Gedney House, where I was placed in room 87. I was somewhat bruised, and my left hand was cut and burned. My wounds were dressed and at the present time I am resting comfortably.

"I hear that Levy was killed. He was a hero. He was made of stern stuff. I have seen men cool in perilous positions, but I never saw any man wich a nerve like his."

Searching the Ruins.

It is creditable to the police and firemen that, as soon as it was possible to do so, a search of the ruins was at once begun, with a view to recovering the bodies of the unfortunate victims. A hundred firemen were detailed to do the work.

Their efforts were soon awarded by the finding of the body of Henry C. Levy.

It was evident that the disorder attending the classification of the bodies and effects at the recent Park Place disaster, was not to be repeated. The police took all the wearing apparel, jewelry and other effects of the guests as fast as recovered by the firemen from the ruins. They then separated the male from the female attire and effects, and as far as possible clasified them by lots.

Took Matters Coolly.

Among the narrow escapes related is that of Wm. C. Thompkins of this city, who was a transient guest. He was aroused by the cries of fire and finding escape impossible by the stairs, coolly packed his things together and lowered himself to the ground by means of the rope fire escape which he found in the room. When on the ground he gathered up his effects, which he had previously thrown out of the window, and went elsewhere to finish his sleep.

The Hotel Royal.

The Hotel Royal was built more than twenty-five years ago. It was formerly kept by Messrs. Paris & Bufer, but the present proprietor leased it thirteen years ago. In 1882 it was remodeled and the south-adjoining building was added to it. It had 124 rooms. Many actors and transient patrons stopped there, but many families were permanent guests.

The somewhat elaborate restaurant was liberally patronized by the class which keeps late hours.

The loss on the hotel and furniture is estimated at $350,000. The building is the property of Hyman Israel, furniture dealer.

Mr. Meares made a feature of serving frequenters of the French balls, when their annual revels were transferred from the old Academy to the Metropolitan Opera House. He had some reputable guests, and some who hired rooms for the night only. A good many of the latter were couples who came late at night and left early the next morning, and of whom no questions were asked as a rule. Their aliases makes the list of missing practically impossible to verify.

The nature of the complications which are likely to arise was shown last night when a man and women called at the New York Hospital and identified the woman who was taken there with a fractured skull and thigh. The injured woman's name, at the request of her identifiers, was withheld by the hospital authorities.

A Grotesque Crowd at the Gedney.

The night clerk of the Gedney House was startled at about 3:30 by a man rushing in and asking him and if he had thirty vacant rooms.

"What do you want with thirty rooms?" asked the clerk.

"Why our guests at the Royal are burned out. They must have a place to put up."

"All right," said the clerk, "We'll make room for them."

The man ran out and in a few minutes steps arrived at the Gedney probably the most grotesque party that ever struck that hostelry. There were men, women and one little child. Some in night clothes, and the others partly dressed, and all shivering with the cold and greatly excited.

There was a great ringing of bells and hustling of "fronts," and in a few minutes the queer looking party had been assigned to rooms. Some of them were in a bad way. Their faces were cut and bleeding and a number of the men and women limped through the corridor, and one woman had to be carried to the elevator.

A Second Fire.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—At 7:10 o'clock last night the fire broke out again in the ruins of the basement. It was extinguished quickly.

The Firemen Praised.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—The "Daily News" speaks highly of the conducto the New York Fire Department at the Hotel Royal fire. The "News" says the department made a striking record, the result of a perfect course of training.

Wants Her Wrongs Righted.

WASHINGTON, Feb 8.—Senator Turpie has introduced a bill to right the wrongs Mary Stuart Laselle believes she has sustained, and to recompense her for sufferings and services which is believed to be wholly unique. She was an employe in the Census Bureau and her experience there is set forth in a memorial accompanying the bill. In it she says she was appointed a computer at a salary of $720 a year. Entering upon the discharge of her duties May 7, she faithfully performed them until about 11 o'clock of Wednesday Nov. 26, (the day before Thanksgiving, 1890,) when she was dismissed without warning, while she says, she was serving the interests of the country.

Condemned by the Public.

BERLIN, Feb. 8.—It is believed that the sentence passed on Count Limburg Stirum, of dismissal from the public service, and to lose his pension, and to be deprived of his diplomatic title of ambassador, for publishing an article in the Kreutz Zeitung against the commercial treaties, will arouse the Conservatives against the government. The public generally condemn the sentence as extremely severe.

Horrible Crime.

A Flemming as rector of St. Aloysius; Father Brennan from Morris Plains to succeed Father McManus as pastor of the Sacred Heart Church at Newark, and Father Egan to succeed Father Brennan at Morris Plains.

Probably Assumed Names.

Variety Actresses Fight.

LEADVILLE, Col., Feb. 8.—Lottie Arbor and Lizzie Cullum, two variety actresses engaged in a bloody affray at an early hour at their room. Miss Arbor drew a long knife from the folds of her dress and savagely plunged it four times into the breast of her antagonist. The latter will die. Both women loved the same man who paid attention to both. Miss Arbor is in jail.

Mysteriously Disappeared.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Camil Lassen, a young German, arrived here on Thursday in the steamer Ems from Bremen, intending to go at once to the residence of Joseph Morwitz, No. 237 North Sixth street, Philadelphia. He has mysteriously disappeared, and there are fears of foul play, as he had drafts for a large amount on his person.

BLAINE WITHDRAWS

Declines to be a Candidate for the Presidency.

LETTER TO GENERAL CLARKSON

His Name Will Not Go Before the Republican Convention.

Asks His Friends to Make an Earnest Effort in the Approaching Contest, Which He Says is an Important One Because the Financial and Industrial Policies of the Government are at Stake—Views of Prominent Men.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The following letter has been made public:

"WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.

"Hon. J. S. CLARKSON, chairman of the National Republican Committee:

"MY DEAR SIR: I am not a candidate for the Presidency, and my name will not go before the Republican National Convention for the nomination. I make this announcement in due season.

"To those who have tendered me their support I owe sincere thanks and am most grateful for their confidence. They will, I am sure, make earnest effort in the approaching contest, which is rendered specially important by reason of the industrial and financial policies of the Government being at stake. The popular decision on these issues is of great moment and will be of far-reaching consequence. Very sincerely yours,

"JAMES G. BLAINE."

Secretary Rusk said: "It will result, I think, in President Harrison's renomination."

HON. JAMES G. BLAINE.

"Will it open the field for other candidates, or restrict it?"

"The field has always been an open one, but several gentlemen, to whom Secretary Blaine was a block, will enter the race."

"Will Ohio have a candidate?"

"No."

"For whom will she be?"

"For Harrison. Ohio has always felt very friendly toward Blaine, but she has never supported him for the Presidency, always having had in contests where he entered, a candidate of her own.

"I did not know," said Secretary Elkins, "that Mr. Blaine had written a letter, but he told a number of gentlemen that he would not be a candidate, and was satisfied that he would not be."

Secretary Tracy; "I am not surprised. I've been expecting such a letter for some time. It points to Harrison's renomination and re-election.

Secretary Noble said: "With Blaine out of the field, there is no man of sufficient national importance to contest the nomination with Mr. Harrison. His administration has been fair, just and upright. He will be renominated unanimously and re-elected. As Mr. Blaine says, his declination is made "in due season."

Senator Cullom, of Illinois, says that as Secretary Blaine has withdrawn he, the Senator, is in the race for the Republican nomination for President.

BEER NOT SPIRITUOUS.

Decision Rendered By United States District Judge Knowles.

HELENA, Mont., Feb. 8.—Beer is not spirituous liquor, according to a decision rendered here by Judge Knowles, United States District Judge. This is an original ruling by a Federal Court on this subject.

Of the State courts that have passed upon the question, those of New Hampshire, West Virginia and Tennessee have agreed with the Judge's ruling, while the Court of North Carolina and one in New York have held the contrary.

The case on trial was that of a man who sold a bottle of beer to an Indian on the Crow Reservation. He was discharged. The Federal statutes provide a penalty for selling spirituous liquors or wine to an Indian on a reservation.

May Be Duke of London.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Among all the titles which have been proposed for Prince George of Wales it is now considered that the most probable of adoption is that of Duke of London. This would be an entirely new title, and would therefore be subject to none of the objections raised by some people against the alleged unfortunate association of titles which have been borne before and have become extinct, in the original family and whenever revived, in from one to four generations. The title of the Duke of Clarence is one of those regarded with superstitious disfavor.

To Enter Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—A special dispatch from Detroit quotes President Joy, of the Wabash, as saying that the road will be running into Chicago over its own tracks before the end of the present year. The money arrangements to build the road from Montpelier to Chicago have been completed. A syndicate, made up in New York, bought the bonds, $8,500,000 in amount. The Canadian Pacific has no part in it.

"No baking powder is gaining public favor so rapidly as Cleveland's."

One reason is people like to know what they are eating, and the composition of Cleveland's baking powder is given on every label.

So many baking powders containing ammonia or alum are widely advertised as "absolutely pure," the best way is to refuse any brand the composition of which is concealed.

WEBSTER'S CRIME.

He Will be Placed on Trial for Murder on February 15.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Burton C. Webster, gambler and bookmaker, charged with the crime of murder in the first degree, who has been a prisoner in the Tombs since August 7, 1891, is at last to be put on trial.

The case is set down for Friday, February 15, and the district attorney promises that there will be no more delay.

The crime for which Webster was indicted and imprisoned was the shooting and killing of Charles E. Goodwin, jr., in the latter's apartments in the Percival, 230 West Forty-second street, on the night of August 2.

At the time of its occurrence the crime created a tremendous sensation, not only on account of its apparent cold-bloodedness and deliberation, but because of the peculiar relations of the parties involved and the strange stories which were floating about in connection with some of them, which gave it a flavor of mystery and which aroused public curiosity to the highest pitch.

An important feature of the case was the woman at the bottom of the affair. She was Evelyn Granville, who had at one time been an actress, but had more recently become notorious in other roles.

At the time of the murder of Goodwin she was living with Gambler Webster, who preferred to call her his "common law wife," a term which she herself admitted accurately described her position.

After the shooting of Goodwin, Webster mysteriously disappeared. He remained in concealment in this city for nearly a week, despite the efforts of the police to find his hiding place.

Then he surrendered himself Aug. 7, at the office of his lawyers, Howe & Hummel, and at the coroner's investigation claimed that he had acted in self-defense in killing Goodwin.

It was said at the time that he might have avoided arrest altogether and easily have escaped from the city to some foreign country, had it not been that some very uncomfortable rumors had leaked out which made it unwise for those who knew of his place of concealment to attempt to shield him any longer from justice.

Webster is not an indigent person. He has plenty of money and many influential friends among his associates of the betting ring and the gambling palaces. Even while he is languishing in a Tombs cell his horses are winning big stakes at the race tracks almost every week.

Belmont Fescued by Cranks.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—August Belmont is the latest acquaintance to the list of New York millionaires pestered by cranks. A man named Richard Nixon, formerly employed at the Belmont mansion in Fifth avenue as a butler, went to the house last Saturday night very drunk and demanded the wages he said was due him. He threatened to kill Mr. Belmont, and for a time created great excitement among the inmates of the house. Mr. Belmont sent for the police, who took Nixon to the station. Mr. Belmont declined to press a charge against Nixon and he was discharged. Since then he has hung around the Belmont mansion much to the annoyance of the family, who fear he will do harm. Police protection was claimed to-day, and an officer was detailed to watch the mansion and arrest Nixon if he should appear.

Spreckles and the Sugar Trust.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—A well-known sugar importer said to-day that he had positive assurance that Claus Spreckles had joined the sugar trust, so far as his Philadelphia refinery was concerned. As to the San Francisco business, the importer said, Spreckles would retain possession of that, but with limitations as to territory in which to sell sugar. So confident are the importers and weighers of sugar that Spreckles has gone into the trust despite all denials, that many of them believe their occupation will soon be gone, as the trust does not require their services.

Traffic Manager Hubbs' Discharge.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 8.—It is stated that the reason for the discharge of General Traffic Manager Hubbs of the Southern Pacific Railroad, as demanded by Jay Gould, was because Hubbs violated the rule of the Trans-Continental Association in regard to cutting rates by taking one hundred carloads of sugar from this city to Chicago at 65 cents per hundred. Gould found out about this great cut and at once demanded Hubbs' discharge. Hubbs received a salary of $30,000 a [illegible]

Pastor Warnick's Successful Ministry.

At the Mt. Olive church, yesterday afternoon, pastor F. G. Warnick baptized four before a crowded house, and last evening he extended the hand of fellowship to seven.

Sunday night the house was filled to its utmost capacity to listen to Miss Watson, the returned missionary from Burmah. During her lecture Miss Watson exhibited several idols and also native costumes.

The pastor's report was read and showed that $1,140 had been raised during the past year. All current expenses and salaries had been met, and over $200 paid on old debts. Twenty-five had been added to the church. Mr. Warnick has just completed his first pastoral year with the church, and has improved it in every respect.

ORGANIST AND CHURCH AT ODDS.

Trouble Among Presbyterians Over the Question of Who Shall Run the Music.

A learned wiseman of years gone by once made the sage remark that when the devil succeeded in gaining entrance to a church he at once went into the organ loft and took his place among the choir. The wisdom of that remark has received abundant verification in these latter days, and there are those who quote it in connection with the trouble that has just arisen in the First Presbyterian church in this city.

A rupture has existed for some time between Clarence Eick, organist, and John M. Bettman, chairman of the music committee. It has been no secret that Eick told one of the choir members, Miss Blanche Fellows, who is a niece of Mr. Bettman, that her "uncle John might run the rest of the church, but should n't run this end".

Each Sunday the choir sing five selections besides the regular hymns. The members found it impossible to do justice to the special music without preparation, and so suggested to the music committee that one week's notice be given them of all music to be sung. As a result organist Eick was called before the session of the church and after some argument he promised to give the desired notice. Relations were so strained, however, between Mr. Eick and Mr. Bettman, that Mr. Bettman would wait after service and ask each choir member as he came out if Mr. Eick had given him the music for the next Sunday. Occasionally Mr. Eick neglected to do so, and a storm resulted. The breach grew wider, and at last hostile resentment developed into open defiance. Once or twice the organist sent in his resignation, but each time he was petted and cajoled, and induced to remain.

Mr. Eick has been planning to give the oratorio of "The Crucifixion" in the church on Good Friday. Instead of going to the music committee or the session he went to Dr. Ketcham and asked permission to use the church for that purpose. Dr. Ketcham said he had no objection, but intimated that it was proper for him to get consent from the music committee or session. Public announcement was made of the approaching musical event. Mr. Bettman, Mr. Lounsbury, and others of the music committee, were indignant that Mr. Eick had made arrangements for the occasion without consulting them. They were willing to grant permission, but did not like the way Mr. Eick sought to brush away their authority. Mr. Eick appealed to Dr. Ketcham, who had always been a warm friend of his, and the clergyman at once wrote a letter to Eick telling him that his consent to the use of the church had been only that of a pastor and that as he said before Mr. Eick must apply to the music committee or the session. This Eick refused to do. The session met Friday night to receive and grant his application for the use of the church. Instead he sent in his resignation. This time it was promptly accepted. Last night the praise service had to be given under difficulties. Mr. Eick sat in the congregation and listened. Mr. French from the congregation acted as organist, and under the circumstances did admirably. The affair is still in an unsettled condition, as Mr. Eick evidences a desire to continue as organist, in spite of his resignation, which some believe he did not think would be accepted. Feeling among the church people is almost wholly against him. One member says: "He is just like a spoiled child, and by always insisting on his own way has caused much trouble, even to the extent of driving an excellent singer from the choir. We expect to see him back at the organ next Sunday, but he 'll have to be very penitent and submit to the dictation of the church rulers."

A few side with Mr. Eick and say that if he leaves the church they will too. The trouble has caused considerable excitement in the church.

An entertainment will be given next Monday evening, beginning at 8. All boys and their friends are invited to attend.

Boys, remember to bring your pennies with you to-morrow evening, or else Friday evening. There was deposited by the boys during the month of January $38 14, and withdrawn $1.51. This is an excellent showing for the boys.

KILLED BY THE WRECK.

Fireman Bradley Terribly Mangled in a Reading Railroad Collision.

Patrick Bradley, fireman on a Philadelphia and Reading freight locomotive, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, this city, yesterday, from frightful injuries received in a collision of the Reading road near the crossing of the Lehigh Valley road at Weston, Somerset county.

Bradley's locomotive had backed in on a siding to take out a train of empty cars. When it started ahead the train parted, and the engine was backed in again to reconnect the cars. The switchman came down from his tower to see what was the matter. He left the danger signal set, so that no other train should approach while the cars were being drilled. The heavy cannon-ball freight drawn by the huge Reading locomotive 909 came thundering down the track at a speed much greater than that which the law stipulates shall not be exceeded at this point. The engineer saw the danger signal and whistled for brakes, but it was a frosty morning, and most of the train hands were in the caboose keeping warm. Such brakes as were operated failed to check the speed of the train, and with a terrific crash that was heard by people in their beds at Bound Brook the monster locomotive crashed into the drill engine. The wreck was a very bad one, and delayed traffic over both the Reading and Lehigh roads several hours. Both locomotives were totally wrecked. Bradley was terribly crushed in the mass of wreckage, but was still alive when brought to this city at 6:30 a. m. He died during the forenoon. He leaves a wife and two children at Philadelphia.

ARRESTED FOR EMBEZZLEMENT.

A Plainfield Young Man Sells His Employer's Goods for His Own Profit.

William H. Ross, aged twenty-two years, was arraigned in the Elizabeth police court Saturday on a charge of embezzlement. Ross was in the employ of John Goff, a Plainfield produce dealer, and went to Elizabeth with a load of produce, which he sold, and pocketed the money. He likewise tried to sell the horse and wagon, but while he was hunting up a purchaser the chief of police was informed of his peculiar actions and he was arrested. Mr. Goff went on from Plainfield and made a formal complaint against the prisoner, who was committed to jail for trial. His father was formerly a produce merchant on Broad street, Elizabeth, and now lives at Roselle.

Young Mr. Hyde Bid It In.

The Port Gibson cotton mills in Mississippi appear to be in a bad way. It has not been long since the institution was sold out under a foreclosure, after a long period of idleness, and the statement is now published that it was again sold by the sheriff on Monday, under foreclosure of a deed of trust of $20,000, plus interest, the first incumbrance.

Through E. S. Drake, esq., his attorney, the creditor, Louis K. Hyde of this city, bid in the factory for $5,000, free of debt. It has not been learned what the purchaser will do with it. Mr. Hyde is not entirely unknown in Mississippi, being one of the largest holders of bonds in the New Orleans and Northwestern railway, the present southern terminus of which is Natchez. The mills referred to above do not appear to have ever been profitable.

The Small Boys Beat the Big Fellows.

Five small, lively boys laden with roller skates and polo sticks clattered into the PRESS office Saturday afternoon to ask that it be "put in the paper" that they had just won a polo game in the Crescent rink. They styled themselves the Arlingtons, and gave as their respective names Henry Angerbauer, Garret Mattis, Bert Kurzhals, Frank Vail and Joe Sutphen. Their opponents, they said, were Bill Buster, Owen Smith, Jim McGinley, Tom Rafferty and Irving Neighbor. Will Wyckoff was "empire". The score was 2 to 1. "The udder team was big fellers"—they said.—"It was a great game. We'd ought t' hev credit, cos we played hard to beat, an' we done it."

Called Out by a Furnace Fire.

The sexton of the Methodist church started to rebuild the fires, which had gone out, in the church furnaces, at midnight Saturday, and as a result a great volume of smoke and sparks poured from the chimney and rolled along before the wind over the roof. Passers-by thought the church afire, and an alarm was rung in from box 42. The recall was promptly sounded.

Found — not lately, but 25 years ago — something that perfectly and permanently cures Catarrh in the Head. It's Doctor Sage's Catarrh Remedy — and where everything else fails, that cures. The worst chronic cases yield to its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties. See if yours won't. The makers of this Remedy say it will. And they make you this offer: if they can't cure your Catarrh, no matter how bad your case, they'll pay you $500 in cash—and they mean it.

Here are some of the symptoms of Catarrh; Headache; obstruction of nose; discharges falling into throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, bloody, putrid, and offensive; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness; offensive breath; smell and taste impaired, and general debility. You won't have all at once; probably only a few of them. But you won't have any of them, if you'll take Dr. Sage's Remedy.

Mrs. Albert Beers was assisted at the reception she tendered her friends at her home on Broadway, Saturday afternoon, by Mrs. Nichols and Mrs. Patterson. It being an anniversary of her wedding, she was attended by eight bridesmaids as follows: The Misses Gussie and Minnie Murray, the Misses Grace, Estelle and Genevieve Daniel, Miss Alice Holmes, Miss Kate Kimball and Miss Emma Miller.

The deceased left, besides other property, valuable real estate in Chicago and Pittsburgh.

Presidents of the Reading and the Jersey Central Confer.

President McLeod of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad and President J. Rogers Maxwell of the Jersey Central railroad had a long conference in the office of the last-named gentleman Saturday. The coal situation was thoroughly discussed, and there is good reason to believe that harmonious relations will be preserved between the two roads. Neither Mr. McLeod nor Mr. Maxwell was disposed to say anything about the nature of their talk, but Mr. Maxwell intimated strongly that it had nothing to do with any changes in railway management.

In the stock exchange trading the coal stocks boomed. Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, which had closed at 148 on Friday, went up to 152, and ended the day at 151¾. Reading advanced 2¼ points, and Jersey Central ran up from 120⅝ to 125¼. The exchange had a story that there was a delightful amount of harmony among the presidents of the coal roads, and that the war was to be ended. There was very heavy dealing in all these stocks. Drexel, Morgan & Co. were credited with being heavy buyers of Reading stock.

—A very pleasant way of spending this evening would be a visit to the Bible normal class, which meets in the primary department of the First Baptist church, at 8. The subject to-night will be "An Introductory Study in the Book of Leviticus". Anyone, old or young, will be cordially welcome.

Says Martin Did n't Want the Place.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your issue of the 6th inst., under the heading "What the Mayor Says", I notice that he says "I have the utmost esteem for Mr. Waters's qualities and for his services of the past" and "Mr. Waters served his term satisfactorily". Then what excuse has his honor for not re-appointing him? I understand Mr. Martin was not an aspirant for the office, and that he so informed the mayor. A petition, signed by 102 out of 160 members of the fire department, besides over one hundred non-members, was sent to the mayor asking that Mr. Waters be retained as first assistant to the chief engineer, yet this petition was ignored, and a majority of our volunteer firemen were slighted.

The mayor also asks "But is one man to be kept in one office always?" Why would not this term also apply to the office of chief engineer, street commissioner, chief of police, corporation counsel, and a majority of our police force? Are they not kept in office for the reason that they perform the duties of their offices "satisfactorily", and does n't his honor say that that was the case with Mr. Waters?

Mr. Waters is a poor, hard-working man, always ready and willing when duty calls, and deserving of re-appointment to the position. EX-FIREMAN.

Thinks the Firemen Ought to Elect.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your issue of Saturday evening you quote an interview with his honor the mayor, referring to the appointing of assistant engineer of the fire department, in which the mayor says: "But is one man to be kept in one office always?" If that is his reason for the change, I for one cannot see it in that light. Does the mayor know how long the chief of the fire department has held his present position? I think if there was going to be a change that is where it should have been made also, and furthermore the common council ought to pass an ordinance whereby the firemen can elect their superior officers, same as other cities of this size do, which I know would be very satisfactory to everyone.

A HARD-WORKING FIREMAN.

Praise for an Excellent Work.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I would like to draw the attention of the public through your popular columns to the entertainment furnished to young men every Saturday evening at the Y. M. C. A. rooms. Last Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins and Mr. Drury presented a programme that cannot be spoken of too highly, and the association should receive the hearty support of all young men in their noble work. They invite all young men to come. They extend the right hand of good fellowship to all, and a most hearty welcome is given to those who attend. ONE WHO WAS THERE.

Cards of Admission Will Be Necessary.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In the notice of the first public appearance of the High School Lyceum in Friday's PRESS, the statement was made that the public would be welcome on that occasion. While this is true, yet admission will be necessarily by card, through the committee of arrangements or the officers of the lyceum. J. C. WHITING, president.

The Finest Concert Plainfield Ever Knew.

Wednesday morning at the pharmacies of H. P. Reynolds, corner of Park and North avenues, and corner of Front street and Park avenue, the subscription lists will be opened for the concert of the New York Symphony Orchestra of 65 pieces, conducted by Walter Damrosch, to be given at Music Hall, Tuesday evening, March 8. Seats will be sold at 75 cents, $1 and $1.50. A prominent vocalist will appear in the programme.

JUST SIMPLE "MRS".

But She Sings Straight Out From Her Throat Better Than All the Muses on the Operatic Stage To-day.

In its report of the Seidl concert at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, the Eagle of that city speaks as follows of the soprano star who is to sing at the next Metropolis concert in the Plainfield Casino:

"There was a surprise in the concert that came in the form of singing by Lillian Blauvelt. This little woman, who was a member of Plymouth church choir not long ago, and who has been singing in concert and opera in Europe, comes back without puffery or sensational advertising and discloses ability that puts her into the rank of Albani, Nordica, Eames and other of our native artists who are praised and prized. She sang 'Pleurez, mes yeaux' from Massenet's 'Cid', then a gay lilt with Spanish color, by the same composer, for a recall piece—in these Victor Herbert led the band—and she also took part in the Mascagni music. Her voice is true, pure, sweet and expressive, of rare power, wide range, exquisite finish and the best of schooling.

"If she has been studying in Europe she has had the sense and taste to reject the unpleasant and inartistic traits of style that some of the most celebrated of European teachers impart to their pupils—French teachers especially. Mrs. Blauvelt speaks clearly; she sings with judgment; she knows her limitations and never tries to force her notes beyond them, either in height, depth or strength; she has dramatic impulse that freshens and enlivens her work, and she has soul. Why cannot a dozen such singers be assembled into an American opera company that shall give us the best things of all countries, in the vernacular?

"Mrs. Blauvelt sings better than any Italian in the Italian opera company now in New York, and America is giving more material to the operatic and lyric stage in Europe than Europe is likely to pay back in a good many years. Why should we not conserve this talent? Why should not girls trained in our cities take their own names, call themselves Miss and Mistress instead of Signora and Signorina and Madame and, Mademoiselle and sing straight out from their throats in plain United States language? Affectations are bad enough when they are copied from people superior to those who assume them; when copied from those who are inferior they become ridiculous. Americans who call themselves Madame are more often adventuresses or inferior dressmakers than artists."

The Food and Health Exposition.

New York will have an important exhibition at the Lenox lyceum, Madison avenue and 59th street, from March 5 to April 2. The New York Retail Grocers' union will give the second food and health exposition under its auspices, and the food products exhibited will cover a wide range in the goods which the consumer obtains from the grocer, and which the consumer very properly wants to know all about. The purity of food products now in general use, the preparations of these products for the table, the practical tests of new productions and the improvements on old ones are demonstrated by this exposition. The exhibitors will spend money with a free hand in decorations and will be free handed in the distribution of their goods. The serving of cooked food will be a specialty, and no housekeeper can fail to get useful information. More than this, there will be free lectures and object lessons in cooking by competent teachers from the noted cooking schools. The Lenox Lyceum will be a good place to visit and as all the space is taken, and manager and exhibitors are in earnest for success, the public will be benefited by the exhibition and success seems assured.

Fossil News From New York.

The Sunday New York Herald each week attempts to record the society news of this city, and the select array of chestnut items with which his local correspondent regales the erratic James Gordon Bennett is enough to bring him back from Europe on a run and make the elder J. G. B. turn a hand-spring in his grave Yesterday, for instance, the Herald ambiguously recounted a meeting of our Free Lance club "on Wednesday evening", which really occurred a week and a half ago, and said that "on Tuesday Oscar Fay Adams delivered a lecture at the Casino", which was also eminently untrue. Mr. Adams's lecture took place a week ago Saturday night. And to top off, an item about a Plainfield family who anticipate a European tour is stolen word for word from the PRESS of eleven days ago, Jan. 28, and printed as "news". There is no doubt that the Herald is a great paper, but it ought to scare up a Plainfield correspondent who can keep pace with the times.

Dixey in Two Plays in One Night.

Henry E. Dixey and a competent company of comedians, under the management of Charles Frohman, will be seen at Music Hall Friday evening next, in the latest New York success, "The Solicitor". The departure of Mr. Dixey from the burlesque field of acting to legitimate comedy has proved a wise one.

Preceding "The Solicitor" will be given "A Tangled Skein", a bright one-act farce by Benj. F. Roeder. Mr. Dixey will be supported by competent players, including Miss Virginia Buchanan, Miss Josephine Plowe-Day, Miss Belle Buckite, Miss Marie Greenwald, Miss Fanny Cohen, Messrs. Lewis Baker, Robert Hickman, Joseph Frankau, Walter Granville, Fred Owen Baxter, Samuel Opstein, J. W. Glenmore, and others.

DEAR MADAM:

You speak of using my recent letter as a testimonial—you are perfectly welcome to do so—would that I could influence all suffering women to give your compound a fair trial. I must say to you that it is an invaluable medicine, and, if used according to directions, will prove a certain cure for the diseases it is recommended for. It has been very, very beneficial to myself and daughter.

SAVED BY A FIERCE FLAME.

A Mother and Daughter Snatched From the Burning in Answer to Their Prayer.

Among those who were rescued from the burning Hotel Royal in New York city, yesterday morning, were Mrs. Julia Fulper, widow of William H. Fulper brother of Wilson F. Fulper of this city, and her daughter, Miss Julia Fulper. Mrs. Fulper, who lives in Flemington, had gone to New York to see her daughter, who is a pupil at Miss Gardiner's school on Fifth avenue, and Miss Fulper was spending the night with her mother at the hotel. Mrs Fulper was slightly burned and is suffering from the shock. Miss Fulper had her hair singed.

Their escape was attended with many exciting incidents. Mrs. Fulper, who is an elderly lady, went to New York on Saturday to spend Sunday with her daughter. They went to a matinee and passed a very pleasant evening, entertaining some friends in the hotel after dinner. Their room was on the third floor and faced 40th street. They went to bed early, but did not awake until the fire had got a good hold on the building. They could hear the flames sweeping through the hall on their floor, and the young girl had the presence of mind to keep the door locked. The two women stood by the window looking down on the crowd below. In the smoke that shot from the floors below and circled upward they were shut off from view. The young lady timidly raised the window and shouted as loud as she could for help. Her voice was not heard, and the pair were about ready to give up hope.

Miss Fulper knelt for a few moments beside the window in prayer. Her mother was beside her, with her faced raised appealingly toward heaven. Their prayer must have been heard, for when all hope seemed at an end a big flame shot through their door. The fierce light breaking upon the darkness was at once seen by the crowd below, and instantly a hundred sturdy voices were crying for ladders. The pale faces of the two women had been seen through the mist of smoke. The work of rescue was then but the task of a few minutes. Mrs. Fulper was first taken out and then her daughter. They were tenderly cared for.

Mayor Gilbert Talks to Young Men.

Alexander Gilbert, mayor, delivered a most excellent address, yesterday afternoon, to the young men in Charles Brown's class room, at the First Baptist Sunday-school.

Ninety young men were present, the largest number this class has had present at one session. The mayor in opening his address expressed surprise at finding so large a body of men, supposing he was to talk to only a small class, but instead he seemed to be addressing a school in itself.

After congratulating teacher and members on the good work accomplished, and his delight in seeing so many men interested in this work, he proceeded to say that it paid well to give consideration to the things discussed in a class like this. Mr. Brown was doing them a great favor, in asking them to come here, and they were putting themselves in the way of getting good.

The mayor spoke of the late Rev. Charles Spurgeon's great work and his wonderful success. "We want"—he said—"to keep in touch and sympathy with men. Each individual was an empire in himself. Each was independent and self-willed. And yet each was dependent upon the other. Each had his work to do, however." These thoughts had often impressed themselves on the speaker, as he watched the surging throngs going back and forth to business.

These men were seeking money. There is something higher than riches. Time was short. We are hastening to life's close. It seemed only yesterday to the mayor, but it was thirty-one years ago, that President Lincoln issued his first draft proclamation. So fast does time go. Before another period like this rolled around, the speaker would have probably been summoned home. We should seek the higher life, and be ready when our call comes.

Mr. Gilbert then urged the young men to have a character tried and true, and showed from illustrations in business life how valuable a possession it was. In conclusion, the mayor said that while it was somewhat difficult to talk to such a large number of men, yet it was certainly a privilege to do so, and in closing he wanted them all to have this unfaltering trust he had referred to, and which was so well expressed in Bryant's "Thanatopsis", the conclusion of which he quoted.

The young men were highly pleased with the mayor's address.

MODESTLY MARRIED.

James E. Clark and Miss Sarah Welford Lomax Wedded.

The Daily Gate City of Keokuk, Iowa, has the following to say of the marriage of the son of a prominent Plainfielder, exclusively told of in THE PRESS of Saturday:

"With very modest, but most beautiful ceremony, the marriage of James E. Clark, son of James Clark of West Seventh street, Plainfield, and Miss Sarah Welford Lomax was solemnized at the home of the bride, 1028 High street, Keokuk, last Tuesday noon. The Rev. J. B. Worrell officiated in the presence of a small company of guests, limited to relatives and most intimate friends. After a tempting lunch, Mr. and Mrs. Clark departed on the afternoon T. P. & W. train for the east.

"The bride is the daughter of the Hon. P. T. Lomax, master in chancery of the United States courts, and is universally esteemed. Mr. Clark was formerly of the firm of Clark Bros. & Co., wholesale dealers in saddlery and leather, of Keokuk, and went east in 1887. He is now the Boston member of the sole leather tanning firm of Wright, Clark & Co., and is a young gentleman of the finest business and social qualities. After an extended bridal tour, Mr. and Mrs. Clark will be at home, corner Church and Eldridge streets, Newton, Mass., after March 1.

"The Lost Paradise" Must be Withdrawn.

The policy of the management of Proctor's 14th street theatre, New York, has invariably succeeded in meeting with popular approval in the sense that audiences have been drawn—not from one class alone—but from the varied ranks and walks of life. "The Lost Paradise" gives ample proof of this diversity of public interest by the rapt attention shown by the occupants of both gallery and orchestra in scenes involving questions of social economy. The interests of Capital and Labor have seldom been presented with such fidelity to nature or such accuracy of artistic detail.

Widely as this play may differ in its general aspects from the lighter dramatic fare of farcical comedy, "The Lost Paradise" draws to a great extent the same theatre-goers who were delighted with "Wilkinson's Widows" and "All the Comforts of Home". Proctor's theatre has in fact established a following of its own, and its policy and its record are certainly deserving of a special clientele.

In pursuance of their managerial plans and in accordance with the general policy of the theatre, Messrs. Proctor & Turner have decided to produce "The English Rose", the greatest of recent successes at the Adelphi theatre, London. The scene of this play is laid in Ireland, and the drama itself is said to be a modern companion picture to Boucicault's famous works, "The Colleen Bawn" and "The Shaughraun". The date of this production will be March 7, as "The Lost Paradise" must, through prior arrangement, be withdrawn on March 5.

"Tis Passing Strange."

A chemical change to some seems strange,
But 'tis not strange to me,
For turns my thought to changes wrought
More wonderful to see.
How does it chance that ignorance
In homely girls may be Converted, in the prettier ones
To sweet simplicity?
—Eva Bella Botsford, in Puck.

REMOVING THE DEAD

Taking the Bodies from the Hotel Royal Ruins.

SEVENTEEN SO FAR RECOVERED.

Several Anxious Days Must Pass Ere the Full Number Can Be Known.

Working Night and Day to Clear Away the Ruins—All the Labor so Far Accomplished Purely Preliminary—The Point Where the Greatest Number of Lives Were Lost Will Not Be Reached Before To-night—Curious Freak of the Flames—Origin of the Fire in Dispute—One of the Hotel Employes Thinks It May Have Been Started from the Furnace—Rumors of Incendiarism Discredited.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The work of searching the ruins of the Hotel Royal still goes on. All last night the men worked under the glare of electric lights. The heaps of debris grow higher and higher as the work proceeds and body after body is removed.

The contractor having the work in charge says that he thinks it will be three days before all the debris can be examined, but that gangs of men will work every minute of the day and night, even if it takes ten days.

If his estimate of the time required to complete the work is correct, several anxious days must pass before the number of lost can be definitely known.

The crowds surrounding the scene seem to be held by some spell, so earnestly do they watch the progress of the work. They are generally very silent, except for the shuffling of feet, but every time a blackened, shapeless mass, all that is left of what was once a man, proud in the consciousness of life and strength, or a woman, light-hearted and happy in the knowledge of her beauty, is brought out of the ruins, a shuddering, long-drawn sigh passes through the throng.

The terrible fascination of viewing grim death in a most horrible form keeps thousands about the site of the burned hotel, and all through the night there seems to be no diminishing of the number who watch the men carrying their ghastly burdens, the feeble earthly tenements of souls gone to face their Creator and to render their last account.

Up to noon 17 bodies had been recovered. The number of dead, as now estimated, is in the neighborhood of forty, but there is no way of giving an estimate with any degree of accuracy.

Five bodies have been identified. It is not yet known what names twelve of the bodies bore in life. Twenty-three injured persons are in the hospitals of the city or are being cared for at other hotels or at the house of friends. Sixty-three are known to have been saved without injury. Fifty-five are missing and unaccounted for.

The work of identification is very slow. This is due partly to the horrible condition of the bodies recovered. But a stronger reason, it is believed, is the fact that many persons do not wish to make public, through identification, the names of relatives and friends possibly among the dead in order to avoid scandal.

As indicated yesterday the extent of the disaster grows with every hours' work of the forces engaged in removing the debris from the burned building.

There was great excitement among the crowd of workmen employed on the ruins and among the large crowd which had been hanging about the scene all day, when word was passed around that a cry had been heard from the vault on Sixth avenue.

The Italians who were at work close to where the cry was said to have been heard say that the sound heard was the mewing of a cat.

It will be remembered that a somewhat similar incident occurred at the ruins of the Park place disaster, some time ago, when the searchers, after three days of digging and delving, found a large, black cat which had escaped unscathed both the collapse of the building and the fire which followed on that occasion.

At the first break of dawn Contractor Galligan marched on the scene with 100 fresh men at his back. They were all brawny men, and their nationality was mixed—Irish and Italian. They were armed with picks and shovels, and as they were halted before the ruins, the contractor read them a little speech, and told them that dead bodies lay beneath the ragged mass of ruins, and that they were expected to work with speed and at the same time exercise great care. The men went at their work with both diligence and caution.

In connection with the discovery of one of the bodies, that of a woman, a curious freak was revealed. The woman had worn a light chemise at the time of her death, and while her body was burned almost to a crisp, a little rim of flesh and chemise around her breast escaped the flames. Nestling in this little nook that the fire passed over was a tiny purse containing a twenty and a ten-dollar note. The body has not been identified.

Fire Chief Bonner took charge of pulling down the walls and recovering the dead early in the morning. Assistant Chiefs McCabe and Gicquel worked with him and gave him invaluable aid. Trucks 11 and 12 under command of Foremen Sullivan and Shaw, had their crews at work on the ruins throughout the day.

Chief Bonner said early in the day that all the work that had been done up to that time was purely preliminary, and that he did not expect to get to the point where the true extent of the loss of life would be shown before late to-night.

This preliminary work consisted in tearing down the walls and clearing out the cellar. It was carried on with rapidity and precision. Chief Bonner said, pointing to a heap of bricks in the center of the ruins: "That is where I expect to find most of the bodies of those lost in the fire. I am afraid there are not less than fifteen to twenty bodies under that pile of debris. That is the bottom of the stairway, and that is where most of the people perished. I have talked with the employes of the house as well as the guests who escaped, and they all agree that the greatest loss of life must have occurred on the stairway.

"When the alarm was given most of the occupants of the ill-fated hotel naturally ran for the stairs. All of the corriders radiated there and the crush on the stairs must have been terrible. While many escaped by that avenue, many were suffocated and buried under the falling walls."

The prediction of the chief was verified in a terribly realistic manner when the first blow of a pick in the pile of bricks in the center of the building struck a human body. Shortly before this a human leg was found and the jeweled hand of a woman.

Room Clerk Murphy was in the neighborhood of the ruins throughout the day, but he did not enter the fire lines. He throws some light on the origin of the fire. He says that a porter returned home at 3 o'clock and went to the basement of the hotel. He saw flames near the elevator. The fire spread so rapidly that his escape was cut off, and he crawled through the areaway under the pavement to the Fortieth street side and was rescued through a coal hole. This man thinks that the fire originated from the furnace. Others differ from him.

A plausible theory is that the assistant chef left a boiling pot of lard on the range, and that it boiled over and set fire to the grease-soaked floor.

Throughout the day the air was vibrant with rumors of incendiarism. When all the rumors were run to earth they were crystalized into one, and this one alleged that Margaret Gallagher, an old woman who had been employed in the Hotel Royal as a scrubwoman, had threatened to burn the building in revenge for being discharged. After the rumor was sifted it was pronounced a groundless one.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

M'ILVAINE'S EXECUTION.

Divergence of Opinion as to New York's Electrical Law.

SING SING, N. Y., Feb. 9.—There appears to be a wide divergence of opinion among those who witnessed the execution of McIlvaine at the prison here.

Some of the medical men hold that it was entirely successful and painless, while others are just as positive that it was the reverse.

TO REPEAL THE LAW.

Assemblyman Stein Says the Execution Was Cruel and Unnatural.

SING SING, Feb. 9.—One of the doctors said that the execution was a most horrible one. He has seen all the executions since the one of Kemmler at Auburn. The killing of McIlvaine he thought was worse in all its features.

Assemblyman Meyer J. Stein, who introduced the amendment to the Electricity law removing the press-gag feature, was one of the most interested spectators, and Mr. Stein was seen immediately after the execution. He said it was cruel and unnatural, and made him sick.

"I shall try and have that law repealed as soon as I get back to Albany," said he. "The law should not be allowed to remain on the statute books another day. I do not know whether death was instantaneous or not. I only know that it was horrible, and I shall do all in my power to have the law repealed. I do not want to witness another one."

THE FIRST WAY BEST.

Dr. McDonald Does Not Approve of Applying the Current through the Hands.

SING SING, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Immediately after the execution Dr. McDonald said that the experiment demonstrated that contact with the leg and the forehead are the best. There cannot be any question that consciousness was instantly destroyed when the first current was turned on through the hands, but the reflex action which followed shows that the method of using the leg and forehead is best. The sounds coming from the lips were not groans but were made by the reflex movements of the chest expelling the mucous.

Many of the witnesses were much affected by the scenes, which some of them described as "horrible." None of them were overcome, however.

Suit for $25,000.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—A suit for $25,000 has been instituted in the Circuit Court by Bernard L. Mociejewski, against Father Franciszek Kroll, rector of St. Kuzimiers Polish congregation. The suit arises from a printed pamphlet published and circulated in the St. Kuzimierz church by Father Kroll charging Mociejewski with having misappropriated moneys and defrauded the congregation to the extent of $5,000. A sensation has been caused among the Polish residents of this city by the pamphlet.

AFTER MISS BLAINE

Clerk Markle Wants to Wed the Secretary's Daughter.

WRITES TO HIM TO THAT EFFECT.

He Has Also Annoyed Other Cabinet Members With Queer Epistles.

The Secretary of State Brings the Matter to the Notice of the Commission on Lunacy—An Inquiry Into His Sanity Will be Made Next Saturday—Markle Says He Does Not Know What the Charges are Based Upon—Always Regarded as Eccentric.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Ozias J. Markle wants to marry Miss Hattie Blaine.

Markle is a clerk employed in the War Department, and came here from Massillon, O. He is good-looking and about 30 years of age. He wrote a number of letters to Secretary Blaine. In one of them he requested Mr. Blaine to accord him an interview in his library and introduce him to his daughter, whom he expressed a great desire to marry.

Influenced perhaps by the recollection of the man who pursued Mary Anderson, and the more recent instance of Miss Helen Gould's unbalanced admirer, Mr. Blaine brought the communication to the attention of the authorities.

Investigation made by Inspector Frank brought to light other letter-writing episodes of Markle's career. It was found that he had been annoying other members of the Cabinet with strange letters, and had written in a queer vein to other prominent men in the city.

These epistles indicated an unbalanced mind, and the authorities concluded that it would be best to hold an examination in the case, if nothing more was done. Mr. George Hazleton, attorney for the District of Columbia, issued a summons for Mr. Markle to appear before the Commission on Lunacy, and show cause why he should not be consigned to an asylum.

The Commission met but Markle failed to appear. The Commission adjourned after deciding to repeat the summons requesting Markle to come before them. Markle was arraigned in court and the case postponed until next Saturday.

"When I received the summons to appear I thought it must be a joke," he said. "After thinking it over I consulted a lawyer and was told that I need not appear at the court unless I wished to. I cannot imagine who instigated this, but I am sure it was not a friend. I have no idea what the charges are based upon. I have been away from my office since the 21st of December on account of sickness, and perhaps that has something to do with it."

When the letters were mentioned he gave evidence of no surprise.

The people at Markle's boarding place said that he had always been regarded as eccentric, but his sanity had not been questioned. They said he was always very reserved and quiet, and frequently would refuse to speak to acquaintances when he met them. Markle, it is said, has aspired to the hands of the daughters of other Cabinet officers, sending them the same kind of letters that were addressed to Secretary Blaine.

AN M. P. INDICTED.

Charged With Stealing £15,000 from an Estate of Which He Was Trustee.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—In the Old Bailey the Judge directed the grand jury to find a true bill against George Woodyat Hastings, M. P., for stealing trust funds.

The evidence showed that Hastings had embezzled £15,000 from the estate of Major John Brown, of which he was the only surviving trustee. Other allegations of breach of trust are brought against the prisoner.

Amherst College Troubles.

AMHERST, Mass., Feb. 9.—The Amherst College paper, the "Student," in an article discussing the trouble in college over compulsory attendance at church, says: "Two changes are possible—either the immediate and complete abolishment of the present system, or a more zealous administration of it. We have without success advocated the former, so we now demand the latter." The article has made a great stir in college circles.

Successor to Influenza.

VIENNA, Feb. 9.—In succession to influenza, a new epidemic, seemingly of poisonous origin, prevails here. Its symptoms are fever, acute colic and the ejection of blood. Physicians variously attribute it to the effects of influenza and to the use of bad drinking water.

Lawyer Peschall's Appeal.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 9.—Charles Peschall is in Trenton to file the appeal from Judge Green's decision refusing to grant a writ of habeas corpus for the colored murderer Hallinger, who is under sentence to be hanged on Wednesday.

SPURGEON'S REMAINS AT HOME.

Bits of the Coffin Covering Scrambled for by Souvenir Hunters.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—From present indications, the funeral of the Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon, promises to be the most remarkable, of the noteworthy funerals which have taken place in and about this city recently. The funeral of the late Duke of Clarence and Avondale was a half royal and half military funeral, the funeral of the late Cardinal Manning was a magnificent attribute to the memory of a Prince of the Roman Catholic Church whose good deeds had made him admired by all, but the funeral of the Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon seems likely to be a spontaneous outpouring of the Protestant masses of certain popular denominations forming a third of the three great chapters in funerals lately unfolded to the public.

The body arrived at Newhaven at 6 a. m. Over 1,500 people in spite of the cold, damp morning and early hour, had there assembled to meet the remains of the great preacher. The latter were enclosed in a beautiful olive-wood, electro-plated coffin, containing a leaden shell in which was the body. The coffin itself, during the journey from Mentone, was enclosed in a rough packing case or outer casket of plain white wood. This outer shell was hastily nailed and screwed together and then strengthened with several turns of cording. Upon the arrival of the body at Newhaven this outer covering of wood and cord was removed from the coffin on the quay, whereupon the assembled crowd rushed for the wood and cord of the packing case and almost fought for scraps of it to preserve in memory of the departed preacher.

The Rev. Mr. Lloyd, a Congregational minister, then called upon the crowd to preserve order and, eventually, he led them in singing a hymn. The coffin, later on, was placed on board a funeral car and started for London.

Upon its arrival at the London Bridge Station an immense crowd of people had assembled and witnessed the placing of the coffin in a plain hearse which awaited the arrival of the remains. All stood uncovered as the transfer was made and as the hearse was slowly driven away, followed by about a dozen mourning carriages, in the direction of the Tabernacle.

So dense was the crowd at that place, that it was found necessary to take the body to an adjacent park, Kennington Common, where the masses defiled before the coffin and impromptu services were held and many extemporaneous addresses were made by various pastors and college officials; there was no organized ceremony, however.

The funeral proper will be held on Thursday, and the body will lie at the Tabernacle until Wednesday night.

THE "TIMES" MAN AT IT AGAIN.

Latest Report of the Chilian Correspondent of the Thunderer.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The generally wrong correspondent of the "Times" in a long dispatch to his paper says accounts confirm the deep impression caused in Spanish and Portuguese republics by the action of the United States against Chili.

The almost always wrong correspondent then says:

"They regard it as an outrage, and declare that the illusions they have hitherto held respecting the great northern republic have vanished. The legitimate influence of the United States has been destroyed, and in the future the Central and South American republics must look for protection and mutuality of interest, both commercial and political, only among themselves.

"Mr. Blaine seems to have foreseen and directed this impending destruction of his Pan-American policy by the unwarrantable ultimatum sent to Chili. Consequently he is throwing the responsibility on President Harrison. Private advices place beyond a doubt this immense change, which marks the occurrence of an epoch in the history of the two Americas."

The Police No Protection.

PEORIA, Ill., Feb. 9.—A few evenings ago evidences of an attempted wholesale burglary were found at the residence of Henry S. Ottenheimer. All the silverware in the house was found tied up in a table cloth in the hallway, the thief evidently having been scared away. A policeman was put on guard to prevent a similar occurrence, but the thief returned and carted all the valuables away.

Fanny Worden Threatened.

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—A visitor to the Worden household in Hanover found rifles in the corner and pistols on tables handy for use. Fannie Worden is learning to shoot to protect herself. She talked of their scares and showed threatening letters which had been received from friends of Frank Almy, who murdered her sister Christie.

Roasted to Death.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 9.—A fire of unknown origin destroyed a small frame dwelling one mile from this city, and roasted to death Mrs. Jane Redcoy, the only occupant. The place bore a bad reputation and was known as the "Lone Star Hotel." It is said that she had a large sum of money secreted about the house.

Discovered a Buggy and Dead Horse.

NASHUA, N. H., Feb. 9.—Much excitement has been caused in Hollis over the discovery of a buggy and a dead horse in the woods in the north part of that town. No one has been reported missing in the vicinity.

Claims it is Blackmail.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Feb. 9.—The property of Daniel R. Sullivan has been attached for $5,000 by James Doherty, whose daughter Delia, aged 18, claims to have gone through a marriage ceremony with Sullivan, which the latter subsequently declared to her was not a legal marriage. He then, it is alleged, burned up the supposed marriage certificate. Sullivan claims that an attempt is being made to blackmail him.

MR. BLAINE'S NOTE

Causes Excitement Throughout the Country.

THE VIEWS OF PROMINENT MEN.

Many Expressions of Regret that the Secretary Has Withdrawn.

Senator Felton and Other Californians Say That that He Could Have Carried the Pacific Coast With a Whoop, But the President Will be a Very Acceptable Candidate—What Senator Hill Has to Say—Ex-Governor Foraker's Views—London Press Comment.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Mr. Blaine's letter declining to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for President, has caused much excitement at the capital, although it has been expected for some time.

Dispatches have been received from many States, and prominent men in this city have been interviewed, many of them expressing regret that the Secretary of State has withdrawn.

Following are some of the views expressed:

Representative O'Donnell, of Michigan (Rep.), said that he considered Mr. Blaine's withdrawal sincere and final. He thought it strengthened Mr. Harrison and improved the chances of other candidates.

Senator Felton, of California, and Representative Bowers, Cutting and Loud, of California, all expressed regret at Mr. Blaine's withdrawal, and stated that if he was nominated he would carry the Pacific Coast with a whoop. Mr. Harrison, they said, will be a very acceptable candidate, and will prove a very strong one.

Senator Cary, of Wyoming (Rep.), said that he had all along believed that President Harrison was the strongest candidate the Republican convention could name; that he would be so named and be elected.

Senator Stockbridge, of Michigan (Rep.), said his State had always been a Blaine State and would have given the Secretary of State its delegation in the Minneapolis convention. Now that he was out of the race he supposed Michigan would support General Alger, who, it was understood, would be a candidate if Mr. Blaine were not.

EX-GOV. FORAKER'S VIEWS.

Says Mr. Blaine Constantly Grows Nearer the Hearts of the People.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 9.—In an interview with ex-Gov. Foraker on Blaine's letter of declination, Mr. Foraker said: "Mr. Blaine will stand in history without a rival. Twice when he was a candidate for the nomination it was refused him. Once when nominated he was defeated. Such a record would destroy the power, influence and prestige of almost any other man.

"But instead, he has constantly grown greater and nearer to the hearts of the people, until, as a result, he had literally forced upon him an opportunity to make the unprecedented record of twice declining a nomination which would have meant in each instance an election. Somebody once said in substance, that 'to refuse to be a bishop is greater than to be a bishop.' The same can be said of the Presidency, and especially of Mr. Blaine, who has twice refused it.

Harrison's Re-election Not Sure.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 9.—The "Times," Republican, speaking of the retirement of Mr. Blaine, says the President's popularity and hold upon the Republican party are by no means such as to make his re-election sure. Another Richmond may enter who will wind him in the race as effectually as the Premier would have done.

Bombshell to California Republicans.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 9.—Blaine's letter of withdrawal was a bombshell in the camp of the Republicans here, the great majority of whom have taken no stock in the repeated despatches from the east that he would retire from the Presidential race. Blaine has no more enthusiastic following than the California Republicans.

A Blow to Maine Republicans.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 9.—Secretary Blaine's letter withdrawing his name as a candidate for the Presidency, although not entirely unexpected by Maine Republicans, is, nevertheless a heavy blow, and nothing but the deepest regret is expressed in relation to it.

What Senator Hill Says.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Senator David B. Hill said: "This announcement of Mr. Blaine does not surprise me. It is not in the form that I expected, but it does not surprise me." Further than this the Senator declined to be quoted. He did not appear to consider the letter of vital importance from a political standpoint.

London Comment.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The "Globe" severely criticizes the letter of Mr. Blaine's withdrawal from the coming Presidential contest. It says that Mr. Blaine has taken this step because he knows that his campaign would not be a success on account of his course in the recent Chilian imbroglio, which, according to the "Globe," has destroyed his foreign policy so far as America is concerned.

Lost His Life for Two Dollars.

VINELAND, N. J., Feb. 9.—James Donnelly, a lad of sixteen years, who lives at Lockport, made a wager that he could eat twenty-four raw eggs within fifteen minutes and drink twenty glasses of beer. It was for a wager of $2. He succeeded in his attempt and won the $2, but two hours later was taken with convulsions and died.

$1,000,000 LOST.

Memphis Visited By a Most Disastrous Conflagration.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 9.—A most disastrous conflagration brok out in the building occupied by the Bruce-Berne Hat company. The building was soon seen by the firemen to be doomed, and all their efforts were at once concentrated in an effort to save the adjoining property.

They were unsuccessful, however. Shortly after the Bruce-Berne building fell in and a few minutes later the building of the Langstaff Hardware company which adjoined it at the south, fell into the space formerly occupied by the hat building.

Several other buildings were also destroyed.

The loss will probably exceed $1,000,000.

STOLE $396,000.

The Czar Asks the Denver Police to Capture the Thieves.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 9.—The Russian Government has officially notified Chief of Police Farley, through its consular agent at San Francisco, that one of its treasury vaults in Siberia has been despoiled by robbers.

Gold roubles to the amount of $396,000 have been taken, and his Imperial Majesty, the Czar, requests that the chief arrest the robbers if they happen to arrive in Denver.

The robbery was committed December 1, the perpetrators making tracks at once across Siberia, and the agents of the Russian police are of opinion that some one of the Chinese seaports is the point where they will take ship for America.

Uprisings in Garza's Favor Denied.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—At the War Department it is said that no news has been received from Mexican border indicating an uprising in Garza's favor.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The whist team of the Crescent League have received handsome oak card tables as prizes for their work in the recent whist tournament.

—Members of the W. C. T. U. went through the dismantled "Elkwood" yesterday. It is hoped the union will secure the place for a headquarters.

—Messrs. Allen and Voorhels of the North Plainfield township committee audited the books of collector H. N. Spencer, yesterday, and found them correct.

—Mrs. Fernald and Miss Yates made interesting addresses on the subject of temperance before the Christian Endeavor society of the Trinity Reformed church last night.

—The instructor in short-hand at the Y. M. C. A. rooms will meet any ladies desiring instruction in this most useful art, this evening at 7:30, in the rooms of the association.

—Edsall gives a special invitation to the readers of THE PRESS to call and see his extensive line of new spring dress fabrics. He says it is the handsomest he has ever offered.

—VanEmburgh & White have set apart a space in the front of their store, with carpet on the floor, handsome paper on wall, chairs, writing desk, etc., as a waiting-room where women may write letters or wait for friends.

—Geo. Butche for many years the old reliable driver of No. 2 engine, after a residence of twenty-one years at 62 West Front street, has removed to 321 West Front street, with Jacob Kriney. He is now in the employ of John T. Odam, slate roofer.

—Free-hand drawing will be graphically described by John Dalziel at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this week Thursday evening at 8. "The Training of the Memory" will be the subject of the popular talk to be given by the Rev. Dr. Hurlbut Thursday, Feb 18 The admission will be free to both talks.

—'Twill not be long before Peace street is extended into the borough. The township committee has authorized the extension, and the commissioners have begun their work of appraisement. At a public meeting in the borough last night sufficient money was subscribed to meet preliminary expenses.

—Overflowing with choice reading and useful information is the February number of The Housewife, just issued from 81 Warren street, New York. This journal is issued every month, at the very low price of 50 cents a year. The table of contents this month is unusually attractive, andmust be seen to be appreciated.

—The pastor of the Congregational church takes this means of giving to his people a notice which ought to have been handed to him to read from the desk last Sunday. A church social will be held in the church parlors Friday evening, Feb. 12. An interesting musical programme has been arranged and refreshments will be served. All members of the congregation and the Sunday-schools are cordially invited.

—Mestayer's famous Tourists, who have n't been seen in Plainfield since the days of "We Us & Co," come to the Music Hall next Monday evening in their latest and greatest laughing success, "Our Grab Bag". At the head of the Tourists, is that jolly son of Momus, W. A. Mestayer, and the charming queen of song, Theresa Vaughn. The company that will support these two clever people is said to be the strongest of all the farce comedy organization now on the road.

—J W. Allen has secured possession of the Crescent rink for the balance of the season, Mr. Martin having taken his "merry-go-round" and left the city. The rink having received new boilers, it will be well heated by steam and lighted with gas and electricity. In fact, it will be a comfortable place of amusement to pass the evening. Order will be enforced. The roller skates have all been repaired, and those who wish to learn to skate will receive instruction. This evening there will be a polo contest, beginning at 9, between the Plainfield polo team and a team from Bridgeport. It will be an exciting contest. The fair sex are all invited free of charge.

He talked as if he had a "frog in his throat," but he was only hoarse; a single bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup relieved the trouble at once. 25 cents.

THE SELFISH AND STRIKERS SHORN.

A Law Introduced Taking Away the Power of the Bosses to Further Prevent the Building of a Street Railway in Plainfield.

Assemblyman Studer of Montclair, editor of the Times of that place, and one of the most prominent Republicans of Essex county, introduced into the house of assembly at Trenton, last night, an act numbered 192 that will effectually destroy forever the power of the selfish, the strikers, and the men who ride in chaises, of preventing the construction and maintenance in Plainfield and all other cities of any kind of a street railway the people want.

The proposed law is given below. It will be seen that it is retroactive, and after it has passed the house and senate, and been signed by the governor—as THE PRESS can assure the people it will be—the proposed electric railway can be constructed in this city at once, no matter how many bosses object:

A Supplement to an act entitled "An act concerning street railroad companies", approved March sixth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That section two of the act entitled "An act concerning street railroad companies", approved March sixth, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six, be and the same is hereby amended so that said section shall read as follows:

2. And be it enacted, That any street railway company in this State may use electric or chemical motors or grip cables as the propelling power of its cars, instead of horses; provided, it shall first obtain the consent of the municipal authorities having charge of the public streets or highways on which it is proposed to use such motors or grip cables, which consent may be granted either by ordinance or by resolution.

3. And be it enacted, That such municipal authorities may in like manner authorize the use of poles and wires strung thereon for the above purposes, and may in such cases prescribe the manner in which and the places where such poles shall be located, and the manner in which the wires shall be strung thereon, and the same may be authorized and prescribed in such ordinance or resolution.

4. And be it enacted, That any consent heretofore granted, whether by resolution or ordinance, by any municipality to any street railway company to use electric or chemical motors or grip cables as the propelling power of its cars, of the construction and character in such ordinance or resolution specified, shall be as valid and effectual as if the same had been granted pursuant to the provisions of this act to the extent authorized by this act.

5. And be it enacted, That the municipal authorities shall have the right to receive compensation for the granting of the said consent, in such shape as shall be agreed upon by the said railway companies and municipal authorities, and any agreement or contract heretofore made for such compensation shall be as valid and effectual as if made under this act.

6. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect immediately.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Charles F. Debele, who has been very ill with the grip, expects to be out again this week.

Bessie Dinneen died at Dunellen yesterday in the fourth year of her age. Funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2:30.

Charles Chase Hurlbut of this city has been elected from the sophomore class in Wesleyan university to membership in the Skull and Serpent secret society.

Mrs. Susan F. Randolph, relict of the late Joseph F. Randolph, died Sunday at the age of 82. Funeral services will be held from her late residence on Elmwood place to-morrow.

Announcement is made of the engagement of E B Rogers, of the late firm of Rogers Bros., to Miss Emma S Vreeland of East Millstone. Mr. Rogers has gone to Buffalo, where he will engage in the real estate business. W. B. Rogers, the other brother, is very ill at Buffalo with pneumonia.

"Edward C. Mulford, Plainfield, N. J.," heads to-day's list in the New York Recorder, of contributors to the fund to present silver statuettes to President Harrison, and Secretaries Blaine and Tracy, of sailor Riggin, whose murder in Chile the government of that country have been compelled to apologize for and promise reparation.

George F. Brown, who left Plainfield last December, is at present staying in SanFrancisco. In a letter received today, by his brother Charles, he signifies his intention of sailing in a few days for Honolulu, in the Sandwich Islands, where he will make a visit of several weeks or longer. Mr. Brown has not been very well since leaving Plainfield, but at the time he writes was feeling much improved.

Those who have the interests of the Plainfield public schools at heart will regret to learn that there is a possibility of Miss Bulkley, the faithful principal, resigning her office at the end of this term. It is understood that she has been offered an important professorship in a new university to be founded in Chicago by some of the country's leading educators. Final decision in the matter will soon be reached The local board of education will of course use their best endeavors to induce Miss Bulkley to remain.

PLAIN TALK BY MR. HILLMAN.

He Says Some Sharp Things Against Monopolists in General and Against the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company in Particular.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I have read with interest Mayor Gilbert's remarks, as quoted in your paper, about the electric light bill. I have too much faith in him to believe that he will sign the warrant for either the November or December bill. If one is wrong, then both are wrong and unjust; and that both are unjust and contrary to contract, has been made clear by the report of the committee of last year's council. Mr. Gilbert himself believes in the committee's report, and says "I think the average deficiency was shown to be about twenty per cent".

This refers to the test made at the pressure that should be given in order to produce the light contracted for, viz., 25 candle power. But at the presure actually given by the company, as shown by the test, only 12½ candle power was produced. Now this per cent., as he calls it, was not a sudden drop in the month of November. The loss had been constant and continuous, as I myself can witness. Persons in my neighborhood had for a good while noticed the poorness of the light, and had spoken of it, and I was led to take a close interest in this investigation, and was acquainted with all the facts as they were developed. The report of the light committee of the council was signed by three of the four members of it (Mr. Hetfield not being present), including Ernest R. Ackerman, and I am at a loss to understand how Mr Ackerman could vote to pay the November bill, when in the latter portion of his report he had (after giving in detail the facts) said "these figures show that the city has not been getting quite two thirds of the light which the contract calls for". Now a deficiency running for the preceding eleven months, such as the committee reported, would, as I understand, show that the city had, during that period, been deprived, or robbed, by the electric light company, of about $3,000. I do not believe that the loss to the city is less than this, and I am therefore clearly of the opinion that neither the November nor December bill should be paid, and am sure also that a further large sum is due the city. Mr. Gilbert says "A conference with Mr. Moore and Mr. McClurg held at my office in relation thereto failed to elicit any satisfactory explanation of the matter"; but he says that whether the deficiency was the result of design, or of a careless system of inspection, he is unable to say. But Mr. Gilbert did, I think, intimate to Mr. Smith, when Mr. Pope failed to appear to explain according to invitation, that that fact was not a favorable indication.

However, probably both of the mayor's surmises are correct: design first, and "careless inspection" afterwards; or rather no protective inspection by the city. Our neighboring cities are putting inspectors on their electric lights. Why should not Plainfield do so rather than lose several thousand dollars a year by this sort of work? But suppose it was careless inspection by anybody, no matter who, must the city lose this money? It is no wonder that the attention of the council has been called by several citizens to the danger of trusting the water business of the city to the party concerned in running the electric light plant. Like many other Plainfield citizens I am opposed to monopolies—especially to such monopolists.

W. H HILLMAN.

Praise for Their Fellow Pastor.

The Ministers' association met last night at the home of Mr. Richards. Mr Mitchell read an interesting paper on "Prayer meetings". A resolution was unanimously adopted commending the the stand taken by pastor Dilts of the Park Avenue church, expressing their great regard for his Christian character, and hoping that the trouble would be amicably adjusted and that he might remain long among them to continue his faithful work.

One leads to the other. The "cutting" of prices leads to the substitution of worthless goods—fraudulent imitations of the genuine medicine, dilutions of it, all sorts of cheap substitutes to make a larger profit. That's the reason the makers of Dr. Pierce's medicines object to the cutting of prices—and that's the reason they prevent it on their medicines.

To protect the public from fraud and imposition, the genuine guaranteed medicines of Dr. R. V. Pierce are now sold only through druggists regularly authorized as agents, and always at these long-established prices:

Golden Medical Discovery (for the liver, blood and lungs), ... $1.00.
Favorite Prescription (for woman's weaknesses and ailments), ... $1.00.
Pleasant Pellets (for the liver, stomach and bowels), ... 25 cents.

But they're the cheapest medicines sold, for you pay only for the good you get. The money is refunded if they don't benefit or cure. Beware of spurious imitations or substitutes at lower prices than above.

Two of the injured will die.

An unknown man.

The injured are: Hugh Dougherty, fatally; John J. Moore, brakeman, fatally; John Buck, brakeman, badly; Jerome D. Miller, brakeman, badly.

HALLINGER GETS A STAY.

The Jersey City Murderer Will Not Be Hanged To-morrow.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS]

TRENTON, Feb. 9.—This morning Judge Green, in the United States District Court, granted an order staying the execution of Hallinger, the negro wife murderer of Jersey City, until after his appeal shall have been heard.

Hallinger was to have been hanged to-morrow.

They Passed.

The New York city council has achieved a national reputation for the slowness with which it accomplishes nothing. An alderman, meeting an enterprising citizen on Broadway, said:

"We had a very important two hours' session of the city council this afternoon."

"What passed?"

"Well, the two hours passed."—Texas Siftings.

Reginald—What's up, old man? Why do you look so blue?

Clarence—I've been rejected, Reggy. Proposed to Gussie Bewdler last evening, and by Jove, she laughed at me. That girl has a heart of ice.

Reginald—Ah, that explains it. I've often wondered where the quantities of ice-cream she used to eat in the summer time went to.—Grip.

In the Same Box.

"You have been in the army a great many years, but I never heard of your capturing anything," said an old coquette to a somewhat venerable officer.

"You ought to have a fellow-feeling for me," was the reply.

"How so?"

"Because we both know what it is to grow old without making any conquests."—Texas Siftings.

ANIMAL MAGNETISM.

Judge Fowler—Speak up, now! How did you come by those chickens?

'Rastus Henshaw—Dad's jes' de trouble; couldn't get by dem nohow, sah.—Puck.

A Splendid Opportunity.

"Are you fond of travel?" he asked.

"I really don't know," she answered, yawning and looking at the clock; "are you?"

"I am. If I had the opportunity I would travel all the time."

"I don't see," she said, stifling another yawn, "what better opportunity you want than you have."—N. Y. Press.

How She Looked at It.

"It is true," said Eve to the serpent, "that I have a very circumscribed choice in selecting a husband, but still I have one advantage in marrying Adam."

"What is that?"

"He can't sit up and tell me I can't cook like his mother."—Judge.

DUNELLEN DOINGS.

Interesting Items from a Thriving Borough, by Our Own Correspondent.

Peter Herlich and A. Bouscher have had their stores fitted up with electric ligh s.

Peter Staats is very ill with a relapse of the grip.

W. S. Fredericks, of Passaic, has been visiting friends in town. He is connected with the United States Express company, and expects soon to settle at Dunellen.

Miss Maud Williams is suffering again from severely injured hand.

There is famous skating on Middlesex lake, alias Guines Egg pond.

George Giles is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Tinsman of Jersey City.

The Rev. Mr. Miles, formerly of this place, preached at the Methodist Episcopal church Sunday evening.

Mrs. Beekman is very ill. Her friends have grave fears over her condition.

Mrs. James Lowrie is improving in health of late, although she has been confined to her room since the death of her husband.

Mr. Bouscher had a very sick horse Saturday night. The animal was taken with colic early in the afternoon, and it took the united efforts of Mr. Bouscher and his friends to keep it alive until a veterinary surgeon could arrive.

Taylor's Hotel has been fitted up with electric light from top to bottom. It makes a great improvement.

John Striker broke through the ice on the New Market pond last Friday. Fortunately for him, the water was not very deep at that spot, but he received a bad wetting and a thorough chill.

The Dunellen electric light company is completing its plant as rapidly as possible, and expects to have the works in good running order by next Sunday. A PRESS reporter called at the plant one day last week and was shown all through. As soon as the new dynamo is set up, the company will be ready to supply over one thousand lights. It will utilize the water power when possible and use steam power at other times. It now looks as though the borough would have street lights that it can depend on, after all.

The supper given by the Ladies' Aid society at the M. E. church last Thursday evening was largely attended.

The Jr. O. U. A. M. have arranged to hold an entertainment the evening of March 10. A very interesting programme has been prepared, in which some prominent local and out-of-town talent will take part. This will probably be one of the greatest events of the season.

An entertainment under the management of Miss Peck will be given at the First Presbyterian church this evening.

Chas Boice, jr., is suffering from a severe boil which covers nearly an entire side of the face.

The Signature to a Painting Valueless.

["Montezuma", in The Art Amateur.]

How little, after all, the signature adds even to the commercial value of a picture! Many of the masterpieces of the world are unsigned, as if the painters scorned to add their names to works which were virtually signed by them upon every inch of the canvas. To the true connoisseur the signature goes for little or nothing. While, on the other hand, pictures bear the names of men who did not paint them, it not infrequently happens that genuine pictures bear false signatures. At one Union League club exhibition this winter, a sketch ascribed to Van Marcke, bore his name elaborately painted over the new varnish. At the exhibition held in January, a very striking "portrait of Henry Clay", by J. W. Jarvis, bore the signature C. W. Jarvis. In this case, the picture is genuine, but the signature is not. Commercially considered, a genuine picture may be seriously damaged by bearing a false signature, although, of course, it has been added through the mistaken notion that it would enhance its commercial value. A gentleman showed me recently a tinted drawing he bought at auction for a few dollars at Leavitt's, bearing the "signature" of Le Brun. The signature was a forgery; but from internal evidence, I have little doubt that the drawing was actually made by that painter. The forged signature could not be erased without ruining the drawing; hence the dishonesty that led to its being there carried with its own punishment.

It Was a Boy Sproutlet.

The following is a literal translation of a bit of society news in the Passaic County Journal:

Our Society-Reporter brought recently the News of the Baptism of the Sproutlet of our Friend Faist, which he attended had. Wholly incensed came the otherwise neat and pretty young Mrs. Faist yesterday in our Sanctum and sought the perpetrator of the questionable Item, for him to Speech to stand, thereby remarkling that it undoubtedly not true was that she one Girl the life presented, it was one Boy and thereabthat one right mighty one. Thereby unwrapped ate a Package, which we for Dry Goods containing enlooked, and showed us the Baby, whereby we us of the mistake convinced. The Reporter had himself in his dread in one Inkstand crept and made himself first again thereout as Mrs. Faist from thence went. Therefore, we announce it again it was no Girllet, that Baby recent, but a Boy.

It is too bad to spend half of a short life distressed with neuralgia, when 25c. spent for one bottle of Salvation Oil will cure it quickly.

CAPT. MARTIN'S GENEROUS GIFT.

Important Transactions at the Bi Club Meeting.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Plainfield Bicycle club, last night, four new members, Messrs. Costales, Bonnell, A. Titsworth and N. Titsworth, were elected.

Notice was given that at the next meeting resolutions will be offered for amending certain clauses of the constitution, it being the desire of some of the members that the club should withdraw from the League of American Wheelmen.

Captain Frank L. C. Martin's offer to present to the club the frame building at present opposite to the club-house and which he formerly used as a repair shop, was accepted with thanks, and Messrs. Murray, Marsh and Mahon were appointed a committee to see to its removal to the club property.

The building will be used as a wheel room, and was much needed by the club.

It was voted to give the Boys' club the use of the gymnasium for some evening, the date to be decided later. Several of the club's best athletes will give exhibitions in boxing, club-swinging, and exercises on the bars and rings for the entertainment of the boys.

Messrs. Tilney and Murray were appointed a committee to look into the advisability of giving indoor base-ball games in the Crescent rink.

The report of the treasurer having been read and approved, the meeting was then adjourned.

A Great Offer for the Ladies.

Common sense and good judgment are the qualities for which our American ladies are noted. When they find any article which will add to the comfort of their homes or to their personal appearance they speedily adopt it, being quick to discover the superiority of the new over the old. It is to this trait that the firm of A. McDowell & Co. owe the wonderful success of their French fashion journals among American women. Whenever these journals are critically examined their superior merit is at once recognized. They not only give the styles one month earlier than the American fashion journals; but the variety, originality, and practicability of those styles lift them so far above all others, that they are now recognized as the standards of fashion for this country, as they have long been in France. Many complaints having reached A. McDowell & Co. concerning the difficulty experienced in obtaining their fashion journals through newsdealers, who will often try to work off some other and inferior publication lying on their hands, this firm has decided to give the following premium offer: To each yearly subscriber who sends $3 50, the regular yearly price for either "La Mode de Paris", or "Album des Modes", will be given gratis, as a premium, Book No. 1; "Dressmaking Simplified". This book is valued at $5. Book No. 1 teaches how to keep wrinkles out of dresses; how to join seams; how to finish a waist, the darts, the bones, the collar, etc.; how to make and put in sleeves of all kinds; how to make the new sham skirt by rule; how to match plaids and stripes, etc. It is desirable to hand in your subscriptions through local newsdealers; but if any difficulty is experienced in obtaining the journals, send direct to A. McDowell & Co., 4 West 14th street, New York.

When You Go West Take the Alton.

Before starting on the trip which you contemplate, consult Fred L. Chase, the genial and obliging passenger agent of the Chicago and Alton railroad, and learn from him the many valuable pointers to travelers he has to impart. The Chicago and Alton is one of the most superior roads in the world. It is famous for the attention it pays to the convenience and comfort of its passengers. Luxurious palace reclining-chair cars are furnished free on all through trains, day and night, over its lines, between Chicago and Kansas City, Chicago and Denver, Chicago and St. Louis, and St. Louis and Kansas City. For safety and comfort patronize the Chicago and Alton. Answer by postal the five questions propounded by Mr. Chase in another column, and receive full information concerning this popular line.

Editor Pearsall Sang His Rollicking Songs.

The delegates of the New York Press club, who recently returned from the convention of the International League of Press clubs at San Francisco, had a dinner and reception given them Saturday evening at the rooms of the Press club. About sixty-five covers were laid. Col. John A. Cockerill, president of the club, was in the chair and introduced William Berri, who gave an interesting description of the trip of the delegates. William R. Worrall, another of the delegates, made an address, and the inimitable Pearsall of the Westfield Standard sang several songs.

ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY.

W. J. Arkell, publisher of Judge and Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, writes:

JUDGE BUILDING,
Cor. Fifth Ave. and Sixteenth St.,
NEW YORK, January 14, 1891.

"About three weeks since, while suffering from a severe cold which had settled on my chest, I applied an ADLCOCK'S FOREST PLASTER and in a short time obtained relief.

"In my opinion, these plasters should be in every household, for use in case of coughs, colds, sprains, bruises, or pain of any kind. I know that in my case the results have been entirely satisfactory and beneficial."

TORREY HANGED IN EFFIGY.

All Stirling Excited Over a New Feature of the Whitecap-Dill Troubles.

Some time during Saturday night a stuffed effigy of Herbert Gray Torrey, who has figured so prominently in the war being made against the Rev. Arthur Dill, was suspended on a flag pole at the corner of Railroad avenue and Main street. On the breast was a placard with the following inscription:

"Leader of the Whitecaps, you are not in it."

A reporter arrived on the scene yesterday, and the whole village was in a state of excitement. The effigy, which still dangled at the end of a rope from the flag pole, is a perfect picture of Mr. Torrey in every respect. Mr. Torrey's palatial residence overlooks the spot and the dangling figure can be plainly seen from his windows. One of the prominent residents of Stirling informed the reporter that the end of the Dill and Whitecap trouble was not yet. The Rev. Mr. Dill was seen on the train this morning, but was not communicative.

A Complete History of the Country at a Glance.

Your home or office is not complete unless you have one of Neely's great historical charts, political and United States maps. This is a double wall map, 5 feet 6 inches by 3 feet 10 inches, mounted on rollers, top and bottom. It tells how many presidents we have had, and politics of each; what party George Washington represented; what presidents died in office; how many presidents served two terms; which candidate received the largest number of votes and was defeated; when each political party was organized; how many Congresses have convened, and the political complexion of each; the number of States in the United States and the one having the most miles of railroads; how many political parties have existed in the United States; it is in fact a complete history of our government by administrations, political parties, and Congresses from Washington to Harrison.

On one side is the latest United States map, showing all States, counties, railroads and towns; and on the other side: A diagram showing all the political parties, 11x66. A diagram showing all the presidents and cabinets, 5x66. A diagram showing political complexion of each Congress. A diagram showing creeds of the world, 13x10. A diagram showing standing armies of each nation, 13x10. A diagram showing naval tonnage of each nation, 13x10. A complete map of the world, 13x20. A map of Central America, 10x13 A map of Alaska, 10x13. A map of Upper Nubia and Habesh or Abyssinia, 10x13. A map of Persia, Afghanistan and Beloochistan, 10x13. A complete map of solar system, best ever made, 10x13. The names of all cabinet officers, with length of term. Pictures of all presidents, from Washington to Harrison. These maps sell ordinarily for $10, but there are two ways of getting them absolutely free. A letter mailed to the Detroit Free Press, Detroit, Mich., asking for particulars of this great offer, will bring a prompt reply. The Free Press is the greatest of household weeklies. Send for a sample copy and take advantage of this rare offer to get this great double map.

Even the Sun Doesn't Tell True Time.

While we are accustomed to regard the sun as the measurer of time we are apt to overlook the fact that the period of two successive transits of the sun that we see is too irregular for us to get clocks to conform to, and that astronomers had to conceive the idea of creating an imaginary sun, which, like the stars, would be regular in motion. The interval between two successive transits of this imaginary sun is termed a mean solar day, and is equal to the average of all the apparent solar days in a year. It is this to which our clocks and chronometers are adjusted.

The difference between the place of the real and imaginary sun is familiarly known as the equation of time, which is a varying quantity, as sometimes the imaginary sun is ahead of the real one, while at other times it is astern of it. We must also be careful to note the fact that the sun dial marks apparent time only, and consequently its indications will only agree with clock time when the real and imaginary suns happen to coincide or pass the meridian at the same instant. This actually occurs four times in a twelvemonth, about April 15, June 14, August 31 and December 24.

In case Baltimore does not provide such a building, it is further said that the collection will be given to New York.

Against the Suggestion.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The suggestion recently made that ten cents' worth of stamps, equivalent to a special delivery stamp, with the words special delivery written under the stamps, should, in all cases, serve the same purpose as a special delivery letter, does not meet with the approval of postoffice officials. Under the law and the postal regulations it would be illegal and many objections are raised to it by those familiar with the postal service.

Courtships average three tons of coals each, and scores of bad coughs and colds; but then every prudent gallant is provided with a bottle of Dr Boll's Cough Syrup, which costs only 25 cents.

Second Attempt to Burn the Castle.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—Another attempt to set fire to the royal castle at Konigsberg has been made. As in the previous attempt, the main tower was selected as the place in which to start the conflagration. The time chosen was about 8 o'clock in the evening. The damage was slight. No arrests have been made. In both cases the incendiary poured kerosene over the woodwork of the tower and then set fire to it.

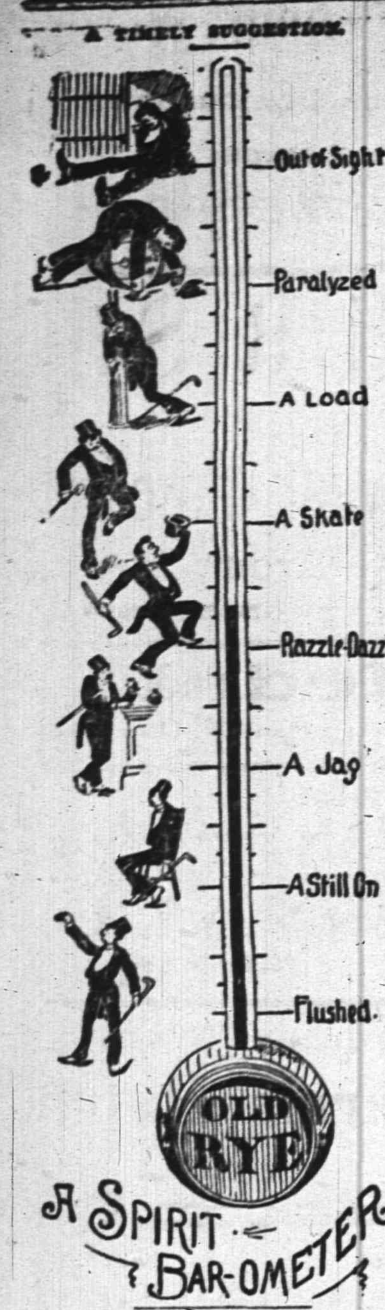
A TIMELY SUGGESTION.



Breaking It Gently.

Farmer Jan was walking sadly down the road one day in Holstein when the village pastor met him.

"Why so sad, Farmer Jan?" said the pastor.

"Ah, I have a very sad errand, pastor," replied Jan.

"What is it?"

"Father Henrik's cow is dead in my pasture, and I am on my way to tell him."

"A hard task, Jan."

"Indeed it is, pastor, but I shall break it to him gently."

"How will you do that?"

"I shall tell him first that it is his mother who is dead, and then, having opened the way for the sadder news still, I shall tell him it is not his mother, but the cow."—London Tid-Bits.

And He Was Cast Forth.

A busy Wall street broker went to church, Sunday.

First time in years. He curled up in a comfortable corner and began to dream of stocks.

The minister took his place in the pulpit.

"The Lord is risen," he said, in full voice.

The broker started up suddenly.

"How many points?" he blurted out, and they cast him forth.—Life.

A Handy Tool.

Mrs. Blinks—Where in the world is Mr. Blinks' revolver? I forgot to take it from under his pillow this morning.

New Girl (a recent arrival)—What's it like, mum?

"It's about so long, with a crook at one end, and its bright like silver."

"I don't know, mum, unless it's that thing little Tommy is hammerin' tacks wid."—Good News.

What's In a Name?

"What name did they give the baby Uncle Mose?"

"I disremembered perzactly, but it was some kind of beer."

"Beer?"

"No, it wasn't beer, it was some sort of ale—Dannale, or Samuale, or Emanuale—I forgits which."—Texas Siftings.

Maternal Duties.

Ethel—Ma, I want some water to christen my doll.

Ethel's Ma—No, dear; it is wrong, you know, to make sport of holy things.

Ethel—Well, then, I want some wax to waxinate her. She's old enough now to have something done to her!—Grip

A Dim Recollection.

Judge—Was it in the daytime or in the night that you heard the noise made by some one trying to enter the house?

Witness—It was in the night.

"Are you positive?"

"Yes. It must have been after dark, for, you see, I've only got a dim recollection of it."—Texas Siftings.

A Pleasant Misunderstanding.

"This mince-pie is delicious," said Cadley to Mrs. Noorich. "Have you the receipt for it?"

"Sir?" said the lady, indignantly. "Receipt? No, sir, I have not, because I have not yet received the bill."—Harper's Bazar.

Not Exactly Buried.

Lawyer Martin—Here's me client, yure honor—a poor felly wid wan foot in th' grave, an'—

Plain-drunk Client—Hold on, Irish; don't go too fast. Dat foot was bit off by a shark down to Honduras.—Judge.

Changed the Tools.

"Can you split wood with dexterity?" she asked of the tramp who was looking for a job.

"No'm, I allus uses an ax," was the unexpected answer.—Detroit Free Press.

A Summer Girl.

"Where's the doughter?" asked a Bedouin chieftain of his wife.

"Oh, she's sitting out on the steppes with her young man!"—Puck.

THE BALTIMORE VICTIMS.

Monument Erected to American Sailors at Valparaiso, Chili.

On October 16 last, C. W. Riggin, boatswain's mate of the United States cruiser Baltimore, was stabbed and shot by Chilians at Valparaiso, dying instantaneously; while William Turnbull, a coal heaver, who was also stabbed on the same day, lingered until the 25th of October. The officers and men of the Baltimore resolved in order to perpetuate the memory of their shipmates, and to serve as a record of the deed, to erect a monument in the British cemetery at Valparaiso. Standing some ten feet high, the base and cross are of pure white marble, and the monument is a conspicuous mark in the resting place of the English and Americans who have found eternal rest in Chili. On All-Saints day, says Harper's Weekly, the grave of Riggin and Turnbull was literally covered with flowers, under the direction of Col. W. B. McCreery, the United States consul. A handsome bronze railing of nautical design will surround the monument and grave, testifying to the esteem in which the dead seamen were held by their comrades.

An Important Discovery.

Greyneck—You remember that very handsome watch I lost five or six years ago?

Smilax—Yes, I recall the occurrence.

"You remember how I looked high and low for it, and could not find it anywhere?"

"I remember your diligent and exhaustive search."

"Well, yesterday I put on an old waistcoat that I hadn't worn in years, and what do you think that I found in the pocket?"

"Your watch; let me congratulate you."

"No, I found the hole that I must have lost it through."—Boston Courier.

Willing to Stop.

Matron—Mr. Nicefello, I dislike to scold, but I really must. You ought to know better than to keep my daughter standing in that cold front hall half an hour, saying good night to her, as you did last night, and as you do every time you come. This morning she had a terrible cold, and her lungs are not strong, you know.

Mr. Nicefello—My goodness! Is she sick?

Matron—No, but she's had a narrow escape. Now these long drawn out good nights have got to stop.

Mr. Nicefello—Indeed they must, my dear madam. I'll go right out for a clergyman.—N. Y. Weekly.

Time to Rebel.

Young Father—What on earth is the baby yelling so about now?

Young Mother (wearily)—Dear me! I don't know. Perhaps that new nurse is singing "Comrades" to him.—Good News.

Couldn't Corner Her.

He—You say you never were in love before, and yet this is the third time we have been engaged.

She (triumphantly)—Yes; but didn't I break those other two engagements?—Judge.

She Had Read the Papers.

"Papa," said young Mrs. Honker, "won't you please give George and me $10,000?"

"What do you want that much money for?"

"We want to build a $5,000 house."—Jury.

It Probably Skipped Out.

Customer (to waiter)—Some cheese, please.

Waiter—Beg pardon, sir. Sorry, sir. Cheese out, sir.

Customer—That so? When do you expect it back?—Texas Siftings.

In 4000.

"That ruined city they have just discovered turns out to be the fabled town of New York," said Prof. Bones, of Melbourne.

"Was it destroyed by volcanic action?"

"No. It was buried in mud and garbage by titanic inaction."—Life.

BLAINE WILL RESIGN

Reported That He is to Leave the Cabinet.

THE DATE IS NOT DETERMINED,

Physical Inability to Perform His Duties the Cause.

The Authority for This Statement Only Second to That of the Secretary Himself—He May Go to Cuba After His Resignation is Accepted—Speculation as to His Successor—Minister Lincoln Spoken of to Take His Place.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Mr. Secretary Blaine's resignation from the Cabinet will, after a reasonable interval, follow his letter of withdrawal as a Presidential possibility.

The authority for this is second only to Secretary Blaine himself.

Mr. Blaine has reached a definite determination to resign his commission as Secretary of State. Only the date at which this action shall be taken remains undetermined.

The reason which Secretary Blaine will give to the President for retiring from the Cabinet will be that of physical inability to continue to perform the exacting duties of his present office. This is, in fact, the true reason for Mr. Blaine's determination to withdraw entirely from official life.

It has been the hope of Mr. Blaine for several months to spend some of the present winter in a warmer climate.

When he left Bar Harbor last fall it was with the intention of going from Washington either to the extreme southern part of Texas or to Mexico to spend the winter.

The Chilian imbroglio dragged its length along till a trip of so great extent became impracticable. Since the Chilian affair has assumed less importance, it is stated that Mr. Blaine has expressed a desire to go as soon as possible to the Bermudas and remain till late spring or early summer months have settled the fickle weather of this latitude.

Since that time Mr. Blaine has also expressed a desire to visit Cuba, and it is thought that that island will be his probable destination after he has resigned from the Cabinet.

It is, of course, too early to speculate as to who may succeed Mr. Blaine as Secretary of State. The name of ex-Senator Edmunds of Vermont has been suggested because of his known intimacy with the President and his great experience in public affairs, but it will be remembered that Mr. Edmunds assigned his own precarious health as his reason for resigning from the Senate.

New York already has a member of the Cabinet, which would seem to debar from consideration the name of ex-Senator Evarts, who was Secretary of State under President Hayes.

It is thought more probable that the President would look to the West for a successor to Secretary Blaine, and it is suggested that he might find it good politics to appoint a man from Illinois.

In this connection the name of Robert T. Lincoln, who was Secretary of War under President Arthur, and who is now United States Minister at the Court of St. James, might be recalled and promoted to the head of the State Department.

The most important subject after reciprocity now that the department has in hand is the Behring Sea question, with which Minister Lincoln's duties during the past three years have made him thoroughly familiar.

WANTS TO GO TO CONGRESS.

This Candidate Says His Platform Will be Compensation for ex-Slaves.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 10.—In his newspaper, the "Gazette," published here, Editor John H. Williamson, colored, announces himself as a candidate for Congress. He intimated last November that he would be a candidate.

He says his platform will be compensation for ex-slaves, as proposed by President Lincoln, who, at the time he made his famous proposition, admitted that they were the lawful property of those claiming to be their masters, and proposed to pay $300 each for them, liberate them, and stop the war.

Williamson declares that letters from all parts of the country commend his views.

Connecticut and the Fair.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 10.—Governor Bulkeley has issued a proclamation inviting all persons interested to meet in convention in the hall of the House of Representatives at Hartford on Monday, Feb. 22, at 11 o'clock, for the purpose of appointing a commission to organize and provide for an adequate and creditable exhibition of the arts and industries of Connecticut at the World's Fair in Chicago, and to consider the expediency of raising by popular subscription a sum sufficient to defray the expenses of such a commission. The Governor takes this unusual method because of the failure of the Legislature to make such an appropriation for the purpose.

Bardsley's Defalcation.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10.—The City Comptroller has filed in court the official statement of ex-City Treasurer John Bardsley's defalcation, preparatory to collecting on Bardsley's bond. The amount of the default is determined to be $553,908.62. This does not include $400,011 which Bardsley deposited in the Keystone Bank and which was there at the time of the bank's failure.

CAPERED LIKE A MONKEY.

Hard Work Capturing an Insane Man on a Roof.

BABYLON, L. I., Feb. 10.—James O. Lunger, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. here, has become suddenly insane from the result of a fall sustained while skating on Saturday last. A doctor was at that time summoned, and it was discovered that Lunger was suffering from a slight concussion of the brain.

Last night Lunger was discovered on the roof of the Y. M. C. A. building by C. E. Livingston, one of the directors. He capered about like a monkey, gesticulating wildly all the time. An attempt was made to get him down, but he ran away at the approach of his friends and there was a regular chase about the roof of the Y. M. C. A. building.

He was finally caught, overpowered and taken down to the gymnasium, where a sleeping potion was administered. There is a chance that he may recover his reason.

SHERMAN'S ELECTION.

Resolutions in the Ohio House to Investigate Charges.

COLUMBUS, Ohio., Feb. 10.—A Democratic member of the House of Representatives has prepared a resolution reciting that Hon. John Sherman has been charged with securing his re-election as United States Senator by duress, frauds, threats and promises, in violation of law and asking the Senate to investigate.

It calls upon Senator Calvin S. Brice to ask an investigation of Sherman's rights to a seat under the rules and regulations governing such procedure in the Senate.

It meets with the indorsement of the Democratic side of the House.

Had Four Husbands.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 10.—Amiza Williams, a woman with four husbands, has been committed to the county jail on the charge of bigamy. When Seth Williams, husband No. 4, married the woman he thought she was single. When they quarreled the wife showed her husband four wedding rings, and she said she could keep on adding to the number until she got the right man. This angered the husband and he swore out a warrant for her arrest.

Good Friends Again.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 10.—George Dixon, the champion lightweight pugilist and Tom O'Rourke, his backer, who had a quarrel in New York last week, have made up. Last night O'Rourke says that the difference has been settled and that the trouble had been caused by a member of the company. He said that if Cal McCarthy wanted another "go" with Dixon he would be accommodated for any amount he would name.

Says It Was Self Defense.

SEDALIA, Mo., Feb. 10.—W. J. Condon, a Missouri Pacific brakeman, was shot and instantly killed by Lawyer William Parmalee in the latter's office. The trouble grew out of the garnishment of Condon's salary by Parmalee. Condon leaves a wife and two children. Parmalee claims Condon had repeatedly threatened his life and he shot in self-defense.

Anna Key Laird's Will.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The will of Anna Key Laird has been filed. She leaves legacies amounting to $181,000, of which $10,000 is to the Children's Country Home, $6,000 to the Clergymen's Retiring Fund Society of New York, $5,000 to the Washington Home for Incurables, and $6,000 to the Vestry of Christ Church, Georgetown.

Will Be Sent to an Asylum.

LIMA, O., Feb. 10.—Bertha Jacobs, the 14-year-old daughter of a rich farmer, burned her father's barn yesterday, causing a loss of $4,000, then ran away, and was caught while setting fire to a neighbor's barn. She has been subject to epilepsy for years, and will be sent to a lunatic asylum.

FIGHTING IN SENEGAL.

The French Under Col. Humbert Defeat King Samory.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Fuller details of the attack of Col. Humbert on King Samory in Senegal have been received.

Col. Humbert met a most determined resistance on the part of the enemy. After being defeated in one battle, Samory retreated and reformed his forces, making a desperate stand.

Col. Humbert again attacked him and dispersed his men after a severe conflict. In the two battles Samory lost 150 killed and over 300 wounded. The French lost 10 killed and 53 wounded.

Says He Was Swindled.

BOSTON, Feb. 10.—A. Leland Brown, of Newton, is the plaintiff in a suit which is before the Supreme Court. He charges that he has been swindled by the defendants, James H. Langley, Everett G. Weinsckouck and William F. Manning, doing business as H. S. Townsend & Co. They induced him to purchase bonds of the so-called Columbia Land and Lumber Company of Kentucky to the amount of $4,000. He charges that the company owns no lands or anything else of value. The defendants were ordered to file an answer to-morrow.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE

Trying to Fix the Blame for the Hotel Royal Fire.

ONE SENSATIONAL STORY TOLD.

A Hallboy Says that the Night Clerk and Engineer Were Drunk.

If They Had Been Sober They Could Have Given the Alarm in Time to Prevent the Terrible Loss of Life—Working on the Ruins—Twenty Bodies Recovered—Careless Work of the Italian Laborers—Mrs. Van Norden's Diamonds Found—Who Two of the Victims Were.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Twenty bodies have been taken from the ruins of the Hotel Royal. Only eight have been identified. The others lie at the Morgue awaiting identification.

A gang of Italians were at work all yesterday and last night digging for bodies. They work with no more caution than if they were making a cellar in plain earth.

Now and then they strike an article that should be preserved, but if not watched they throw it aside with other rubbish. It has required the utmost vigilance on the part of the overseers to keep the Italians from driving their picks and shovels through human remains.

One skull at the Morgue looks as though it had been struck with a pick-axe. The body will probably never be identified.

The other bodies found are probably beyond recognition, yet there are pieces of clothing, jewelry, etc., that may lead to their identification.

Several bits of jewelry were taken from the ruins, among them an amethyst brooch and two coral pins, with pendants, marked "H. H." All the property recovered, some of the most trivial character, has been taken to the Thirteenth street police station, which was visited all day by a stream of inquirers. Most of them had had no property in the hotel nor had they friends there.

Scores of people went to the Morgue yesterday looking for lost friends. One glance into the rough board caskets, where lay simply a charred mass of human flesh, and the identifiers started back with an exclamation of horror and the words: "I could not recognize anybody in that form."

The diamonds of Mrs. Hattie Van Norden, of which so much has been said, were found in a silver, gold-lined casket. These jewels were identified by Henry Van Norden, who has haunted the ruins night and day since early Sunday morning, as the property of his missing wife. There were four diamond rings, one pair of diamond earrings, a solitaire screw stud, one diamond scarf pin and a badge of the Benevolent Order of Elks.

Fire Marshal Mitchell has instituted a searching investigation into the origin of the fire which caused the disaster. A number of employes were examined, but all had different theories as to the cause of the fire, and nothing definite was brought out. The hearing will be continued to-morrow.

A remarkable story was told yesterday by Tom Fox, the head hallboy in the house, which corroborates the statement made by Felix Kraemer and other guests that there was an outrageous delay in alarming the inmates of the house and in sending out an alarm of fire.

If Fox's story be true a terrible reckoning will be exacted of Night Clerk Underwood and Engineer Harding. Fox will be called upon to testify before the fire marshal.

To a reporter Fox said: "If that man Underwood had been sober, most of the lives lost on Saturday night would have been saved. I left the house at 1:30 a. m. and was standing at the corner of Forty-second street when the fire broke out. Then I ran back and helped to get the people out. If Underwood had only been awake he would have discovered the fire before it got any headway. He and Harding managed to satisfy Mr. Meares that they were sober, but I know that they weren't."

Fox also said that Underwood was in the habit of procuring bottles of whiskey from the bar, which he and the engineer drank every night.

Who Two of the Victims Were.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 10.—Mrs. Cohen, who perished in the Hotel Royal fire, was the wife of J. Cohen, a shoe dealer in this city. Two years ago last August she eloped with Louis Levy, of London, Ont., another victim of the fire. For some time they lived abroad, but returned here and recently moved to New York, where they met their death. Levy was known here as a gambler and faker.

The Vitriol Thrower Convicted.

CARLISLE, Pa., Feb. 10.—Cora, wife of George Frey, both of Newville, this county, who in September last threw vitriol in her husband's face while asleep, has been convicted. The trial lasted two days and was very sensational. Sentence was suspended.

MUST RESIDE HERE.

U. S. Pensioners in Other Countries to Receive No Money.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The attention of Congressman Newberry of Illinois, having been called to a dispatch from Montreal stating that there is much anxiety among persons residing in Canada and drawing pensions from the United States Government, over his bill providing that no pensions shall be paid to any person who is not a resident of the United States.

Mr. Newberry said his measure was a good one, and its main object was to bring the pensioners residing in other countries, back to the United States.

In Germany, Austria, Turkey, Egypt, and in fact all over the world, he said, there were large numbers of United States pensioners residing who had no intention of ever returning to the United States.

They could live abroad cheaper, and they were raising families, the sons becoming citizens of foreign countries, and, in case of war with the United States, they would fight against their mother country.

"When I was in Germany," Mr. Newberry continued, "I talked with any number of United States pensioners who expressed an intention of remaining away from home, and altogether, about 10,000, or more, of such people are living throughout the world."

THE WATERBURY CASE.

Sheriff Welsh Says the Kidnappers Will Be Given to New York State.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 10.—The Waterbury kidnapping case came before the Westchester grand jury, that body having its session.

Charles P. Waterbury of Long Ridge and his little 8-year-old son Ward, who was kidnapped by Charles E. Waterbury, John McCann and Sam Sutherland, came to White Plains in response to subpœnas by District-Attorney Platt.

Both father and son went before the grand jury and told the story of the kidnapping. It is said that the recital of the case by little Ward made a profound impression on the jurymen.

Sheriff Thomas Welsh of Connecticut was also here. He said the Connecticut authorities would deliver the three kidnappers over to the Westchester authorities if the grand jury found an indictment.

Damaged at Sea.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The ship Granite State, Captain Barstow, from Hiogo, Japan, 167 days out, reports that on November 23, in latitude 43, longitude 104, had a heavy gale from w. n. w. with a tremendous sea. The ship was under lower topsails and reefed foresail. The seas broke continuously over the vessel. One terrific sea came over her stern, carrying away the wheel and stearing gear, breaking the wheel standard and windows in the after end of the house, flooding the cabin and forcing the ship broadside to the wind, doing more damage about the decks. The captain rigged tackles and ran off before the wind to repair her steering gear. Oil was used with good effect.

Shot Four of the Crowd.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 10.—A bloody tragedy is reported from Tollec, a small station ten miles east of this city. The constable at that place went to the home of a negro with a warrant for his arrest. He ordered the man out of the house. This was refused and the policeman then attempted to enter by force. Five negroes were in the house, and they rushed out to the door, firing on him with pistols. The policeman, armed with a double-barreled shotgun, returned the fire, killing four of the crowd. Great excitement is reported and further trouble is apprehended.

Plimmer to Meet Kelly.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Articles of agreement have been signed by Thomas Kelly of this city and Billy Plimmer of England, for a glove contest to a finish at $1,000 a side. The match is to take place within the next six weeks at a time and place to be designated later. The men are to weigh 110 pounds at 2 o'clock on the day of the meeting. If the contest is interrupted by the police the referee will have power to name the time and place for another meeting. The contest is to be fought with skin gloves.

Baseball Magnates Meet.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 10.—Magnates of the Eastern Baseball Association met here last evening. Representatives from Albany, Troy, Lebanon, Buffalo, Binghamton, Elmira, Erie, Providence, New Haven, Toronto and Rochester were in attendance. A line of action for the coming season will be mapped out. The circuit likely to be adopted is: Toronto, Buffalo, Rochester, Elmira, Binghamton, Syracuse or Utica, Albany and Troy. The double championship scheme will probably be adopted.

To Set Aside the Mortgage.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 10.—George B. Phelps, of this city, has begun an action against the Carthage, Watertown & Sackett Harbor Railway Company to set aside the mortgage recently made in favor of the New York Guarantee and Indemnity Company for $300,000, upon the ground that the proper consents of stockholders of the railroad company have never been given to the execution of the mortgage.

Satisfactory to England and Canada.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—During a debate on British Columbia at the Royal Colonial Institute, Sir Charles Tupper, High Commissioner for Canada, said that the clauses relating to the arbitration of the Behring Sea question had been arranged in a manner eminently satisfactory to Great Britain and to Canada.

PERHAPS A MUTINY

Sensational Rumors of the Wreck of the Embiricos.

CAPTAIN AND OFFICERS KILLED.

Evident the Greeks Used Force to Prevent the Others Leaving the Vessel.

One Man Beaten Off From the Lifeboat With an Iron Bar and Was Drowned—The Greeks Refused to Allow Their Boat to Return to the Rescue of the Rest of the Crew—Room in the Lifeboat for Fifty, but Only Fifteen Permitted to Enter.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Sensational rumors are current to the effect that the Greek steamer Embiricos, which was recently wrecked off the Scilly Islands, foundered during a mutiny of the crew, in which the captain and some of the officers were murdered, and also that the remaining officers were murdered in a fight with knives to secure possession of one of the boats after the accident.

The statements of the survivors are conflicting, but it is evident that the Greeks, forming a majority of the saved, used violence to prevent the access of others to the boat.

Three Maltese sailors agree in stating that a man was beaten off from the boat with an iron bar and was drowned. Another Maltese says that the lifeboat which rescued the Greeks was about to return to the doomed vessel for the others, but the Greeks refused to allow it to proceed, and the English captain and officers were left to their fate.

Should the condition of the bodies on recovery prove that violence was used, the Greeks will be held for trial.

A Maltese named Balzan, who was on the Embiricos, says that the steamer was moving at half speed in a heavy fog, when early in the morning he was awakened by a violent shock. He found the vessel had struck a reef of rocks near an island.

A rock appeared to have torn the bottom of the vessel before the foremast. Her bow was slightly elevated. Water was rushing in and flooding the stern, and the Embicicos was settling down.

The captain was on the bridge trying to direct operations. There was a general scramble for the boats.

Balzan and his companions entered the lifeboat despite the efforts of the Greeks to exclude them. Balzan admits that there was a call for knives, but only to be used to cut the boat away.

When they left in the lifeboat, the captain and officers were trying to launch the other boat. There was room for fifty men in the lifeboat, but it contained only fifteen. When they had pulled a little distance those left on the vessel were heard shrieking and imploring to be saved.

The Maltese started to back water, but the Greeks overpowered him and threatened to kill him unless he obeyed orders. He did not see the vessel founder, but looking back ten minutes later he could not discern anything.

According to another story, the Greeks declined to pick up men who were swimming behind the lifeboat, and felled with an iron bar a man who clutched the boat.

"He works actually sixteen hours a day, and said that any man could do it. He assured me that he had reached the age when he appreciated leisure, and that he had modest and legitimate fears that in the event of his re-election he might not make the record that he did before.

"He dreaded the horrors of a Presidential campaign. I do not know that he would absolutely decline, but he is only negatively an aspirant."

GRUEB WILL RESIGN AND RUN.

Here is Sad News for Johnnie Kean whose Vassals Told Him He Would be Nominated for Governor.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10.—General E. Burd Grubb, Minister to Spain, will resign in April and come back to New Jersey to run for Governor.

The readers of THE PRESS may be assured that this is absolutely true, although General Grubb has not yet told even his own family of his decision. This despatch contains the first news of the determination of the General's, and will be a sad blow to the hopes of Johnnie Kean of Elizabeth, who has been told by those hungry to get their hands in his purse, that he would have the nomination.

Of course Kean could n't be elected, but we who sit and look over with unbiased eyes the political aspect in New Jersey, can see that if Governor Abbett continues his admiration of Senator Hill and follows his selfish methods in dictating every line of policy and all candidates, there may be a split in the Democratic party of New Jersey, wide enough for a Republican candidate to slip into the executive chair.

But with such prominent Democratic candidates available for the office of Governor as James Smith, jr., of Newark, or such worthy dark horses as John Scudder of Trenton, it seems almost impossible for that party in New Jersey to make a mistake.

JERSEY CENTRAL LEASED.

The P. & R. Secures Control of It and the Lehigh Valley Road.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 10—The New Jersey Central railroad and the Lehigh Valley railroad have passed into the hands of the Philadelphia and Reading.

The terms are a 7 per cent. guarantee on the stock of both roads by Drexel, Morgan & Co., which means the Vanderbilts.

It is understood that the Delaware & Hudson company will act with the above, so the deal practically places the control of the coal of the whole country in the hands, as it may be said, of one man.

The executive officers of the Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley, are to have conspicuous recognition in the reorganization.

Dixey in Plainfield.

Henry E. Dixey and company, under the management of Charles Frohman, will present Darnley's light touch-and-go comedy "The Solicitor" at Music Hall, Friday evening.

The amusing complications and situations are said to go with a snap and vim that provoke shouts of laughter. This is especially true of the second act, the hilarious ending of which received several curtain calls each evening, during its run of one hundred nights in New York city. Dixey's impersonation of the London lawyer has proved to be a thoroughly artistic and consistent one. He makes no attempt at creating a laugh through any personal efforts, but relies purely on his serious treatment of the role to impress his audience mirthfully.

Preceeding "The Solicitor" will be given "A Tangled Skein", a bright one-act farce by Benjamin F. Roeder. The company is a competent one and includes such well-known players as Miss Virginia Buchanan, Miss Josephine Plows-Day, Miss Marie Greenwald, Miss Belle Bucklin, Miss Fanny Cohen, and Lewis Baker, Robert Hickman, Joseph Frankau, Walter Granville, Fred Owen Baxter, Samuel Opstein, J. W. Glenmore and others.

MR. EICK'S SIDE OF THE CASE.

A Defender Who Says That Everything is False That Anybody Else Says.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Having read with surprise the article in your Monday's issue under the caption of "Organist and Church at Odds", I ask that you give the same prominence to this communication in the interest of simple truth and justice. While the article in question has a grain of truth, it is buried under an avalanche of misunderstanding calculated to mislead those of your readers who are unacquainted with the facts. One of the statements of facts is the quotation of Mr. Eick's remark to Miss Fellows that her "Uncle John might run the rest of the church but should n't run this end," which was brought out by her saying "Her uncle was the music committee and she would sing as she pleased." Each Sunday the choir sing four not "five selections," and it is a fact that the members of the choir suggested that the music be given out one week in advance. But on learning Mr. Eick's objections the gentlemen acquiesced, and the subject was dropped so far as they were concerned. Mr. Eick was not "Called before the session" nor did he promise to give the desired notice except for a couple of Sundays.

The statement that Mr. Eick sent in his resignation once or twice, "But each time he was petted and cajoled and induced to remain" is not true. The only resignation was that tendered to Dr. Ketcham last Friday. Mr. Eick had planned to give the Oratorio of the "Crucifixion" in the church on Good Friday, and had succeeded in securing a fine chorus of thirty voices from the best of our local talent, but no steps were taken by him until he had received the sanction and approval of Dr. Ketcham and several members of the board of trustees who alone had authority to grant the use of the church. As it was unnecessary to consult the music committee, there was no valid reason for indignation on their part, they having no authority in the matter. It must be admitted that the praise service was "Given under difficulties", but that can be easily understood by those who had been accustomed to the beautiful music brought out of the grand organ by Mr. Eick. The musical service last Sunday night, instead of being in any particular satisfactory, was simply a nightmare and constant pain to lovers of harmony. The "affair" is not in an unsettled condition so far as Mr. Eick is concerned, and while his host of friends in and out of the church would be only too happy to have him back in his old place, his resignation was fully intended to be final. Instead of the feeling in the church being "Almost wholly against him", as a matter of fact the contrary is the case and he has a majority of the congregation as his friends to-day. Another error is the statement that "He drove an excellent singer from the choir". The whole trouble is attributed to the music committee going outside their province in the determination to direct the musical director on matters that should have been left to the judgment of a thorough, competent organist and musician. TRUTH.

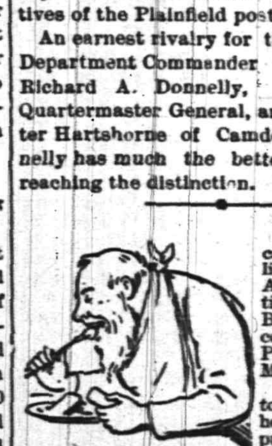
Good Enough as They Are.

Every session of the State Legislature a number of bills are sure to be introduced proposing changes in the game and fish laws, which after going through certain stages of legislative action, are quietly laid away in oblivion. Already some ten or twelve such bills have been introduced in both the Senate and House, which are so directly opposite each other in meaning, that it is to be hoped by all true sportsmen that no consideration will be given them. Two years ago the New Jersey Game and Fish Protective society, whose headquarters are in this city caused to be drafted and presented to the Legislature a bill, which met the approval of well-known sportsmen to whom it was submitted, and also that of the committees on game and fisheries, and it was passed without opposition. That bill meets all requirements and gives general satisfaction to sportsmen. Let the game and fish laws remain as they are.

Race For the Commandership.

The annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in New Jersey will be held at Trenton to-morrow and Friday. It will be attended by representatives of the Plainfield posts.

An earnest rivalry for the position of Department Commander is on between Richard A. Donnelly, Gov. Abbett's Quartermaster General, and ex-Postmaster Hartshorne of Camden. Gen. Donnelly has much the better prospect of reaching the distinction.



A good appetite can be bought, like anything else. And good digestion after it, too. Both of them come with Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That starts the torpid liver into healthy action, purifies and enriches the blood, cleanses and repairs the system, returns health and vigor, and builds up flesh and strength. For all diseases that come from a disordered liver or impure blood, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Scrofulous, Skin and Scalp Diseases—even Consumption (or Lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages, the "Discovery" is the only remedy so sure and certain that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

On these terms, it's the cheapest blood-purifier sold, no matter how many hundred doses are offered for a dollar (or less—for with this, you pay only for the good you get.

Can you ask for better proof of its superiority over all other blood-purifiers?

MANAGER SMYTH CONVALESCING.

The Professor, the Surgeon and Five Assistants Did It.

James Smyth, the "Great American Bowler", who met with an accident a few weeks ago by falling on the ice at the Bayonne station and dislocating his shoulder, is recovering from the shock and able to use his hand. He asserts that he thinks it might have been better for him had he gone to the Bayonne City Hospital, as feminine nurses are in attendance there, and more delicate treatment would have prevailed than he received in New York. On entering the hospital in New York the first man to examine him said "Extend arm!' That being impossible, he said "Must call assistant", and six of them came. After profile inspection one of them mentioned something about twins—presumably reflecting upon some other case; another requested different positions of the arm, each apparently having a hypothesis of his own. Finally the shoulder was properly set, and Mr. Smyth was informed that he might safely go home; but, disregarding the severity of his sufferings, he insisted that his curiosity be gratified as to the titles of the gentlemen to whom he was indebted. They were given to him as above. "With a small additional number in attendance, they would have had to include a coroner;"—said he—"but that professor is a very fine fellow".

A Discharged Hotel Clerk Makes Trouble.

Sheriff Hicks, yesterday, at Elizabeth levied on Ryan's Hotel on West Grand street, near the union depot, and put a receiver in charge of the place, but the execution on which the levy was made was satisfied to-day. The writ was against William J. Ryan, the proprietor, and his wife, Mary E. Ryan, in whose name the property stands.

The hotel and grounds are estimated to be worth $45,000. The Mutual Life Insurance company of New York holds a $20,000 first mortgage on it and Gottfried Krueger, of Newark, holds another mortgage for $5,000. The personal property is said to be all encumbered by chattel mortgages. The levy was made to satisfy a claim of $50 for salary made by William H. Mollison, formerly chief clerk of the place, whose position is now occupied by Charles W. White, brother of the junior member of the firm of VanEmburgh & White of this city.

They Sleep in Jersey.

Soldiers' cemeteries are so closely associated with the war that the most of people think they must all be in the south, where the fighting and killing was done. It may be surprising to some, therefore, to know that there are several of these cemeteries in New Jersey.

The first is at Beverly, and the interments are 164 in number, of which seven are under the classification "unknown".

At Finn's Point there are 2,645 soldiers buried and about 106 are recorded as known. The "unknown" number 2,539. The average citizens, no doubt, are not aware that so many soldiers, Union and Confederate, lie at rest in the soil of the State.

STIR AMONG COAL ROADS.

An Alleged Deal with the Jersey Central and Reading to Centralize the Coal Traffic—The Jersey Central Changes Hands.

The recent conferences between the presidents of the coal-carrying railroads have given rise to no end of surmises and started innumerable rumors. It is an indisputable fact that president McLeod of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad spent almost every day last week in New York city conferring with president J. Rogers Maxwell of the Jersey Central, president Samuel Sloan of the Lackawanna, and J. Pierpont Morgan.

Whether anything practicable was accomplished by these conferences will be made known when the persons concerned in them get ready to speak. At present all of the gentleman named are either dumb or non-committal.

The story that Wall street has taken a strong fancy to is to the effect that a great coal trust or "harmony combination" will be formed which shall include the principal coal-producing and coal-carrying interests of the country. J. Pierpont Morgan is credited with having shown an active interest in bringing this deal about, and he declined to either affirm or deny the soft impeachment when asked about it yesterday. He seemed to be perfectly contented with the way that things were going, and members of the anthracite coal trade generally were in buoyant spirits.

There is no doubt that important negotiations are pending between the Reading, Lackawanna, Jersey Central, Lehigh Valley, and possibly Delaware and Hudson and the Erie. That they will lead to any changes in the managements of the several roads is, however, stoutly denied by officers of each road. That a general board of control over the coal traffic may be established is altogether likely. In the meantime the Wall street speculative interest in these coal stocks is at high tension.

In Delaware, Lackawanna and Western stock there was something which looked enough like a corner to remind Wall street that "Deacon" S. V. White was again active. The quotations were run up to 159 as the highest point for the day and the close was at 158, a gain of 6¼ points for the day. Reading touched 50⅞ and closed at 49⅝, an advance of 3⅝ points. Delaware and Hudson picked up three-quarters of a point and New Jersey Central 3½. It was a good day for the coal stocks all around.

There was a plenty of talk that speculative causes were at the bottom of the boom, but the general explanation of it lay in the belief that the coal roads had reached an agreement. A Philadelphia report was to the effect that a syndicate of bankers had undertaken the task of concentrating the coal business in the hands of seven or eight great corporations now engaged in the traffic, driving out the individual operator, and doing away with the middleman. Such a change would give the companies 25 cents a ton more profit without increasing prices to the consumer. Each railroad by this plan would buy up and secure control of the tonnage originating along its line.

At the railroad offices in New York nobody would admit that anything was known of such a deal. Mr. Sloan of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western talked of the tonic effects of buying up interests which wanted profitable investments. President Maxwell of the Jersey Central left his office early in the day, and he said that the formation of a coal combination was new to him.

The latest story is that the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, either by lease or purchase, had secured control of the Lehigh Valley and the New Jersey Central line. During the day the report created the liveliest interest, and in spite of the fact that it was not officially confirmed there is little doubt of its truth. There was a general disposition on the part of brokers and speculators to accept it as a fact.

The vigorous liberal policy of president McLeod in the administration of the Reading's affairs has been manifested so frequently of late that nearly any enterprise of his is sure to meet with generous support.

It is understood that recent heavy purchases of Reading and of Jersey Central stock are for the Vanderbilts and that they amount to control. The Reading is the heaviest of the coal producers, and in addition it handles a vast tonnage for private producers.

The late William H. Vanderbilt secured control of the Reading seven or eight years ago, and the present scheme is all a part of a tremendous deal, incidental features of which have already been accomplished. The Reading want to get under its control a gigantic Eastern system, and effectually to prove this one has not to go very far back in railroad history.

Besides the possession of the Reading by the Vanderbilts, there is good authority for saying that the terms are now under consideration for the lease of both the Lehigh Valley railroad and the Central Railroad of New Jersey to the Reading. It is proposed that the Reading shall guarantee the bonds and 7 per cent. per annum on the stock of both roads. The Jersey Central is the natural connection of the Reading to New York. The Lehigh Valley has no terminals in New York. The plan is for it to use the Jersey Central's terminals, which are very extensive.

The Baltimore and Ohio now has the use of the Jersey Central tracks to New York, and the Pennsylvania consents to the control of the Jersey Central by the Reading because it would keep it from falling into the possession of the Baltimore and Ohio at some future day. The Jersey Central was leased to the Reading a few years ago, but the lease was broken when the Reading got into financial difficulties.

The Reading, the Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley handle the bulk of the anthracite coal, and their possession will give the Vanderbilts practical control of the coal business. The Beach Creek line, which the Vanderbilts own, now gives them a line northward into New York State from the Reading coal fields.

AT LAST A CHAUTAUQUA NOVEL.

How Many Plainfielders Can Be Recognized in Its Pages!

Plainfield people will be especially interested in the latest book from the pen of that gifted author, John Habberton, inasmuch as Plainfield was so long the headquarters of the famous Chautauqua movement, and inasmuch as Mr. Habberton's new book is devoted entirely to the Chautauquans, after whom it is named.

"The Chautauquans" is a handsome book, to begin with, for it is issued from the press of the well-known publishers, Robert Bonner's Sons. It is finely bound and richly illustrated by Warren B. Davis. But it is more than handsome: it is intensely interesting. The wonder is that the C. L. S. C. has not before been made the subject of a story. There is certainly material enough in that organization to make a hundred romances. Mr. Habberton was just the man to write the first one. He grasps the Chautauqua idea, and he grasps its possibilities to the writer of fiction. This story gives one a very practical idea of what Chautauqua has done and is doing, and will impress the general reader much more effectually than will the ordinary pamphlets on the subject. One result of the Chautauqua movement is summed up in this paragraph: "Another effect of the reading course was brought to the general attention of postmaster Brown, who one day informed the minister that there had been quite a change in the usual Winter demand for light literature, of which his store was the principal depot. He had sold as many novels as usual, but the quality demanded was higher, and he had been surprised by orders for a few books of solid nature. The demand for a better class of periodicals, he said, was larger than before in the town, and many high class magazines were purchased by people who did not at the same time abandon such lighter literature as they always had been reading." If Mr. Habberton's story is read by all the members of Chautauqua Circle it will have a larger circulation than even his popular "Helen's Babies", and that it will be read by many outside the circle there is no doubt. Indeed, all in any way interested in the famous Chautauqua reading-circles will welcome this novel. All who have been to Chautauqua will recognize the perfect truth of the descriptions. The novel is an encyclopedia of information about getting up a Chautauqua circle. It tells in an amusing way the effect of starting a movement in a country village, and the enthusiasm which it arouses among young and old when once the organization gets into working order. Mr. Habberton is a veteran story-teller, and his new story is full of interest. There are in it many humorous and pathetic situations. The rich variety of characters in a typical American village affords the author a great opportunity for introducing interesting portraits and sketches. Altogether the book is one of the most notable literary achievements with the Chautauqua movement has brought forth. The Plainfield reader personally familiar with the leading figures in the Chautauqua movement, may fancy that he recognizes some of the characters in the tale. A very pretty love story is woven through the succession of Chautauquan incidents. The description of life at Lake Chautauqua is very interesting. "The Chautauquans" may be obtained by local booksellers, or by mail of the publishers, Robert Bonner's Sons, corner of William and Spruce streets, New York.

SEVEN-UP AT FANWOOD.

The Knight Had a Heavy Load to Carry.

The Highlanders met Monday in Fanwood for the third sitting in the struggle for supremacy at the old-fashioned game. On assembling, it was announced that the Captain could not attend, he having been unexpectedly called to preside at a reunion of seafaring veterans in Brooklyn; but with his customary forethought he had sought out the official scorer, Mr. ——, and insisted on being represented by him, so that the series should in no way be interrupted. Most disastrous was the result of the change, as the General and Co'onel so reduced the lead of their opponents that the latter now are but 14 points ahead, the score being Captain and Knight 600, General and Colonel 586. Much anxiety was expressed by Mr. —— as to what the Captain would say upon his return. The regulation refreshments were quietly discussed, and the sittings adjourned at any early hour.

And a good lamp must be simple; when it is not simple it is not good. Simple, Beautiful, Good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only, it is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.

WORDS BY MEN OF NOTE.

Ex-Senator Ingalls Discusses the Health of Public Men.

President Finney Gives His Idea About a Big Railroad Scheme and George R. Wendling Writes Eloquently About the Jews.

[COPYRIGHT, 1892.]

The lamented and untimely death of Senator Plumb in the meridian of his years, his powers and usefulness to Kansas and the country, has again called attention to the always interesting subject of the health of public men as affected by the necessary conditions of congressional and official life. The frequency of similar catastrophes in the last decade has appeared more startling because the victims of overwork were men of whom longevity might have confidently been predicted. Manning, Windom, Randall, Beck, Burnes, and many others who have fallen possessed extraordinary vigor, vitality and endurance. By the horoscope they were entitled to length of days and should have died hereafter.

No doubt the demands upon the time and strength of public men are excessive, and as constituencies grow and interests multiply must inevitably increase rather than diminish. It concerns the people, therefore, to consider whether they are imposing burdens heavier than can be borne, or whether these alarming fatalities are partly due to disregard of obvious laws, to irregular habits and causes that might be avoided—in other words, whether premature deaths are murder or suicide.

With a population of ten millions and access to the capital by stage coach, steamboat or private conveyance, the public service was leisurely, isolated and dignified. But with sixty-five millions, a railroad system making the journey from the Pacific to Washington a pastime, telegraphs to every hamlet, fast mails, the daily press, telephones and special deliveries, the post of an ambitious and successful politician is no sinecure.

Stenography and the typewriter have lightened the toil of official correspondence, but this labor at best is immense and imperative. Not to reply promptly to a letter is the unpardonable sin, and many that are private and confidential must be answered in autograph. Applicants for pension often address every member of their own delegation simultaneously about their claims, and sometimes those of other states as well, thus entailing an enormous aggregate of needless work upon the bureau, as each must be separately answered. Frequent errands at the department upon matters of patronage, favor and business are indispensable. Committees meet regularly. Bills must be examined for report, public questions studied, preparation made for debate, the daily sessions attended, newspapers read, guests entertained, social obligations discharged, and time found for recreation, food and rest.

Add to this the necessity for constant vigilance at home, of long and arduous campaigns for reelection, the control of primaries and conventions, weeks of stump speaking, hand shaking and seeing the boys, and it is evident that the eight hour law will not apply to legislators and statesmen. They roll the stone of Sisyphus and turn the wheel of Ixion, finding in endless toil unceasing fascination.

But numerous and unending as these functions are, with system, order, abstinence and prudent husbanding of hours they can be performed without exhaustion. It is not "overwork" alone that kills.

The temptations to irregularity are strong. The simplest axioms of health are occasionally disregarded and nature is a relentless creditor. Time which should be given to sleep is sometimes lent to conviviality. The pleasures of a luxurious table and a voluptuous couch are spendthrifts of the nerves and brain. The human body is an engine with a storage battery capable of so many pulsations, and when its energy is expended, whether by work or waste, that is the end.

Death is not an accident. It is appointed to every man to die, and when his time comes he goes. The maniac who fires a bullet through his disordered brain dies subject to the same inexorable law as the peaceful patriarch who painlessly yields up the ghost at fourscore, his lifes going out like a candle that has burned to it socket. The decrees of fate cannot be questioned nor fathomed, but it often occurs that in the ineffectual effort there is an irreconcilable discrepancy between the autopsy and the epitaph.

JOHN JAMES INGALLS.

AMERICA'S GREATEST RAILWAY.

IT WILL RUN STRAIGHT FROM CHICAGO TO NEW YORK, PASSING THROUGH CLEVELAND.

It may not be generally known that a straight line drawn from Chicago to New York city passes almost directly through the city of Cleveland, O. It is nevertheless a fact. It is also a fact that a straight line from Cleveland to New York city is about two hundred and twenty-four miles shorter than the distance between the said cities by the way of Buffalo and Albany via the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern and the New York Central & Hudson River railways. Now, with the enormous volume of business between Chicago, the great depot of the west, and New York city, the great seaboard port of America, it seems as if a saving of two hundred and twenty-four miles in distance and a saving of six hours in time by express trains would warrant an outlay sufficient to accomplish the construction of such a railway.

The plan would be to build a double-track line with the ultimate view of making it a four-track road, having maximum grades not to exceed twenty-six feet to the mile, with no divergence from a straight line excepting in cases where such a line would strike a stream of considerable size longitudinally, and then the line would be thrown on one side to avoid the bed of the stream.

Of course the first objection to be instantly urged is the enormous cost of such a road, and, secondly, that it would entirely ignore localities of importance. In reply to these objections I will say that, although no surveys have been made of this line, yet I believe that the same capital represented by the road, Cleveland to New York via Buffalo and Albany, would be ample to construct this line. Secondly, that this line would by its greatly reduced distance command all of the through business between Cleveland and Chicago, the great west, and the southwest to a great extent, and would therefore be able to ignore local business for the present, and that on a line so pre-eminent in its capacity local business of magnitude would grow with rapidity along its route. Cleveland would be the western initial point, as all lines between there and the west would feed it, and another line between Chicago and Cleveland is not required, at least for the present.

It may be said that the lines west of Cleveland would not surrender their business at Cleveland to this new road, but the position of such a road would be so strong that no line could for any length of time hold out against it.

If in place of building the Nickel Plate and the West Shore railways capitalists had put the same money into a scheme like this they would to-day have as good an investment as any in the United States. It is not necessary to go into statistics showing the volume of business that this line might command; the steady and tremendous growth of the west assures it all the business it could do. It would be the most magnificent achievement that has ever been consummated on American soil and would be the greatest railway in the world.

This article is merely the writing out of a scheme that has been the study of the writer for the past fifteen years, and it is his belief that it is only a question of time as to when the same will attract capital to its accomplishment. The city of Cleveland would reap large benefits from the construction of this line and would become without doubt the largest railway center (outside of Chicago) on this continent.

Cleveland should and can afford to take this matter earnestly in hand and at least furnish the money to have a survey made on the line herein described and estimates furnished, which would be necessary to enlist capital. It is the belief of this writer that the men interested in the Lake Shore and New York Central railways are more vitally interested in the construction of this line than any other body of men, for if controlled by any other company it would take largely from their earnings and would become the dictator to them of rates, while if they built and controlled it they could defy all competition between the west and east, could put all their through business upon it and devote their existing lines to local business, which is rapidly growing to dimensions that require all of their facilities.

The time is surely coming when this scheme will take form and get itself under way, and, although it may not be within the lifetime of this writer, it nevertheless is in the future a certainty.

ANTI-JUDAISM UNAMERICAN.

JEWS COMPARE FAVORABLY WITH CHRISTIANS IF WEIGHED FAIRLY.

There is not a drop of Jewish blood in my veins; I am not connected with the Jews by the marriage of any near or distant kinsman; I owe no Jew a dollar and no Jew owes me. I speak from the vantage ground of absolute independence. It is a splendid race, splendid in their patience, in their love for one another, in their endurance, in their sagacity and temperate habits, and splendid in their inflexible adherence to their Mosaic ideals.

Do you want an aristocracy of blood and birth? The Jews are the purest blooded people and have the best established descent in the world. Not Mirabeau in the French convention, nor Patrick Henry in the house of Burgesses, nor "Sam" Adams in old colonial days, ever said a more thrilling thing than Disraeli said in the English commons in reply to the charge that he was a Jew: "Yes, I am a Jew! When the ancestors of the honorable gentleman were brutal savages in an unknown island mine were priests in the temple!"

Do you seek an aristocracy of talent? The great church historian Neander was a Jew; Napoleon's marshals, Soult and Massena, were Jews; the brilliant and cynical Heine was a Jew, and—but the world's roll of great soldiers, authors, musicians, painters, poets, philosophers and financiers contain more Hebrew names than I could recite in many hours.

That you never see a Jew tramp or a Jew drunkard is a proverb, that you never meet a Jew beggar is a commonplace, and it is a statistical fact that there are relatively fewer inmates of our hospitals, jails and workhouses furnished by the Jews than any other race contributes.

Convert the Jews! Let us first convert our modern Christians to genuine Christianity. Suppress the Jews! A score of Russian czars cannot do it. Every people on earth has tried it and failed. They have outlived the Tudors and the Plantagenets, the Romanoffs, the tyranny of Spain, the dynasties of France, Charlemagne, Constantine, the Cæsars, the Babylonian kings and the Egyptian Pharaohs. It was God's own race for 4,000 years, and the awful persecution it has survived for 2,000 more stamps it as a race still bearing some mysterious relation to the plans of the eternal. The beauty and fidelity of Jewess women command my homage, and among wealthy and educated Jews the exquisite refinement of Jewesses, their culture and high breeding, blended with a sort of Oriental grace and dignity, put them among the most charming women in the world.

But the Jew is tricky! Is he? Were you ever taken in by a Methodist class leader on a real estate trade? Did you ever get into close quarters with a Presbyterian speculator? Did you ever buy mining stock on the representations of an Episcopalian broker? Did you ever take a man's word any quicker because he was a Baptist or a Roman Catholic? Did you never see a stone weighing twenty pounds concealed in a bale of cotton grown by a southerner? Did you never find lard in the butter sold by a New England Puritan?

The belief that the Jew is more dishonest than the Gentile is one-half nonsense and the other half prejudice and falsehood. The anti-Jewish feeling which now seems to be rising again is un-Christian, inhuman and un-American. No man can share it who believes in the universal fatherhood of God and the universal brotherhood of man. It is born of the devil and is detestable.

GEORGE R. WENDLING.

Brutality in the German Army.

The superior officers in the German army are said to go upon the principle that ill-usage is necessary to proper discipline. A Prussian officer met a party of men one evening at the gates of a fortress coming home from target practice. He went up to one man and asked him if he had made the right number of points, and on being answered in the negative he boxed the man's ears and called him "a Swabian swine!" At Fort Albeck, near Ulm, a man was accused of being dirty, which does not really appear to have been the case. He was, however, scrubbed by some non-commissioned officers in the presence of an officer until the blood ran down his body. The same man, in October last year, when the weather was cold, was taken, after some very hard drill and when steaming with perspiration, to the pump, where all his clothes were stripped off him and ice-cold water thrown over him by two non-commissioned officers. He was then scrubbed all over till the blood came again, as well as kicked and cuffed unmercifully. A colonel of engineers appears to have used most degrading language to his men, and one day passing by a sentry who did not, as he thought, present arms smartly enough he cut the man across the face with a riding whip.

Tasteful and Becoming Imitations.

To provide for the fashion of wearing bands at the edge of the dress skirt and otherwise there are certain woven textiles which bear a close resemblance to fur. A new close short-pile silk plush that can hardly be distinguished from beaver at a short distance is economically used in place of that fur. There is also a production of French looms so like the expensive Persian lamb that an expert alone would detect the difference. Gray and black astrakhan are likewise admirably copied. These imitation furs are in no way common or dowdy; they are very much worn, and are really in better taste than rabbit or catskin dyed to imitate more expensive furs.

Wonders of the Trance State.

Prof. William James, a well-known Harvard instructor, in speaking of the trance condition and trances in general, says: "I know a woman who in her trances knows facts which altogether transcend her possible normal consciousness—facts about the lives of people whom she never saw or heard of before. I make this statement deliberately, knowing the liabilities to which it exposes me. My own impressions are that the trance condition is an immensely complex and flucuating thing, into the understanding of which we have hardly begun to penetrate, and concerning which any very sweeping generalizations are sure to be premature."

Fatal Nervousness.

A Mr. McNeil, one of the best known yachtsmen in southern waters came to his death in an extraordinary manner at New Orleans recently. Mr. McNeil had several medical students as friends, and they prevailed on him to witness the amputation of the leg of a tramp who was run over while attempting to board a freight train at Lafayette. Just before entering the amphitheater Mr. McNeil heard the surgeon sawing the bone in the man's leg, and when he saw the operation the shock was so great that he fell with paralysis. The next day he died.

"NO MORE DOCTORS FOR ME!

They said I was consumptive, sent me to Florida, told me to keep quiet, no excitement, and no tennis. Just think of it. One day I found a little book called 'Guide to Health,' by Mrs. Pinkham, and in it I found out what ailed me. So I wrote to her, got a lovely reply, told me just what to do, and I am in splendid health now."

THE HEIR PRESUMPTIVE.

He Is a Naval Officer and Very Popular in England.

The next heir to the throne is his royal highness Prince George Frederick Ernest Albert, commander of the royal navy and reserve. Prince George followed the example of his illustrious uncle, the duke of Edinburg, who has won many honors as a naval commander. Prince George was born in 1865, and in 1877, at the age of twelve years, began his life as a cadet on board the Britannia schoolship at Dartmouth. He was appointed a midshipman in January, 1880, and in 1885 was promoted to the rank of lieutenant. He commanded a torpedo boat in naval maneuvers and latterly the gun vessel Thrush. At the age of twenty-six he is commander of royal navy and holds the title of knight of the garter. The death of his brother makes him heir to the throne of Great Britain and Ireland after his father, the prince of Wales. He is popular and has earned much praise by working hard to win laurels as a naval commander when he had no greater prospects in life. Nearly two years ago Prince George visited Canada, and expected to visit the United States, but he changed his plans, it is said, because he did not care to be regarded as a lion of society at Newport, where he was invited. It was while in Canada that a young newspaper reporter started a sensation by publishing a story that the prince had with several boon companions been in a brawl and the prince was arrested for knocking down a policeman before his identity was known. The report was false, the "fakir" was sent to prison, but afterward released at the request of the prince, who had no desire to see a man punished so severely for making him the hero of a street brawl to get up a newspaper sensation.

Should Prince George die before his father and the present queen, the royal heritage would fall upon the duchess of Fife, eldest daughter of the prince of Wales, who was urged to renounce her claim to the throne when she married the duke of Fife, who is not of royal blood. There are two other daughters of the prince of Wales who would follow as heirs to the throne before any of the other of Queen Victoria's children would be regarded as heirs.

HAD NO FIRE ESCAPES

Building Inspector Seton Made False Reports.

HE IS PROMPTLY DISMISSED.

The Hotel Royal's Dead List Increased by Lack of Proper Appliances.

All the Dead Recovered—Only Seven of the Mutilated Bodies Have Been Positively Identified and Two Partially—The List of Missing Still Very Large, But All of Them Have Undoubtedly Escaped.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—The worst in regard to the Hotel Royal fire is now believed to be known.

Of the bodies recovered seven only have been identified. These were as follows:

Henry J. Levy, of New York.

A. A. Townsend, of New Haven.

Sarah Begley, housekeeper of the hotel.

Miss Sarah Blake, of Sheldonville, Mass.

Mrs. J. Cohen, of Toronto.

Lewis Levy, of London, Ont.

Elizabeth Donohue, of New York.

Two of the bodies have been partially identified. It is expected that the identity of these two persons will be known by to-morrow at the latest. In any event, the warden at the Morgue has been notified by the Commissioners of Charities and Corrections to bury all of the unidentified bodies by Saturday.

The list of missing is still very large, but all of these have undoubtedly escaped. About a score of missing persons reported themselves as safe yesterday, and many others are likely to do so, but a goodly portion, it is thought, will forever remain "missing."

Inspector William F. Seton, of the Building Bureau, has confessed that he falsely reported in June, 1886, that the Sixth avenue front of the hotel was provided with fire escapes. He was immediately dismissed from the service of the city.

There were no escapes on this end of the hotel at the time of the fire, and Seton stands indicted in public opinion for the awful loss of life that resulted from their absence.

As soon as the Fire Commissioners concluded their trials of firemen, Seton was summoned before them, repeated his confession and was summarily dismissed from the force.

He left the building in a hurry and may be at this moment hastening out of the reach of the law, which will be undoubtedly stretched out to grasp him.

Meanwhile he claims that he did not intentionally make a false report, but how that defense can be made when the records of the office show that he claimed the fire escapes were placed on the building by the Central Iron Works on June 11, 1886, is a very hard thing to understand.

LITTLE WARD'S ABDUCTORS.

Waterbury and McCann Indicted—No Evidence Against Sutherland.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Charles E. Waterbury and John McCann were indicted yesterday for the kidnapping of young Wark Waterbury.

An application has been made out by the District-Attorney to be presented to Gov. Flower for a requisition on the Governor of Connecticut for the surrender of the kidnappers.

Sutherland, who was also supposed to be implicated in the affair, was not indicted as the evidence showed him to be entirely free from the charge of kidnapping.

Runaway Ice Locomotive.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 11.—The ice locomotive invented by a New York man while at work on the ice at New Hamburgh yesterday, got away from the man in charge of it and started for the shore. It reached a weak spot in the ice and sank. The trials of this machine have been very unsatisfactory, but this is thought to be due to the soft condition of the ice. The locomotive will be raised and the trials resumed.

McAuliffe Discharged.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 11.—The case of Jack McAuliffe, the lightweight champion pugilist, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was arrested here charged with sparring with his partner, Jack Nelson, came up before the Recorder's Court. His honor dismissed the case after having examined several witnesses who stated that the men had engaged in nothing but an exhibition of the manly art under a salary.

Rumored Revolution in Servia.

VIENNA, Feb. 11.—A rumor is current here that a revolution has broken out in Belgrade, the capital of Servia. The Servian Minister to Austria, Simitsch, denies the truth of the rumor, and as telegrams from Belgrade are subjected to an extraordinary scrutiny, the rumor cannot be verified or corrected by reliable advices from that quarter.

To Change the Backs of Treasury Notes.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11—The Treasury Department has decided to change the backs of the silver certificates and treasury notes. The change will be in the direction of less work, which will show more of the white on the backs of the notes. The new fibre paper recently adopted will be used in printing the notes.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

THE BEHRING SEA DISPUTE.

Mr. Lowther Informs Mr. Brice that an Agreement Has Been Reached.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—In the House of Commons Mr. James Brice, Member for the South Divisions of Aberdeen, made inquiry as to the present state of the negotiations between Great Britain and the United States in regard to the Behring Sea dispute, and also asked for information as to the state reached by the negotiations between Great Britain and France and Newfoundland over the fisheries misunderstanding.

The Right Hon. James Lowther, Parliamentary Secretary of the Foreign Office, promised Mr. Brice that full papers on the subjects he had asked about should be forthcoming.

Mr. Lowther added that he was glad to say that a complete agreement had been arrived at with the United States Government in regard to arbitrating the Behring Sea matter, and that Italy, France and Sweden would shortly be asked to appoint arbiters.

During the day a circular from Mr. De Cobain was handed to the members of the House of Commons, inclosing the statutory declarations of his accusors, and stating that his health is such as to prevent him from submitting to the strain of a criminal trial. He also says that it appears that all the members support the motion demanding that the government furnish information supporting the charges against him, and adds that if the warrant is withdrawn and his health permits, he will submit to be examined.

"PETER BUELL, CRANK NO. 7."

Richard Gaebler Arrested for Annoying Dr. Heber Newton.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Richard A. C. Gaebler, of Butte City, Montana, was arrested yesterday at the instance of Francis Newton, son of Rev. Dr. Heber Newton, on the charge of annoying the family with frequent calls and persistent demands to see the doctor.

He is thought to be the crank who recently sent a threatening postal card to the doctor, which, after threatening to take his life, concluded with the signature, "Peter Buell, crank No. 7."

Gaebler denies the authorship of the postal and asserts that the doctor is his friend, and that his purpose in his frequent visits to the doctor was to ask him to secure work for him. He was held for examination.

Gaebler was the same man who, in 1889, met with green goods men, who fleeced him of $1,500, and who succeeded in capturing them after a long search in which he did his own detective work.

To Rearrange Fighting Weights.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—A meeting of sporting men was held yesterday who discussed the rearrangement of fighting weights. Jim Corbett and Dominick McCaffrey were among those present. Another meeting will be held on Wednesday next.

John A. McCall Accepts.

NEW YORK, Feb 11.—John A. McCall has accepted the office of president of the New York Life Insurance Company, but on the express condition that he have absolute control. At the meeting to be held to morrow this proviso will be considered and acted upon, and it is thought that he will be elected president on his own terms. It is now probable that the company's arrangement with its ex-president, Mr Beers, will be vitiated.

Kentucky at the World's Fair.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—A dispatch received at the World's Fair headquarters from Louisville says that unless a provision is added to the bill before the Legislature for an appropriation of $100,000 for the Kentucky exhibit at the exposition, urging the closing of the exhibit on Sunday, and permitting liquor to be sold on the ground, money would not be voted by the various Kentucky counties. There is a strong religious element throughout the State.

NO FOOD OR WATER

A Stowaway's Nine Days of Fearful Torture.

NOT EXPECTED TO RECOVER.

Not Even Room in the Hold of the Ship to Stand Up.

Charles Burzell Went to Sleep in the El Monte at New Orleans—Lifted Out at New York a Mere Shadow—Chewed the Leather Sweat Band of His Hat for Food, and for Water Licked the Moisture from the Iron Sides of the Vessel.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—It is doubtful if any one experienced nine more fearful days of torture than handsome, well educated, well connected Charles Burzelle has just gone through. The doctors at St. Vincent's Hospital, where he is, do not expect him to recover from his frightful experience.

For nearly nine full days he was battened down in the hold of the Morgan Liner El Monte, while she sailed out through the Gulf of Mexico and up the coast to New York.

When the big ship arrived at her wharf, the 'longshoremen began discharging her cargo. As one of the great bales was lifted from its place at the bottom of the hold, the shadow of a man—a man who was little more than a shadow—was seen lying in the hold of the ship. He was too weak to rise. That he was alive surprised every one. He could not get either food or water.

The day before he had eaten the last shred of the leather sweat-band inside of his hat. He had chewed it, morsel by morsel, making it last as long as possible before he swallowed a mouthful.

Of water he had not a drop, and when his parched tongue began to swell and burn from thirst he turned his face to black, moist side of the iron vessel and pressed his tongue against it. The scant moisture he licked from the iron plates did not quench his thirst—it aggravated it. But the cold and moisture prevented his tongue from swelling till it choked him, as it otherwise would.

When the 'longshoremen helped him out of the hold tears came to their eyes as they thought of his sufferings. Two men helped him to the company's office, and he told his story as well as he could.

He said his home was in Rockland, Maine, and that he had been traveling about the country, finally reaching New Orleans, where he found himself penniless. His sister sent him enough money to pay his way to New York. He showed her letter, which was a fond, sisterly epistle, in which she gave her brother good advice and also told about her marriage to a wealthy citizen of a small town of Massachusetts, which had just occurred.

Before he had bought a ticket young Burzell says some one robbed him of the money while he was asleep in a cheap lodging house in New Orleans. Ashamed to ask his good sister for more money, he went to the cotton port of Algiers and tried to ship as a sailor to work his passage to this city, where he was sure he could find work.

Failing in this he crawled into the hold of the El Monte and lay down to sleep through the night. Before he awoke the loading had been finished, the hatches battened down, and the El Monte was standing out to sea. He shouted, but of course was not heard.

Trying to move he found that the bales of cotton had been shoved over him as he slept, and there was not room in the narrow hole to stand up even.

Burzelle says he never expected to get out alive. Had the El Monte lain a day longer before unloading he would have been dead. As it is the doctors at St. Vincent's say he will probably die, he is so weak and exhausted.

THE RACE TRACK BILLS.

New Jersey Baptists Protest Against Their Passage.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 11.—The first gun against the race course and pool bills has been fired in the House. It came from the New Jersey Baptist Union in the shape of a letter from the secretary of the union to the Speaker of the House.

The letter enclosed a resolution passed by the union, denouncing the measures, and petitioning the Legislature to defeat them. The secretary states that the union represents 40,000 citizens.

Chairman Smith of the Committee on revision of Laws, to whom the bills were referred, says that he will give hearings on the measures next Tuesday at noon.

ELOPEMENT IN NEWARK.

"I Have Married Frankie," Writes the Bride to Her Parents.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 11.—Miss Kate Schleicher, aged 18, the daughter of a well-to-do butcher, of No. 60 Waverly place, left her home while her father was engaged at supper last evening, and in company with a companion, Miss Emma Mansfield, entered a carriage occupied by Frank Pierson Bond and Harry Winans, both prominent musical artists.

The party were driven to the parsonage of the Franklin Street Church, where Miss Schleicher and Mr. Bond were married by Rev. Dr. Brady. The bride sent a note to her father reading:

"I have married Frankie," and then left the city, it is said, for Washington. All the parties are well known and highly respected. The young lady was engaged to marry a promising young German of the Thirteenth Ward.

Two Counts Against Him for Manslaughter in the Second Degree.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 11.—The grand jury has indicted Brakeman Albert S. Herrick on two counts for manslaughter in the second degree, for causing the accident near Hastings on Christmas Eve on the Hudson River railroad.

Beside the indictments the grand jury presented a statement in which they censure the New York Central and Hudson River railroad company for careless and negligent management of the running of their road on the day of the accident, and also censuring Charles C. Delancey, station master at Hastings, for not stopping approaching trains when he knew a blockade was in force some distance away.

Accident to James Couch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—James Couch, owner of the Tremont House and one of Chicago's oldest settlers, met with an accident yesterday that will probably cause his death. While trying to board a street car he fell. A heavy truck was close behind Mr. Couch, and before the horses could be stopped, the wagon had passed over the old gentleman crushing the left leg and cutting off the fingers of the right hand. Mr. Couch is 91 years of age and has been a leading citizen of Chicago since 1836.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—The Department of State confirms the report from London that Great Britain and the United States have agreed to invite the governments of France, Sweden and Italy to each designate a person to serve as a member of the tribunal to be selected to arbitrate the Behring Sea controversy. The tribunal will have seven members, two representing the United States and two Great Britain, and three representing neutral governments.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 11.—James Doran, of Dureya, and William Thompson, of this city, fought last night for the heavyweight championship of Northeastern Pennsylvania, in Jester's Athletic rooms. FROM BEHIND TREES

Indians and Cowboys Shoot at One Another.

PITCHED BATTLE IN NEW MEXICO

Some Months of Bad Feeling Culminate in a Desperate Fight.

Navajos Go On the Rampage, But So Far They Seem to Have Rather the Worst of it—Carrying Off Their Dead—Women Packing Their Trunks Preparatory to Fleeing to a Place of Safety—Result of the Fight Not Definitely Known.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Feb. 11.—J. M. Dennis received last night a dispatch from A. E. Batchelder, the manager of his sawmill at Coolidge, that Navajo Indians were congregating in squads of from twenty-five to fifty at the small towns on the Atlantic & Pacific between Laguna and Coolidge, with the intention of cleaning out the cowboys on the cattle ranches along the road.

At Chaves station seventy-five Indians are holding a pow-wow, and have on their war paint and are heavily armed. The people are in great excitement. The women have their trunks packed ready to leave, while the cowboys are rustling all the arms they can get and propose to stand their ground.

Mrs. C. J. Jennings, wife of the manager of the eating house at Coolidge, with two of her children, is the first to reach this city. She says that the Indians and cowboys are massing their forces for an engagement and that the whole white population of Coolidge and the neighborhood is up in arms and ready for the conflict.

Yesterday a number of cowboys from several of the small ranges assembled at Coolidge and defied the Indians then in town to commence carrying into execution threats. The Indians left on horseback and went in the direction of Coddington's ranch.

An hour later a runner came into Coolidge at breakneck speed and reported that an engagement was in progress at the ranch between the Indians and cowboys there, and that if the latter were not reinforced the Indians would annihilate them. The cowboys in Coolidge then left to their associates, but the result of the fight has not been received.

There is a rumor that the fight at Coddington's is still going on, and that each side is in the timber and shooting from behind trees. The Indians were noticed carrying off three of their dead. The dining-room girls at the Coolidge eating house and the women from other towns and ranches are expected in the city.

During the present winter the cattlemen whose ranges border the Navajo reservation have lost a number of cattle, stolen and killed, and the cowboys have traced the depredations to the Indians. The owners of the stock called on the chiefs for some kind of settlement, but their demands were met with taunts and threats. Both sides since then have been bantering each other for a fight, and the cowboys finally destroyed one of the Indian's houses.

The Indians retaliated by burning the outhouses on the ranch a few miles from Coolidge, and the present affair is the outcome of the bad feeling which has all this winter existed between the Indians and cowboys. More than half the Indians are off the reservation, and have always been, and all the trouble is caused by the thievery of renegades.

His liabilities amount to about $400,000, all to personal friends who did not desire to press their claims, but the publication of S. V. CAPTURED A SPY.

The Foreign Officer Had Parts of the New German Rifle in His Clothes.

BERLIN, Feb. 11.—A sensation has been created in military circles here by the receipt of a dispatch from Augsburg, Bavaria, announcing the arrest of a spy, said to be an officer in a foreign army.

The stranger, when arrested, was taken to the nearest watch house and searched. He was then found to have been successful in stealing one of the new and most improved rifles of the German army. The lock and other important parts of the weapon were concealed in the clothes worn by the prisoner.

It is understood that the military authorities will deal in the most severe manner possible with the spy in order to show others of his class what they may expect should they venture into Germany.

The new laws against foreigners are now thought to be not stringent enough, and steps may be taken shortly to make them more severe.

END OF THE HYDE-GREEN CASE.

Had the Millionaire Recorded His First Mortgage, He Would Not Have Lost Through the Furniture Man.

The famous lawsuit of Charles Hyde against Frank C. Green and others is at an end. Way back in 1885, when Green kept a big furniture store in Plainfield, he borrowed of Hyde $4,000, to be used to buy out the share of his uncle and partner, Orson C. Green. As acknowledgment of the debt he gave a promissory note for $4,000, indorsed by Orson Green and George Warren Watson, and as further security he gave a chattel mortgage on his goods. When the note came due it went to protest. Creditors from various quarters pressed Green closely, and Hyde's bailiff finally took possession of the place, a receiver was appointed, and the entire stock, valued at $28,000, was sacrificed at auction to satisfy claims aggregating $10,000. The mortgage to Hyde had not been put on record, because Hyde had consented to keep it back to enable Green to better his credit. Hence Green made an effort to settle with the other creditors first, and Hyde stood a chance of getting only a small balance or perhaps nothing after those holding mortgages on record were satisfied. Hyde therefore brought suit in chancery against the holders of the recorded mortgages, and a bitter legal contest was the result. Huge volumes of testimony were taken, and the case was set down for argument before Vice Chancellor Green at Newark Monday. Counselor Wm. K. McClure of this city presented a most learned and exhaustive brief for his clients, the defendants, holders of the recorded mortgages. When, however, counselor Richard V. Lindabury, who appeared for Mr. Hyde, found how thoroughly Mr. McClure had intrenched himself, he backed down utterly and submitted no argument, even. He was forced to admit that the Hyde mortgage having been kept back could come in only after the others. This admission disposed of the contest.

—A two dollar poll tax on each male over twenty-one, to be used solely for the benefit of the public schools, is the provision of a law proposed by Assemblyman Zeller and introduced in the House at Trenton, yesterday.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. James C. Field of Somerville returned home yesterday from a visit to Mrs. Dudley S. Miller of East Fifth street.

Isaac N. Brokaw, the Bound Brook pharmacist, so well known in this city, died at 10 o'clock last night after an illness of only two days.

Miss Mary Huntsman returned to-day to her home in Providence after a two weeks' visit to Mr. and Mrs. R. F. R. Huntsman of Westervelt avenue.

Francis Bartels, the clockmaker of Washington valley who was the last one that set Plainfield's town clock agoing, died yesterday at the age of 67 years, 5 months and 15 days. It is said that he died of the same disease as ex-President Grant.

William Flagg who twenty years ago was one of the most prominent of the real estate men who opened up Plainfield, is in the city again. Among other property he developed is that next to THE PRESS office which he built and which was originally called Flagg's hotel.

Judge W. R. Codington is a sorely afflicted man. Tuesday evening his father-in law, Isaac S. Runyon, age 73, died at his home at Millington; this morning his mother-in law, age 71, also passed away; and his little son Albert is at the point of death. In all three cases the illness was the grip.

At the next meeting to be held in New York, of the Metropolitan association of the Amateur Athletic union, a president will be elected to succeed C. F. Mathewson, who has retired. Arthur Varian, formerly of this city and now a member of the Orange Athletic club, is said to be the most likely man.

The wedding will take place of Miss Eleanor Garthwaite Reynolds Beal and William Gage Snow, Tuesday evening the 23rd inst at 7, in the Church of Our Saviour, Netherwood. The prospective bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Beal, and one of the most admired and esteemed young women in Plainfield's society.

The Rev. Cornelius Schenck of the Trinity Reformed church was given a special invitation to the Monmouth county Christian Endeavor convention at Matawan Tuesday evening, and delivered one of his customary interesting addresses. There was a very large attendance, and every evidence that the Monmouth Endeavorers are spiritually wide-awake.

A very able and interesting paper on "Dimension Stone Quarrying—The Blasting Process", written by William L. Saunders of North Plainfield, member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, with full discussion by Mr. Saunders and several fellow-professionals, has been issued in pamphlet form, illustrated, by the society, for circulation throughout the world of science.

A delightful social event was the leap-year cotillion danced at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Franklin place, last evening. The dance was led by Miss Flora Huntington and J. Augustus Brainard of New York. The supper was very choice, and the music by Andrew Carpenter was of the finest. Handsome and appropriate favors were bestowed. The young women received fans, feather dusters and embroidered picture-frames. Hand-painted pin-cushions, ribbons and paper-cutters fell to the lot of the young men. Among the guests were: Miss Harriet Gardner, Miss Marion Dumont, Miss Annie Murphy, Miss Tompkins, Miss Jessamy Harte, Miss Bessie Ginna, Miss Katheryn Yates, Miss Maud VanBoskerck, Clarence Murphy, Harry Borden, Alfred Streuli, John P. Munn, Louis Walz, Orville Waring, Rowland Cox, and James Murray.

An Ordinance Carey Wants.

An ordinance to license auctioneers was introduced in the common council last night. As presented by Mr. Marsh it stipulated that no one should act as auctioneer except under a license for which a fee of $25 was paid. This sum was amended to $20, and the whole thing was after discussion referred to corporation counsel Marsh, to find out if it would be legal to exempt auctioneers who are Plainfield taxpayers from paying a fee. Messrs. Frazee and Case warmly favored exemption of Plainfielders, and held that only traveling peddlers ought to be taxed who open a temporary auction and flood the town with cheap goods. Mr. Marsh said 'twas impossible under the law to discriminate as proposed, and said that the ordinance as introduced suited Carey and was favored by him. Mr. Case said maybe that was good law but 'twasn't good common sense.

A Brave Fellow Stops a Runaway Horse.

What would undoubtedly been a disastrous runaway was checked in the bud by a brave young Swede named Byestrum this morning. Peter Ross had come into town with a handsome new milk wagon from the Netherwood farm. While Ross was delivering milk in the borough the horse started away. It came galloping down Somerset street at great speed, and was just turning into Front street when Byestrum sprang forward and at the risk of his neck stopped it. He thus prevented not only the wrecking of the milk wagon but also much damage to other vehicles on Front street. Ross thanked him.

An Executive Worthy of Respect and Esteem.

THE PRESS desires it understood that it is not unfriendly to Governor Abbett from anything which appeared in a special despatch from Philadelphia in yesterday's issue. On the contrary it admires his Democracy and actions, and supports him as it always has, in his endeavors to give New Jersey that which it has enjoyed in past years—a good and honest government.

Prominent clergymen, physicians, and all classes of citizens are unanimous in the endorsement of Salvation Oil, the greatest cure for rheumatism.

No greater guarantee of the excellence of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup could be furnished than that it is recommended by all the leading druggists.

TERMS OF THE BIG COAL DEAL.

Seventy-five Per. Cent. of the Anthracite Coal Business Locked Up in the New Combination.

The big combination of the principal coal roads is an accomplished fact. The following statement, confirming in every detail the account printed in yesterday's PRESS was given out last evening by J. Pierpont Morgan, of Drexel, Morgan, who conducted the negotations:

"The statement is officially made by Drexel, Morgan & Co. that the Philadelphia and Reading railroad company has secured, by lease or an equivalent arrangement, the control of the Lehigh Valley and the New Jersey Central railroad companies. The Reading company guarantees on the Lehigh Valley stock dividends at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum until July 1, 1892, and 6 per cent. for the period of one year thereafter, or until July 1, 1893, and 7 per cent. per annum after this latter date.

"The excess of earnings above 7 per cent. will be divided equally between the Lehigh Valley and the Reading until the Lehigh Valley has received 10 per cent., the surplus above which will go to the Reading.

"The Reading guarantees on the Jersey Central stock 7 per cent. all excess above that amount to be divided equally between the Jersey Central and the Reading.

"There will be one central agency or sales department. As these three companies control about 75 per cent. of the competive traffic, the importance of this combination to the coal trade is obvious

"The increased profits to be expected from it will not result from any extortion in the fixing of coal prices, but out of the economies that will be introduced in the administration and arrangement."

There will be no lease, in fact, by the Reading of the Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley, because the law of Pennsylvania prohibits it, but the arrangement perfected amounts to the same thing. Stock to an amount sufficient to control the Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley will be put in escrow. To secure the terms of the compact entered into the Reading will deposit $2 500,000 in securities and will keep that amount continually good.

There was a report that the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad was to be included in the great deal by the purchase of a majority of its stock. President Samuel Sloan denied it emphatically.

The fact is that the combination of railroads includes only the three named—the Reading, the Jersey Central, and the Lehigh Valley. The other coal producing and carrying roads, including the Lackawanna and the Delaware and Hudson, which are the principal ones outside of the combination, will co-operate with the Reading and its controlled roads, in fixing production and prices. The Reading will hereafter control such a large percentage of the total coal business that it can practically dictate terms to the other roads. The Reading has just taken steps to increase its market for coal in New England by securing the Poughkeepsie bridge and the lines extending to it from the coal fields, which road takes the coal from the Poughkeepsie bridge.

Mr. Morgan has no interest himself beyond that of a banker acting as an intermediary. The transaction is primarily in the interest of the Vanderbilts. He first, as a foundation for the scheme, bought the control of the Reading for them. This was done at the expense of something like $10,000,000, as the purchases of the stock were begun when it was selling considerably under 40.

Then, to guard against coal wars, he sought to put under the domination of the Reading the New Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley, its most direct competitors, but on a peaceful footing its most important allies. In this he was successful.

While, as stated, there is to be no lease in fact of the Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley, there is an agreement which was signed Tuesday night by which the Reading guarantees the incomes on their securities, and for its remuneration is to receive any surplus earnings.

The Pennsylvania railroad assented to the Vanderbilts acquiring such vast interests in its territory on their agreement to wholly abandon the South Pennsylvania railroad scheme. The road is half finished. Millions were spent on it and they are irrevocably lost.

Much Entertainment Anticipated.

From the flattering way the managers of Music Hall are being spoken of by the theater-goers of Plainfield, the latter are deriving pleasure even from the mere announcement that Henry E. Dixey and his company will be here to-morrow evening.

As "Adonis", Mr. Dixey long ago established himself in a high place in the public esteem, and his audiences have never seen too much of him in that character, yet the news of his appearance in an entirely new role is received with pleasure which implies no weariness of the old one. In "The Solicitor", Mr. Dixey has delighted crowded New York houses for 100 nights, and has won the most unmeasured praise, and it is fresh from this triumph that he comes to Plainfield.

As a curtain raiser there will be given a one-act farce entitled "A Tangled Skein", which is accounted as extremely pleasing. The company is a strong one, and includes Miss Josephine Plows-Day, Miss Virginia Buchanan, Miss Belle Bucklin, Miss Marie Greenwald, Miss Fanny Cohen, Messrs. Lewis Baker, Robert Hickman, Joseph Frankau, Walter Granville, Fred. Owen Baxter, Samuel Opstein, J. W. Glenmore and others.

VAN EMBURGH ON TOP.

He's the Only One in the Tournament With a Single Lost Game.

The bowling of fourteen games in the Crescent League individual handicap tournament last night wrought material changes in the record. VanEmburgh won three straight and jumped from seventh to first place. Green and Thiers are nip and tuck for second. Lyman greatly increased his percentage, but VanEmburgh's jump over him puts him a peg down the ladder, in fifth place. Schultz, who was first, is now fourth. Adams, Davis and McIntyre dropped considerably.

THE SCORE:

One of the Greatest Railroads in the World.

The coup of President McLeod of the Philadelphia and Reading in getting control of the Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley—as told in yesterday's PRESS—is the greatest in the history of railroad financiering and makes the Reading as strong a corporation as there is in the world. The gross receipts of the Philadelphia and Reading system will hereafter be eighty million dollars annually and the number of its employees will approximate 100,000, being more than are employed by any single corporation on this planet.

It is now plain what was in Mr. McLeod's mind when he acquired the Poughkeepsie bridge and the lines tributary thereto, which throws the Reading and its entire augmented system into the very heart of New England, giving it the only all rail route from the Middle and Southern States and the East, with connections with all the important New England roads, and enables it to virtually control the coal traffic of that entire region. The success of this combination, having at its back the strongest financial institution in this country, is assured.

The Best Two Are Yet to Come.

The steadily increasing audiences that gather at each succeeding lecture of the Ragan course, evidence how these intensely interesting and widely instructive talks of personal observation and experience, are winning the people by sheer merit and charm. Mr. Ragan was a stranger here until now,—not a person, probably, remembering even that he was in Plainfield years ago. But he 'll never be a stranger here again. He has been your companion already in most pleasant trips to Alaska, Belgium and Holland and the "Heart of America", and next week you will accompany him through picturesque Ireland and Mexico. These two last journeys will be the best. They will present a number of features of word and picture, that will be new even to the regular lecture-goer or the traveler who has been everywhere. Single tickets will be on sale at the box office on the evenings of the lectures—Tuesday and Thursday of next week.

Accused of Passing Counterfeit Money.

Miss Bunday, a colored lady of this city claimed yesterday that she received in change of a five-dollar bill a lead dollar from a fruit and peanut merchant on Park avenue. She secured the services of Tom Martin, a friend, and he demanded good money for the bad. After some argument the accused merchant gave up a bill and took back the disputed coin.

—A. O. H., No. 4, of Plainfield, will give their annual sociable in T. A. B. Hall, Thursday evening, March 17, under the management of P. Casey, J. Galbraith, P. Reagan, M. Harrington, J. Kelly and T. Fitzgerald. The music will be by O'Reilley.

SAFE AND EFFECTIVE.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS are the safest and most effective remedy for indigestion, irregularity of the bowels, biliousness, headache, dizziness, malaria, or any disease arising from an impure state of the blood. They have been in use in this country for over fifty years, and the thousands of unimpeachable testimonials from those who have used them, and their constantly increasing sale, is incontrovertible evidence that they perform all that is claimed for them.

Sold in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar-coated.

CO-OPERATIVE WOODYARD FOR TRAMPS.

Plainfield Proposed Solution of the Begging Question.

The good women of Plainfield who are planning to give employment, at sawing wood, to men out of work, might by developing their idea work out a very excellent solution of the tramp question. Like other towns, Plainfield has at times been overburdened with applicants for charity. In the co-operative woodyard plan is a chance for discrimination between the needy and the undeserving. Let the women put up a shed, stock it liberally with cordwood, and supply sawbucks, saws and axes. Then let them enlist the co operation of housekeepers throughout the city who have been pestered with appeals for aid; and thereafter let each applicant for aid be given an order on the co-operative woodyard, to cut up a certain quantity of cordwood. Let the housekeeper giving the order be required to buy, at a fair price, from the managers, the wood cut under this order, and let the man who does the work be recompensed with food, lodging or clothing as he may require. The really deserving will thus have a way opened to obtain something of a livelihood, and the idea of being compelled to work or go hungry will cause the undeserving fellows to steer clear of the town. If the women enter enthusiastically into the enterprise the local wood dealers may look for a considerable reduction of their profits—for of course everyone in hard luck will be eager to saw wood for a living.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 20, 189).

Having been a sufferer for sometime past with biliousness, &c., I was recommended to use Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills. I did so, and am pleased to find that they are as recommended, a cure for those ailments. I therefore subscribe myself cheerfully in recommending them to any who may suffer with those complaints.—E. B. NAAR, News Editor True American.

Brotherly Criticism.

It is unwise, as a general thing, to ask other people what they think of our work. The result may be unpleasant both for them and for us.

Two ministers were discussing the process of sermon-writing.

"Now with me," said one of them, "The only really hard things to manage are the introduction and the conclusion. You remember the sermon I preached at the installation of Brother So-and-So not long ago? Well, I flattered myself that the exordium and the peroration of that sermon were pretty well done. Do you remember what you thought of them?"

"Yes," said the other minister. "I remember thinking they were very good, but too far apart."—Youth's Companion.

The Grammar Confuted.

"Two negatives make an affirmative, you believe?"

"Yes."

"Well, I don't take any stock in such nonsense."

"Why not?"

"Why not? I'll tell you. On Monday night I proposed to Mary Jones, and she said no; on Tuesday night I proposed to Jane Smith and she said no. There are two negatives for you. If you can make an affirmative out of them you are a better grammarian than I am."—N. Y. Press.

A Home Thrust.

A humorous editor received a cruel rebuke from his wife not long since. She had been to the theater, and gave such a very amusing account of the performance that her literary husband exclaimed:

"Why don't you write that out just as you have told it to me? It would make first-class copy. You ought to write for the paper."

"No, I thank you. One crank in the family is enough," was the cutting reply.—Texas Siftings.

AMMONIA AS A MOTOR.

It Propels Cars at the Rate of Thirty Miles an Hour.

One of the Most Interesting Features of the World's Columbian Exposition—Horse Power and Cables Are Not "In It."

Intramural transportation for the world's fair is receiving more attention than appears on the surface, says the Chicago News.

Surface, elevated, arcade and subterranean systems will be exhibited, and every system, style, form, kind and quality of land transportation is after the privilege of furnishing intramural transportation for the comfort of the world's fair visitors and the incidental advertising, which after all is the grand object in view.

Two competitors are already on the ground; a movable sidewalk and an ammonia motor, which has been running over the railroad tracks inside the fence for several weeks.

Under tests the motor is said to have attained a speed of thirty miles an hour, taking sharp curves with ease, and has been brought to a stop inside of 100 feet when running twenty miles an hour. The driving mechanism consists of two cylinders 6 by 15 inches of the ordinary locomotive type, with link-valve motion and 20-inch drive wheels, connected so as to form a 6-foot wheel base of standard gauge. The novel feature of the motor is the power, which is the gas given off by anhydrous ammonia.

Anhydrous ammonia—ammonia without water—becomes gaseous at 38¼ degrees Fahrenheit below zero at atmospheric pressure, or 250¼ degrees less than the temperature at which steam is produced from water. The anhydrous ammonia is stored in two water-enveloped tanks carried with the motor. It is placed in the tanks at a temperature of 80 degrees, which gives a pressure of 150 degrees to the square inch.

The motor carries four tanks—one large one, which contains three of smaller diameter. The larger, or outside, tank is filled with water; the two lower of the three inclosed tanks are for storing anhydrous ammonia, and they are connected with the third tank placed over them, which is used as a gas reservoir. As soon as the anhydrous ammonia is charged into the two lower tanks it lets off gas, which is driven into the gas chamber until a pressure of about 150 pounds to the square inch is accumulated. A throttle valve gives the gas entrance into the cylinders, and it is exhausted not into the open air, as steam is, but into the water. So great is the affinity which the water has for ammonia that the gas is absorbed immediately and becomes aqua ammonia—the ammonia of commerce—so quickly that there is little or no back pressure against the piston head.

When anhydrous ammonia expands into a gas it absorbs heat and creates such a low temperature that it is used for ice-making purposes. This characteristic would be fatal to its success as a power producer unless counteracted. This is done in the world's fair ammonia motor by exhausting the used gas into the water which completely envelops the tanks and cylinders, for the gas in combining with the water to make aqua ammonia generates heat sufficient to keep the inside temperature up to 80 degrees at least, and this insures a power of 150 pounds to the square inch as long as there is any anhydrous ammonia in the storage tanks.

The tanks are charged at the station, and contain enough latent energy to to run the motor fifty miles at a speed of fifteen miles an hour. At the station is a boiler and steam still, which takes aqua ammonia made up of 70 per cent. water and 30 per cent. ammonia, and distills it into the anhydrous ammonia. The aqua ammonia made by the motor while in operation is drawn from the tank at the end of a trip and is redistilled, so that the ammonia is used over and over again. While the solution is being drawn from the motor the storage tanks are being charged with the anhydrous ammonia, requiring about two minutes to draw and charge.

From tests made at various times with the plant in Jackson park it was found that the cost of fuel alone for making anhydrous ammonia from aqua ammonia was 0.3024 cents per gallon, and the total cost for fuel and labor was 1.0024 cents per gallon.

Three gallons of anhydrous ammonia are used to run one mile with the motor alone, carrying sixteen passengers, and five gallons when the motor draws four cars. When running six miles an hour the motor develops twenty-seven horse power, and seventy-five horse power at 150 pounds pressure will send it fifteen miles an hour.

There are no fumes, noises or smoke, as no actual fuel of any kind is used on the motor, as it is, in fact, a motor operated by stored power.

All the trees of the tropics except those imported from the colder climates are evergreens.

PRINCESS OF WALES.

Still a Handsome Woman Although Approaching the Fifties.

The princess of Wales is one of those few and favored women with whom the hand of time deals so gently that her personal beauty is unaffected by the passage of the years. Although her appearance has, of course, changed materially since, as a girl of nineteen, she became the bride of Albert Edward at Windsor, something over twenty-eight years ago, her face has lost none of the charms which have always made her the most attractive of England's royal women. Her latest portrait shows that she still possesses the same perfection of form and feature which previous pictures have made so familiar, and if there is about it an added look of maturity with perhaps a suggestion of sadness these only serve to heighten the effect of the sweet expression which has been so notable in all representations of this royal gentlewoman.

THE CHINESE VICEROY.

Li Hung Chang and His Ambition for His Country's Military Prowess.

The hearts of all loyal celestials are now saddened by the fact that the grip has seized upon the venerable viceroy of the Flowery Kingdom; Li Hung Chang. Though he is now in his seventieth year the patriotism of the venerable viceroy is as ardent as in his youth. Li Hung Chang, since the death of the late Prince Kung, the young emperor's father, has been the strongest buttress of the throne. For years his power and prestige, however, were provincial rather than metropolitan, and perhaps jealousy of his commanding ability and his success in dealing with foreigners caused him to be ignored during the regency, save when he was harassed by frivolous complaints and official "nagging" from Peking. Yet during this time he was making Tienstin one of the most powerful centers of political influence in the empire and organizing a native Chinese army and navy under his own control, which must in any crisis have given him a decisive voice in determining its issue. The success with which the germs of rebellion have been stamped out in northern China further enhances his prestige, for it gives an outward and manifest sign that his slowly matured policy of quickening and developing the dormant military power of China will yet be fruitful in far-reaching results. There are those who hint that Li Hung Chang is growing too powerful for the dynasty and that his ambition will not be satisfied until he has seated himself on the dragon throne. But the late Gen. Gordon, who knew him better than most men, always declared that Li Hung Chang was loyal to the core, that by making himself indispensable in the inner council of state he could satisfy all his ambitions, that in these days it would be scarcely possible for him or any other usurper to establish his authority over fourteen provinces and pass it on to his son within the space of a lifetime.

Big English Oaks.

The largest oak now standing in England is the "Cowthorpie" which measures 78 feet in circumference at the ground. At one time this tree and its branches covered more than an acre of space. The gigantic old "Parliamentary Oak" in Clipstone park, London, is believed to be 1,500 years old. The tallest oak on the British Isles is called the Duke's Walking-stick. It is higher than the spire of Westminster abbey. The oak of Gelemos, which was felled in 1810, realized $4,350 for its owner; the bark was sold for $1,000 and the trunk and branches for $3,350 more.

A Danger Whistle.

An English railway engineer has invented a useful adjunct to the ordinary semaphore signal, consisting of a whistle operated by compressed air. When the blade is at danger, a spring lever is made to rise so as to lie along the inner side of the rail. This lever projects slightly above the rail, and when depressed by the wheels of a passing engine a piercing screech is emitted by the whistle at the side of the track.

The Reason.

Without exception, homely girls like the expression "vice versa," because it always puts another face on the matter.—Lippincott's.

DISCOURAGED!

No Woman Will Be On Reading This.

A lady who for years had suffered from nervous weakness, headache, backache, excessive nervousness, and who complained of feeling tired all the time disheartened at repeated failures to find relief, exclaimed:

"I am discouraged, and suppose I must drag out the rest of my life feeling wretched and miserable."

A sympathizing friend encouraged her with words of hope. "There is one thing you have not yet used—the great nerve and health restorative, Dr. Greene's Nervura. This wonderful discovery cured me, and I am sure it will cure you."

"There are thousands of women who need the same encouragement," especially in the Spring, when all physical and nervous ills are aggravated, and if they will use this remarkable female invigorator, it will certainly restore health, strength and vigor. Purely vegetable and harmless. Druggists, $1.

"I deem it my duty to say that I think Dr Greene's Nervura the best medicine in the world. My kidneys were in a terrible state, I had awful pains in the back and side, and could not sleep at night. My headache was a source of great annoyance and I suffered very much. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Greene's Nervura, 'for it cured me of my terrible complaints'. Why, I felt so miserable that I often thought I would take my own life. I thank God for directing me to Dr. Greene's Nervura.

MRS. LILA C ROOT,
36 Elm street, New Bedford, Mass."

N. B. ☞ Dr. Greene, the successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases, 35 W. 14th St., New York, can be consulted, free, personally, or by letter. Call or write him about the case, or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter fully explaining the disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free. 22td tts

Mr. Billus Safe.

"If you think you're going to have the grip, Maria," observed Mr. Billus, peevishly, "of course you'll have it. Any doctor will tell you that a constant dread of any disease is likely to make you catch it."

"Not always, John," replied Mrs. Billus. "You might live for sixty years in constant dread of a brain disease and you'd never get it, John."—Chicago Tribune.

Not a Hero.

First Stranger—And so you went off and let your wife get a divorce from you so she could marry a younger and handsomer man?

Second Stranger—Jesso.

First Stranger—Wasn't that rather uncalled-for self-sacrifice.

Second Stranger—No—o. I hated the other man.—N. Y. Weekly.

A Great Improvement.

"Well, how do you like it?" Lucifer asked of a shade who had lived in the lower regions for about a week.

"First rate," was the reply.

"That's strange. Most new arrivals don't like it."

"Well, you see, I had been married to a Chicago woman for four years."—Brooklyn Life.

A Change of Opinion.

Art Critic—What do you think of Alma Cadmium's painting?

Artist—Oh, I think it is superb.

Art Critic—I am surprised to hear you say that. He says just the reverse of yours.

"Ah, well; perhaps we're both mistaken."—Judge.

Better Than Explosives.

Rasper—This talk about Dryenforth and his rainmaking machine makes me tired. I have a scheme that knocks it all hollow.

Sawyer—What is it?

Rasper—I just leave my umbrella at home.—Life.

On a Man.

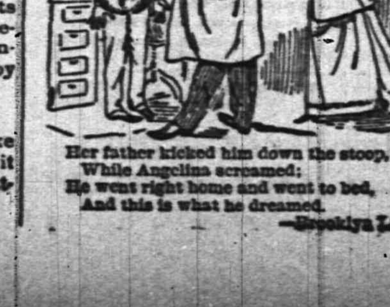
The man who boasts of wicked deeds he's done—
Don't fret about him; it is just his way.
But keep an eye out for that other one
Who smiles, yet doesn't have a word to say.
—N. Y. World.

A Lingerist.

Rosalie—Mr. Trotter is a fine linguist.

Her Father—Yes. I noticed that he lingered last night very late.—Brooklyn Life.

CONTRARY DREAMS.



Her father kicked him down the stoop,
While Angelina screamed;
He went right home and went to bed,
And this is what he dreamed.

The Reading Deal Causes Tremendous Excitement.

THE RECORD OF SALES BROKEN.

Frenzied Brokers Rush Up the Price of Coal Stocks.

Market Results of Reading's Purchase of Jersey Central and Lehigh Valley—New England Said to Be in the Deal—The Effect of the Combine on the Philadelphia Exchange—President Hood's Views—Coal Operators Alarmed—What Mr. Powderly Says.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Wall street went crazy yesterday. Fortunes were made and lost in a twinkling. The transactions on the Stock and Consolidated Exchanges were the heaviest on record, and the business done by the commission houses was something enormous. There were 1,446,874 shares dealt in on the Stock Exchange during the day. The banner business until yesterday was 1,199,942 shares which were traded in on Dec. 15, 1886. The bond sale amounted to $7,188,000. On the Consolidated Exchange 497,880 shares of stock were bought and sold.

The boom followed the announcement of the greatest railroad deal that has ever been consummated in this country in recent years—the actual purchase of the Lehigh Valley and Jersey Central railroads by the opulent Reading company.

The stupendnous character of this coalition can be realized when it is known that the combined capital of the three roads is now only a little less than $400,000,000; their payrolls carry the names of 100,000 employes—more than that of any other corporation in the world—and their prospective earnings for the present year are fixed at $80,000,000.

The banking firm of Drexel, Morgan & Co., has successfully engineered the most important railroad deal that ever startled Wall street. All those interested in the consolidation plan, including Drexel, Morgan, and Presidents McLeod and Maxwell of the Reading and Jersey Central, respectively, cleared several fortunes.

The scene on the floor of the Stock Exchange from the opening hour was one that stirred the hearts and quickened the pulses of the aged doorkeepers, who have looked calmly on all sudden revolutions on the floor since the memorable Black Friday panic.

When Chairman Mitchell dropped his gavel on the desk of the rostrum, there was a rush for the Reading board. The galleries were crowded with interested spectators.

Over two hundred wildly excited, scrambling, gesticulating, perspiring brokers surrounded it and offered to buy Reading stock at almost any price. They occupied every available inch of floor space surrounding the inclosure three minutes after the official gavel fell.

At the end of ten minutes the crowd had grown so large that it absorbed half a dozen other groups, who were compelled to vacate their places in order to deal in their especial stocks. The corridors outside the railing of the Exchange were taken possession of by a swarm of extra messenger and telephone boys who had been called into service by all the busy brokers of the Exchange. Reading stock opened at 57 1-2. Simultaneous sales were made at 59, and in a few minutes 64 stood as a last quotation. This was an advance of 9 points since Tuesday and of 23 points since Thursday of last week.

The majority of the participants in the great fight were thoroughly unstrung and worn out at the call of time. A mob of them assembled in Delmonico's, and champagne corks then began to fly. As one of the employes of the famous Broad street restaurant said, as he looked complacently on the scene: "This looks like a revival of old times on Wall street, when it was as easy to make money in the district as it now is to find dust and dirt."

Only one failure resulted during the memorable day. John A. Yates, of the Consolidated Exchange, gave up the ghost, and 1,100 shares of New England, 300 Union Pacific and 200 Western Union were bought in under the rule.

President Hood's Views.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 12.—President Hood of the Western Maryland railroad says of the deal by which the New Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley railroads pass under control of the Philadelphia and Reading: "If the report is correct, the bids for the Western Maryland railroad will have to be increased several million dollars. This deal will be of the greatest importance to us. We will be a connecting link between the Baltimore and Ohio on the west, and the Philadelphia and Reading on the east."

Coal Operators Alarmed.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 12.—Individual coal operators are alarmed over the gigantic coal deal. They fear it will eventually drive them out of the business, as they cannot hope to compete with the big trust which will have entire control of the carrying system. Master Workman Powderly says the combination is an outrage against the government and people. The combination has in its power to oppress the miners now more than ever.

Receiver for the C. N. E. & W.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Justice Pratt, of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn, has appointed James Sherwood to be receiver of the Poughkeepsie Bridge and of the Central New England & Western Railroad and its leased lines. This line, it is said, forms the completing link of the line included in the great coal carrying deal of the Reading.

Boats for the Reading.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—It was reported that the Philadelphia & Reading Company has given orders to build 200 boats for its use in the coal trade.

EXCITED BROKERS.

Philadelphia Stock Exchange a Perfect Pandemonium.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—For more than a week past the stock market has been in a state of fermentation, and the floor of the stock exchange a perfect pandemonium, but the official confirmation of the reports of the Reading deal with the Lehigh Valley and Jersey Central precipitated the climax.

Everybody was eager to get in the first crack, and the greatest excitement prevailed from the opening of the board until noon.

Reading, of course, was the objective point in all the dealings, although Lehigh Valley, and all the coal stocks, in fact, leaped higher and higher as the operators became frenzied with excitement.

Orders in blocks of 5,000 shares of Reading were coming thick and fast.

The first sale was at 33. It quickly ran up a dollar a share, during which advance a hundred thousand shares of the stock must have changed hands.

"I have seen nothing like this since '79 and '80," said Broker Fox, as he rushed out of the board room and down the first descending elevator. "Why I was paying 34 for Reading here and 30 in New York at the same time without knowing it."

About the noon hour the storm subsided, and business ran along comparatively smoother. A lull set in after one of the wildest gambling days in the knawledge of the oldest brokers.

FAMOUS EXPLORER DEAD.

J. A. Grant, Who Visited the Sources of the Nile With Captain Speke.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—James Augustus Grant, C.B., C.S.I., F.R.S., F.L.S., retired lieutenant-colonel of the Bengal army, is dead.

At the relief of Lucknow he was wounded while in command of two companies of the Seventy-eighth Highlanders, who formed the rear guard of the army. In 1863 he explored the sources of the Nile in company with the late Captain Speke, who published an account of their joint travels and discoveries in 1864, for which he was made C. B. (civil division) in September, 1866. He was head of the intelligence department with the Abyssinian expedition, under Lord Napier of Magdala, in 1868, and was nominated a companion of the Order of the Star of India.

He is the author of several works of travel and science. He was gold medalist of the Royal Geographical Society, and received medals from Pope Pius IX. and King Victor Emmanuel.

FIFTY-SEVEN CASES OF TYPHUS.

Startling Discovery Made by the New York Health Authorities.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Fifteen cases of typhus fever were reported yesterday afternoon by inspectors of the health department.

They were in the United Hebrew Charity Association building, an institution for Russian Hebrews. The victims were men, women and children. Over 200 Hebrews recently came from Marseilles on the steamship Massalia, and it is supposed that some of them contracted the disease during the voyage. The place was fumigated, and the people removed to North Brother Island. The inspectors are searching lodgings in the lower part of the city for new cases.

So far 57 cases have been discovered. This is the same as the hunger typhus fever of Russia. It is said to be the worst of all fevers.

He was sentenced to one year on the county chain gang, $700 fine and costs. His attorney gave notice of an appeal.

MAY ACQUIT HARRIS

New Evidence in His Favor Discovered in Chicago.

CARL PETERSEN'S TESTIMONY.

He Tells How Helen Potts Got Morphine for Her Complexion.

He Was an Intimate Friend of Harris, and is Engaged to Be Married to a Miss Meeker, Helen's Inseparable Companion—He Was Addicted to the Use of Morphine, and She Took Some of the Drug from His Bottle While in Asbury Park—Says He Will Testify on the Appeal of the Case.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—There is now in this city a young man, Carl Petersen by name, who was an intimate friend of Carlyle W. Harris, convicted of murder in New York city. Mr. Petersen is engaged to a Miss Mollie Meeker of Asbury Park, N. J. Miss Meeker and Helen Potts were inseparable friends, and thus the four young people passed a great deal of their time together. Six weeks before Helen Potts' death Petersen, Harris and Miss Potts were all at Asbury Park together. The rest of the story is told in Petersen's own words. He says:

"I have been addicted to the use of morphine and generally carry a small bottle of it with me. While I was at Asbury Park I had this bottle standing on the mantlepiece in my room. I was sitting in my room reading the paper one morning when Miss Potts came in. I continued reading, but at last, attracted by her silence, I looked up. I was horrified to find that she had taken the bottle of morphine from the mantelpiece and had poured a quantity of it on a sheet of paper.

"'My God, Helen,' I said, 'what are you going to do with that?' 'Why, you have enough poison there to kill a dozen men.'

"'Don't be a goose,' she replied, 'I only want to use it to improve my complexion.'

"She then wrapped the morphine up, put it in her pocket and then left the room."

"Why have you suppressed this important evidence until this late day, Mr. Petersen?" asked the reporter.

"I had absolutely forgotten it, and it was not until I read of my friend Carlyle's conviction that the recollection of this circumstance came back to me. Besides this, my business has obliged me to be away from New York a great deal lately, and I was not aware of the nature of the evidence which resulted in my friend's conviction. I shall at once place myself in communication with his lawyers, and if the revelation of this fact will avert his dreadful fate I shall do all I can to rectify the fault at this late day."

"From your intimate acquaintance with Harris and his wife, were you not surprised at the accusation of murder against him?"

"I was astounded. I never saw a couple that were more deeply in love. They thought the world of each other, and the mere suggestion that Harris would be capable of such a crime is absurd. Only shortly before Helen's death he was exulting to me because he had a prospect of being employed in a physician's office as assistant at $20 a week. 'And then,' he said, 'Helen and I will get married.' I did not know that they were already married, so well had they kept their secret. I pointed out to him that $20 a week was rather a small capital for a young married couple in New York, but he only replied: 'We'll get along somehow.'"

TO BUILD UP THE NAVY.

The Kaiser Wants it on an Equal Footing With the Army.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—The Kaiser has given it to be understood that he is as anxious to build up the navy as to maintain the standard of the army, and that in the event of war he wishes the German navy to be in a condition to take the aggressive and not remain merely on the defensive.

Yesterday Vice-Admiral Holmann, representing the Kaiser's views, appeared before the Budget Committee of the Reichstag and urged increased appropriations for the navy.

He pointed out the large expenditures incurred for naval purposes in France, Russia, Great Britain and other countries, and said that the situation demanded an increase of the German naval forces.

Nihilistic Plot.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—The police have discovered an extensive plot of the Nihilists in Berlin, and that arrests of suspected persons are being made every day.

Twenty-five Cents on the Dollar.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—Thomas W. Emerson & Co., seedsmen, have offered their creditors twenty-five cents on the dollar. Their liabilities are $80,000.

RUSSIA'S STARVING.

Governor Pattison Issues Another Proclamation.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 12.—Gov. Pattison has issued a proclamation relative to the Russian famine.

After reciting that since his previous proclamation an organization in the same behalf has been effected by the charitable and philanthropic citizens of Philadelphia, and free and quick transportation to that port and from there to Russia had been secured, the Governor says:

"I do proclaim to the people of Pennsylvania, and especially to such as may be willing to contribute to the relief of the suffering millions in Russia, to societies, committees and agencies organized to aid this work, that contributions for that purpose in money may be sent to Drexel & Co., of Philadelphia, and contributions in grain and other supplies may be sent to the American steamship Indiana, which will sail from Philadelphia on Feb. 20, to carry all such provisions for the suffering people of the Russian Empire. All articles contributed for this purpose should be marked 'For Russian famine relief.'"

WANTS A DIVORCE.

A New York Woman Sues Her Husband in the Dakota Courts.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—A special from Parker, S. D., says the soiled linen of another very prominent New York family is soon to be aired in South Dakota.

The plaintiff is Mrs. Charlotte Nicoll Minton, of Flushing, L. I. Her brother is De Lancey Nicoll, district attorney of New York.

The defendant is J. McKim Minton, one of the editors and proprietors of the Illustrated American of New York. The case is set for trial to-day before Judge Smith, but the defence will make an effort to get a postponement until next week. Judge Smith has already granted the defence its request for a jury trial.

In her complaint Mrs. Minton charges that her husband has been guilty of willful neglect, that he has failed to provide for her, that he has called her unprintable names, that he has been guilty of adultery, and that he is an habitual drunkard.

Steadham Defeats Ross.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—In a wrestling match at Bradford, George Steadham, the English champion of mixed wrestling, defeated Ross, the American champion, thereby winning the world's championship and 200 pounds. The winner was to prove himself the best in three or more of five different styles of wrestling. The first was catch-as-catch-can. In this Ross came out ahead. Then followed collar-and-elbow, with Steadman winner. Greco-Roman was next, and Ross proved too much for the Englishman. Then followed in succession the Scotch and the Cumberland styles, to neither of which Ross was much accustomed. Steadham threw him in both, and was declared winner of the match.

Armor Plates for the Monterey.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 12.—The first of the big armor plates made at Bethlehem, Pa., for the coast defense ship Monterey will reach San Francisco about the 25th inst. The plates are one foot thick, and the shipment weighs over 30 tons. The rest of the armor will be sent on as quickly as possible, and the managers of the Union Iron Works hope to have the ship ready for her trial trip at an early date.

Tried to Circumvent the Order.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The order of Secretary Foster refusing to Washington bankers exchange on New York unless gold was deposited, has caused a little friction. A banker endeavored to circumvent the purpose of the order by presenting a $100 Treasury note for which he demanded gold. The gold was paid to him, and when he deposited the gold and demanded exchange was refused.

Oil Struck in India.

CALCUTTA, Feb. 12.—A petroleum well belonging to the Assam Railway Company has been sunk to the depth of 650 feet, at which point a vein was struck, which is flowing at the rate of 720 barrels daily. This is taken to indicate that there is a rich supply of oil in the district in which the well is located.

John M. Thurston Declines.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 12.—Hon. John M. Thurston formally declines to allow his name to go before the convention as a candidate for the Vice-Presidency, owing to Blaine's withdrawal. He predicts that Harrison will be the nominee and says there will be a stubborn fight.

TO EXPEL DE COBAIN

First Move Against East Belfast's Member.

HE IS A FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE.

As He Will Not Answer the Charges Parliament Will Act.

The House Adopts in Silence the Motion that He be Notified to Appear at the Session on Tuesday, the 23d inst.—Lord Londonderry Asks Questions, But Fails to Receive Satisfactory Answers Regarding Police Protection to Irish Members.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—In accordance with the notice given upon the opening of the session Mr. Balfour, government leader in the House of Commons, moved that Mr. Edward De Cobain, member for East Belfast, who is and has been for many months past a fugitive from justice in consequence of the issuing of a warrant for his arrest on a grossly immoral charge, be notified to attend the session of the House on Tuesday, the 23d inst.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt, liberal, seconded the motion, and it was adopted by the House in silence.

This is a move preparatory to the formal expulsion of the offending member, for there is every reason to believe that Mr. De Cobain will not return to England to face the charge hanging over him.

WANTED INFORMATION.

Lord Londonderry Asks Questions, But Gets no Satisfactory Answers.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—In the House of Lords, the Marquis of Londonderry asked whether Messrs. Dillon, O'Brien and Healy, the Irish Members of Parliament, were accorded police protection at their request.

Earl Cadogan, Lord Privy Seal, replied that everyone was entitled to police protection.

The Marquis of Londonderry, however, insisted upon a specific reply. Thereupon Lord Salisbury said that it would be unjust to inform the world as to who applied for police protection.

This, however did not satisfy the Marquis of Londonderry who expressed discontent at the replies received to his questions and gave notice of a motion calling upon the government to furnish the House of Lords with the desired information.

YOUTHFUL DEPRAVITY.

Two Wayward Young Girls Found Helplessly Drunk in a Furnished Room.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Amelia Stark, 15 years old, of No. 83 Charlton street, and Bridget Madigan, 14 years old, of No. 64 Downing street, disappeared from their homes about a week ago, leaving letters informing their parents that they had gone to Castello, N. J., where they had secured positions as domestics in the family of a Mrs. Warner.

Officers of the Gerry Society last night found them living in a furnished room at No. 525 West Twenty-fourth street, both helplessly intoxicated and surrounded by eight empty whiskey bottles.

They were taken to the society's rooms where later the Madigan girl said that she found a pocketbook containing $50 in Washington Market last Saturday. The money was all spent, and the girl said it had been spent for liquor.

At Jefferson Market Court Justice Divver remanded the two girls.

The Protection of Heligoland.

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—The Radicals in the Reichstag are preparing a hot opposition to the government proposals for the fortification of the island of Heligoland, on the ground that the utility of such measures is in no way proportionate to the cost. It is already estimated that the necessary expense will amount to over $2,500,000. Admiral Hollmann's statement that proposed fortifications will not diminish the necessity for keeping a single man-of-war stationed there will not assist to pacify the malcontents.

She Was an Heiress.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Joseph E. Bernhardt, his uncle, Paul Bernhardt and Miss Catherine Moore, all of Cleveland, Ohio, arrived in the city and proceeded to the mayor's office, where the young lady and Joseph Bernhardt were married. It is said to be an elopement and, according to the parties interested, the step was taken to get the bride out of the power of her guardian. She is an orphan, 22 years of age, and is said to be an heiress worth $40,000.

For Killing Farmer Markert.

MONTICELLO, N. Y., Feb. 12.—The grand jury of Sullivan County found true bills of indictment against Adam and Joseph Heidt for the murder of George Markert near Callicoon depot. This murder created much excitement because of the atrociousness of the crime and on account of the fact that Markert was supposed to have been killed because he practiced witchcraft. The trial of the Heidts will be held in May at this place.

Under the Red Cross Flag.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—The Russian Relief Committee of this city has been notified by Miss Clara Barton, President of the Red Cross Society, that the cargo of grain from Iowa now on its way east will be forwarded for shipment here by the steamship Indiana, provided the latter sails under the Red Cross flag.

Terra Del Fuegan Wreckers.

LONDON, Feb. 12.—News has been received that the natives of Terra del Fuego are plundering the British ship Crown of Italy, which foundered off Cape San Diego while on a voyage from Liverpool for San Francisco. Cape San Diego is a headland of South America which bounds on the west the Straits of Le Maire, which separates Staten Island from Terra del Fuego.

It's concealed, but it's there—ammonia in baking powder widely advertised as "absolutely pure;" 'tis easy to detect it;

Boil up a heaping spoonful of the powder in a spoonful of water, and smell the steam.

There's nothing to conceal in Cleveland's baking powder; the composition is stated on every label.

The ingredients are all so wholesome we are glad to have people know what they are.

HARRIOTT GUILTY.

He Tells in Court How He Strangled Mrs. Leonard.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Feb. 12.—The trial of Louis Harriott for the murder of Farmer Leonard's wife of Atlantic Highlands on Nov. 27, last, was resumed yesterday.

The court room was crowded. A crowd gathered on the outside of the court room, waiting for such bits of information as they could obtain.

Harriott, who testified to the killing of Mrs. Leonard on the witness stand, was recalled and cross-examined.

He testified regarding the rope with which he had choked Mrs. Leonard to death. He was asked where he got this rope. He said he had used it as a check rein on the horse. He put it in his pocket on the Thursday before the murder.

Then Mrs. Leonard opened the window to call for help. He closed the window, followed Mrs. Leonard and knocked her down. He struck her three times on the head with his fists, but denied using the fish-plate. As he struck her Mrs. Leonard screamed. Harriott then said that he twisted the rope around her neck to stop her screaming. Then he struck her again.

When he saw that she was not dead he struck her again and again. Then he went to the window and looked out. He saw no one near, so he went to his room and got his clothes. He saw $5.70 lying on the bureau. He took this money.

Then he went over to Mrs. Leonard, who was lying on the floor, and felt her pulse. There seemed to be some life there yet. Then he hunted around and found a clothes line. He passed the line about her body and dragged her into the dark storeroom. He felt her pulse again and she was not dead yet. He left her sitting on the floor. He heard her gasp once or twice. Then he went out.

The bundle of clothing which Harriott had left in the woods when he had exchanged his blood-stained clothing for fresh garments, and which was subsequently found, was handed to Harriott in the court room. He identified all the garments as his.

During Harriott's testimony the audience seemed spellbound. All of the evidence was actually drawn from him by the prosecuting attorney, ex-Senator Nevins, with the utmost difficulty.

Harriott was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentence was deferred.

Won Four Straight Fights.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Feb. 12.—James F. Doyle, of this city, and Ike Stanfield, of Philadelphia, lightweights, fought a ten-round battle near the Rhode Island State Line to-night. Both men were in good trim and the ten rounds were sharply contested. During the last part of the tenth round, however, he failed to come to time, and the stakes and receipts of $75 were awarded to Doyle. This is the fourth straight fight won by Doyle. He is to meet Professor O'Shea on February 29 for a purse of $1,000.

To-night.

An old friend in a new dress will be seen at Music Hall this evening, where Henry E. Dixey is announced to appear in "The Solicitor". Everyone knows Dixey's "Adonis", and everyone will therefore be anxious to see him in his new character, in which he surprised and delighted New York audiences for a hundred nights. Hence a word or two of anticipatory description of the piece will be of interest. "The Solicitor" is said to more nearly approach legitimate comedy than anything Mr. Dixey has yet undertaken. It is an adaption from the pen of the English playwright, M. Daruley, shorn of the elements which while acceptable to European audiences might make it objectionable to Americans, and developed into a clean comedy of a high order of merit.

"The Solicitor" will be preceded by a jolly little farce called "A Tangled Skein", which is said to be mirth-provoking in the extreme, and just the sort of dish to be served as a prelude to the main part of the bill.

Mr. Dixey is under the management of Charles Frohman, who may be depended upon to leave no detail overlooked.

HYMENEAL.

Ackerman—Weber.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Feb. 12.—The wedding of Ernest R. Ackerman, member of the Plainfield common council from the Third ward, to Miss Mora Linnette Weber, daughter of William E. and Louise Virginia Weber, took place last evening in this city.

The officiating clergyman was the Rev. James E. Moffatt, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, where the ceremony was performed. The full Episcopal ceremony was used, and the wedding was a very pretty one.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who is president of the Third National bank at Cumberland, and by him was given away. The bride was radiantly beautiful in a rich costume of white silk, en train, adorned with pearl trimmings and Duchesse lace. Her ornaments were magnificent diamonds. She carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and purple orchids.

The bride was attended by six bridesmaids and a maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Fannie Millholland, Miss Minnie Kenah, Miss Ada B. Sprigg, and Miss Juliet Weber, of Cumberland, Miss Annie Moss of Parkersburg, and Miss Annie Chandlee of Baltimore. The costumes were of white silk, with chiffon trimming. Two of the maids carried white bouquets, two yellow, and two pink. The maid-of-honor was Miss Sue Weber, sister of the bride. This happy, graceful group of femininity made a most charming picture, and the wedding is spoken of as one of the most beautiful ever seen in Cumberland society.

The best man was Duncan Morgan of Plainfield, and the ushers were A. B. Lewis, P. J. Seaver, Harry Weber, Roderic Clary, and the Hon. Wm. M. McKeig, Congressman, all of Cumberland, and Edward Miller of Pittsburgh, Pa. The favors worn by the ushers were dainty scarf pins.

Among the near relatives of the bride and groom were Mrs. Weber, in black silk, Mrs. J. H. Ackerman, in purple silk, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, in her wedding gown of white silk, and Mrs. Robert Rushmore, in her wedding gown of white silk.

The bridal party entered the church to the sweet strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin. Mendelssohn's was used as a recessional. Ira Tipton presided at the organ.

After the ceremony a reception was given to near relatives and friends, at the home of the bride's parents, 112 West Washington street.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman of Sycamore avenue, will be "at home" Thursday evening, Feb. 25, from 8 to 11.

Dr. A. F. Schauffler, of New York, will speak to all interested in Sunday-school work, next Monday evening at 8, in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church.

John Y. Bainbridge died this morning in his seventy-nineth year. Funeral services will be held from the residence of his son-in-law, Emil Messerschmidt, Jackson avenue, Monday afternoon.

A delightful event was the twilight tea and chat given yesterday at the home of Mrs. W. L. Patton in aid of the fund for the proposed creche. Miss Marsh gave some charming selections on the piano, and the Misses Holmes and Mr. Barnes sang. The affair was a great success.

The Brooklyn Woman's club had a birthday party a day or two ago, which was enjoyed by a large and brilliant gathering at Hotel St. George. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall of the Plainfield Woman's club said that she brought greetings of admiration and respect from her own club. She told what was considered a good story about a man who made some funny comments on a woman's club. He said they differed from men's clubs in that women talked all at once.

Maj. Ackerman in the South.

The following about some people well known in this city, is clipped from the Jacksonville Metropolis: "Major J. H. Ackerman, formerly of the Twelfth New York Infantry, with Mrs. Ackerman and daughter, Miss Florence Ackerman, and Miss Abbie T. Evans, of Brooklyn, N. Y., are located at the Columbia Hotel, in full view of the ocean surf. They are delighted with Florida climate, preferring it to California, where they passed last winter."

Peace Reigns.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Feb. 12.—The war between the Navajo Indians and the cawboys in Western Valencia County, on the Atlantic & Pacific, has ended, and peace reigns for the time being This was brought about by the timely arrival of a company of soldiers from Fort Wingate, and the fact that Chief Mariano is opposed to trouble. The conflict between the Indians and the whites, near Coddington's ranch, was not as desperate as at first reported, but it is absolutely certain that several of the renegades were either killed or wounded. It is thought here that Chief Mariano will cause the renegades to go back to the reservation.

AN EIGHT-YEAR-OLD HERO.

Little Georgie Arrowsmith Saves His Playmate from a Watery Grave.

A group of boys were playing on the sawmill bridge in South Plainfield yesterday when little Dick Geary, age seven, ventured down on the ice. He had gone but a short way from shore when he broke through and disappeared, with a pitiful cry, in the cold black depths of the pond.

Most of the boys were terror-stricken and ran frantically to and fro along the bank, crying.

Georgie Arrowsmith, however, retained presence of mind, and went promptly to the rescue. Creeping out on the frail ice to the edge of the gap where Dick had gone down, he waited for the imperiled lad to reappear. When the struggling form came to the surface Georgie thust forth the crooked end of a shinny stick and shouted "Grab it, Dick!" Then, while the boys on the bank were crying "Oh, Georgie, you will be drowned too!" he hauled the half-unconscious Dick out on the ice and assisted him to the shore.

Comedy and Song Next Monday Evening.

One of the best attractions of the season at Music Hall will be Mestayer's Tourists in their latest and greatest laughing success "Our Grab Bag", next Monday evening. At the head of the tourists is that jolly son of Momus, W. A. Mestayer, and the charming queen of song, Theresa Vaughn. So far, the season has been one series of ovations, and if reports are to be belived "Our Grab Bag" is the strongest melofarce comedy extant. Like all farces, it has but very little plot, the prime object being to create laughter. Musically, it is the equal of most opera companies. In the company aside from the clever stars are such well-known singing and dancing comedians as Frank David, who starred in "U. S. Mail;" pretty Jennie Eddy, erswhile of the Chicago opera house and "O'Dow's Neighbors", Bessie Ferbairn of the McCaull opera company; John G. Bell, the noted basso and character actor; Charles Holmes, the tenor; Raymond Hitchcock a clever German dialect comedian; and a bevy of beautiful girls including Julia Raymond, Grace Langley and May Sylvests. "Our Grab Bag" mildly satirizes the prohibition question, and the second act which represents an inn in a prohibition town, is said to be one of the most ludicrous incidents ever played upon the stage.

Mr. Mestayer is funnier in the present production than in anything he has done since the days of "We Us & Co.," while Miss Vaughn sings and acts with a naivete that is simply irresistible. Her original creation "The Fiddle and I", is a gem, and as rendered by Miss Vaughn never fails of half a dozen encores. In the second act she will introduce a number of German ditties and songs of the Tyrol in their native tongue, and, in the third act by special permission of the New York Casino management, she will sing the famous song of "The Nightingale" from the Opera of "The Tyrolean". Among the hits of "Our Grab Bag" is the topical song "O Let it be Soon" sung by Mr. Mestayer and Mr. David; "The Knights of the Mystic Star" from Harrigan's "Last of the Hogans"; a medley with a dancing finish a burlesque of "The Gobbie" song from "The Mascott" by Mr. Mestayer and Miss Vaughn; "That Girl from Manhasset" introduced by Jennie Eddy; and an original Irish song and dance by Eddy Magee.

What a Farce!

The second annual meeting of what is termed the "State Publishers' Union", was held at Trenton, Monday. There was no one present except a few Republican paper owners from central and northern Jersey who seemed to have met to cry over the official patronage they had lost by their party's defeat.

After everybody present had refused the office of president, it was again given to the very publisher in the State who has displayed the least ability and accomplished the smallest amount of success in that line. Then Mr. Winton of the Hackensack Democrat, who was not even present at the meeting, was elected vice-president.

A committee consisting of editors McBride and Honeyman (republicans) and Boyd (not much of anything) was appointed to draft an act in relation to the publication of the laws in the newspapers. It is needless to remark, they'll have their labor for their pains. The "State Publishers' Union" does not represent the publishers of the State, and the Democratic legislature is not called upon to enact laws for the benefit of its enemies and its defamers.

It's a strong stomach that can stand the ordinary pills, with their griping and violence. What kind of a man or woman can it be who buys them?

It's some one who doesn't know about Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—that's certain. They're better—they're the best, in every trouble of the liver, stomach, and bowels. They do more good, do it easily and naturally, and do it so that it lasts—cleansing and regulating the whole system. Sick and Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, Dizziness, are surely prevented, quickly relieved, and permanently cured.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, too, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction.

EMIGRANT TYPHUS PATIENTS.

Eighty-one Russian Hebrews in the New York Hospital.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—President Wilson of the Health Board, and Dr. Cyrus Edson, Chief of the Bureau of Contagious Diseases, do not believe that there will be an epidemic of typhus fever in this city, but they are satisfied that there will be a spread of the disease, which was brought here by Russian and Italian immigrants on board the Massilia, which reached this port on Jan. 30.

Up to last midnight 57 of the immigrants, suffering from typhus fever, were taken from various lodging-houses and sent to North Brother Island. This morning ten more sufferers were discovered and taken to the Island, making a total list, so far, of 67. Fourteen others, who came into contact with the patients and who were supposed to be affected with the disease, were also sent to North Brother Island.

At Ellis Island this morning six cases of typhus fever were discovered among the twenty passengers of the Massilia, detained there. As there were about 1,000 immigrants on the island at the time, the discovery caused considerable excitement.

AN OPERA-HOUSE BLOCK DESTROYED BY FIRE.

MONMOUTH, Ill., Feb. 12.—At 11 last night this city was visited by the second largest fire since 1871, when the whole business part was destroyed. The fire originated in the Opera-house, and was caused by an explosion of gas a few moments after the house had been vacated by nearly 800 persons who had been attending a lecture. The flames quickly spread, and in a short time were communicated to eight stores underneath—three groceries, a saloon, dry-goods, furniture, and hardware stores—and within an hour the entire block of brick buildings was completely burned.

A HEALTHY YEAR FOR PLAINFIELD.

Interesting Report from the Local Board of Health.

The following interesting report was received by the common council Wednesday night:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 26, 1892.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—The year closing with this month has been a fairly healthy one for Plainfield. There has not been any epidemic of disease, and but few seriously contagious cases have occupied the attention of the Board. Notwithstanding the great amount of upturning of fresh earth for laying water mains and gas pipes, the tearing up of the streets and sidewalks for grading, curbing and relaying of flagging, and the excessive moisture from over-wet sprinkling, the good sanitary condition of the place has remained unimpaired. Care has been exercised to prevent the existence of unwholesome nuisances. Watchfulness on the part of the Health Inspector has resulted in a comparative cleanliness of back-door yards, and the frequent emptying of sesspools and vaults. The collecting and disposal of kitchen garbage and the removal of ashes and rubbish have been attended to with increased regularity and satisfaction.

For your information of the work done the past twelve months under the supervision of the Board of Health the following figures may be of interest.

495 personal inspections of different properties have been made by the Health Inspector.

101 compulsory requirements for removal of nuisances, detrimental to health, have been issued.

460 sesspools have been emptied by regularly licensed scavengers, and 346 privy vaults were cleaned out.

Besides this general work a great deal of quiet inspection and examination of unsanitary nuisances has been performed in the line of precautionary action.

The expenses of the Board have been confined within the prescribed allowance, the net amount being $606.20, as follows:

Salary of Health Inspector	$360.00
Salary of Secretary and office rent	100.00
Legal Counsel for 1890	50.00
Registering and Recording Vital Statistics for 1890-'91	72.80
Scarlet fever case supplies	22.15
Burying dead animals found in streets	14.50
Postage stamps, Hack hire, and Signs	16.75
Total	$636.20
Less credit from scavenger permits paid to City Treasurer	30.00
Net expense	$606.20

DIGEST OF VITAL STATISTICS.

During the year ending February 1, 1892, there have been 207 deaths, being 66 deaths under 6 years; 59 deaths over 60 years, and the average age of the 82 persons dying between these age has been 30 years.

In this same period there have been 230 births and 103 marriages.

An appropriation of $800 it is thought is needful for this year's use of the Board, and your Honorable Body is respectfully requested to provide such sum in the budget of City taxes for 1892.

GEO. W. ROCKFELLOW,
President.

OLIVER B. LEONARD,
Secretary.

Having been a sufferer for sometime past with billiousness, &c., I was recommended to use Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills. I did so, and am pleased to find that they are as recommended, a cure for those ailments. I therefore subscribe myself cheerfully in recommending them to any who may suffer with those complaints.—E. DOWN WITH RACE-TRACK GAMBLING.

Plainfield Clergymen and Laymen Preparing to Oppose Iniquitous Legislation.

The ministers of Plainfield, with several prominent laymen, are in session at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this afternoon to protest earnestly against the proposed legislation to legalize race-track gambling. At a meeting of the executive committee of the State Citizens' league, held at Elizabeth yesterday afternoon, Craig A. Marsh was appointed to confer with the clergymen of Plainfield regarding the best means of enlisting the interest of the citizens, and of securing the attendance at Trenton, next Tuesday, of the largest possible delegation from this city. Upon conference with the Rev. Dr. Rodman, the other member of the committee from Plainfield, it was decided to request all of the ministers of Plainfield to meet to-day at 3 p. m. for conference. Action will be taken in accordance with the suggestions of the following circular:

TO THE MORAL AND RELIGIOUS PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY.

Again the State Citizens' league is compelled to summon you to action! On Monday evening last two race-track bills were introduced into the House of Assembly more infamous even than the ones you defeated a year ago! Those of last winter permitted racing and pool selling only during the summer months. These legalize both pernicious practices all the year round.

Guttenburg and Gloucester will be the chief beneficiaries of these acts unless it be intended to extend the abomination of those places into the other counties of the State.

The executive committee has arranged for a hearing upon these bills before the House committee on the revision of laws, in the new Assembly chamber, at Trenton, Tuesday, February 16, at 12 noon. It is the desire of the executive committee that a strong delegation should be present on that occasion from every school district, and from every church of every denomination in the State.

The forces of evil and corruption are marshaled behind these bills. What their numbers or strength may be it is impossible to foresee. But the executive committee feels confident that no combination of iniquities can withstand an aroused and indignant public opinion called forth in defense of the church and the home. Let there be no excuses from enrollment in this fight. He who can, but will not, strike a blow at Trenton next Tuesday in defense of his own fireside, is unworthy of it.

It is the desire of the executive committee that not only the Assembly chamber but the whole State House shall be filled on that occasion with an army of objectors whose character and numbers will insure a victory both complete and enduring.

EVERARD KEMPSHALL, D. D.,
President State Citizens' League.
Elizabeth, N. J., Feb. 10, 1892.

Effect of the Deal on Other Roads.

President Hood of the Western Maryland railroad, which connects with the Reading railroad by way of Harrisburgh, says of the deal by which the New Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley railroads pass under control of the Philadelphia and Reading: "If the report is correct, the bids for the Western Maryland railroad will have to be increased several millions of dollars. This deal will be of the greatest importance to us. We will be a connecting link between the Baltimore and Ohio on the West and the Philadelphia and Reading on the East."

Baltimore and Ohio officials say that the new relations of the Philadelphia and reading, New Jersey Central, and Lehigh Valley roads will not interfere with the Baltimore and Ohio company. The Baltimore and Ohio has a ninety-nine years' contract for its route from Philadelphia to New York, known as the Bound Brook route. From Philadelphia to Bound Brook, N. J., the Philadelphia and Reading company's tracks are used, and from Bound Brook to New York the New Jersey Central tracks make up the route.

To Reduce Expenses on Coal Traffic.

The officials of the Reading company claim that the lease of Jersey Central makes them masters of the coal situation. The Jersey Central gives the best facilities to tide water, while the Lehigh Valley has the advantage of other lines to the lakes. In addition the control of the Poughkeepsie Bridge and of the New England Road will give the syndicate a large amount of New England business, and the combination of all the roads in the system will allow the Reading to reduce the expense of mining and transporting coal to the minimum point. A further saving will be caused by the distribution of coal through a central agency.

Pastor Dilts Loves Fair Play.

The Somerville Messenger, referring to pastor Dilts's resignation from the pastorate of the Park Avenue Baptist church, says: "Mr. Dilts is one of the Raritan boys who are making their mark in the world, and his many friends hereabouts are pleased to note the fact that his sense of 'fair play' which he had to such a large extent as a boy is still asserting itself. The church is reported very wealthy, and it looks as if it was selling its birthright for a very small mess of pottage. The press throughout the State highly commend Mr. Dilts on the step he has taken."

HOOSIER CLUBHOUSE.

Indiana Will Have the Finest Building at the World's Fair.

When people come up from Posey county, Ind., to see the world's fair, they will learn that the Hoosier state has one of the finest clubhouses on the exposition grounds, says the Chicago Herald. No Hoosier, no matter how proud, need be ashamed of being seen coming out of the Indiana building. By some critics Henry Ives Cobb's design has been pronounced to be the finest and the most graceful of all the state buildings yet presented. When Mr. Cobb offered his plans some people in Indiana picked at them and said "the state ought not put up any building at all if Indiana architects were not good enough to plan it."

"Well, I don't take that view of the case," Judge Martindale replied. "For my part, I think nothing too good for Indiana. If the Chicago man has a better design than our own architects we want the Chicago man's design."

That explains Mr. Cobb's selection. The Indiana building is to be a typical clubhouse. If the state board had to buy all the material that goes into the building it would cost $100,000, and that is more than the board has to pay out. So the enterprising manufacturers of Indiana have decided to give $70,000 worth of material for the house, and when they come to the fair they can walk into the big front door and feel as much at home as they do by their own firesides. They will literally "own the place." In design the Indiana building will be French gothic, both inside and out. It will cover an area of 100 by 170 feet, including the verandas that surround it. The buildings will be two-storied, but on either side stone towers arise to the height of 200 feet. These towers are pierced at intervals by windows. The exterior of the building will be of stone and imitation stone. It will be finished throughout with the best hardwood lumber the state affords. The two floors have been divided into rooms where visitors can come to rest or transact business. The women will will have about as many rooms for their meetings as the men. Large assembly halls have been planned, where different state associations can meet and talk about matters of interest. Writing rooms, check rooms, lavatories, a post office and in fact everything that will add to the comfort and convenience of the visitors have been marked off on the plans.

The last time Executive Commissioner B. F. Havens, of Indiana, looked over the plans he drew a deep sigh and said; "I guess Indiana will lead them all in state buildings."

A few days later Mr. Havens notified Director General Davis that the Indiana board was ready to tear up the sod at Jackson park. Illinois is the only state already at work on her building.

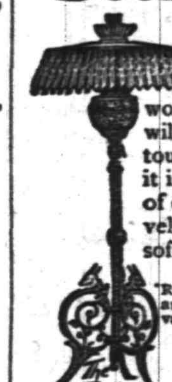
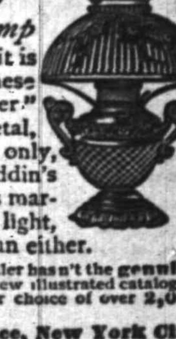
"Seeing is Believing."





And a good lamp must be simple; when it is not simple it is not good. Simple, Beautiful, Good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only, it is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.

Look for this stamp—THE ROCHESTER. If the lamp dealer hasn't the genuine Rochester, and the style you want, send to us for our new illustrated catalogue, and we will send you a lamp safely by express—your choice of over 2,000 varieties from the Largest Lamp Store in the World.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

F. W. RUNYON, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 19, 1892.

AN ORDINANCE

To License Inns and Taverns and to Regulate and Prohibit the sale of Spirituous and Fermented Liquors.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. All applications for license to keep an inn and tavern within said city shall be in writing, addressed to the Common Council, shall be signed by the person or persons desiring such license, shall state the purpose for which such license is asked, and the place wherein such business is proposed to be carried on, and a certificate shall be annexed thereto, signed by at least ten reputable citizens and freeholders of said city (three of whom shall reside within one thousand feet of the place proposed for license, and all of whom shall be residents of the same ward in which the business is to be carried on), who have not within one year theretofore signed any similar certificate, stating that the applicant is known to them to be of good repute for honesty and temperance, and provided with at least two spare rooms with beds, bedding and furniture more than are necessary for the use of applicant's family.

Sec. 2. Before any person or persons shall receive a license to keep an inn or tavern within said city, such person or persons shall become bound by recognizance in writing to the "Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield" in the sum of one hundred dollars as principal, with two sufficient sureties, being freeholders within said city, in the sum of fifty dollars each, to be taken before the City Judge in or out of court, with condition following, to wit: The condition of this recognizance is such that whereas the above bounden A. B. is licensed by the Common Council of said city of Plainfield to keep an inn and tavern within said city until the first day of March next ensuing the date hereof, if therefore the said A. B. during the continuance of the said license shall not keep a disorderly inn and tavern, nor game himself, nor suffer any person to game in said inn and tavern for money or the value of money, nor violate the laws made concerning inns and taverns, but shall during the said term in all things respecting him as an innholder and tavern-keeper, use and maintain good order and rule, and find and provide good, wholesome and sufficient lodging, diet and entertainment for man, and stabling and provender for horse, and observe the directions of the law relating to inns and taverns, then this recognizance to be void, or else to remain in full force and virtue.

Sec. 3. Every inn and tavern-keeper licensed under the provisions of the foregoing sections, shall be liable to the same conditions, requirements and restrictions as are imposed upon inn and tavern-keepers under the general law of the State; provided, that no such license shall be taken or construed as authorizing the sale, by such inn and tavern-keeper, of any spirituous or fermented liquors.

Sec. 4. That license may be granted to any person duly licensed to keep an inn and tavern in said city to sell spirituous and fermented liquors in his inn and tavern; all applications for such license shall be in writing addressed to the Common Council, signed by the applicant, setting forth the purpose for which such license is asked, and the inn and tavern wherein such business is purposed to be carried on, and such application shall have a certificate annexed thereto, signed by at least ten reputable citizens and freeholders of said city (three of whom reside within one thousand feet of the said inn and tavern), and all of whom shall be residents of the same ward in which the business is to be carried on, stating that the applicant is known to them to be of good repute for honesty and temperance, and thereupon the said Common Council may, in their discretion, grant such license; provided, that the said certificate may be signed by the same citizens and freeholders as have already signed the certificate required to be annexed to his application for license to keep an inn and tavern; and provided further, that before any license is granted to sell spirituous and fermented liquors as provided for by the ordinance, the Clerk of the Common Council shall have caused or shall cause to be inserted in each official newspaper in the city, within ten days after such application was or is made, a notice in the following form, with the blank spaces properly filled in, to wit:

Plainfield, N. J............18....

Notice is hereby given that............ has applied to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield for a license to sell spirituous and fermented liquors at No...............street, which application is signed by.................. ...., citizens and freeholders. All persons knowing of any reasons why such license should not be granted, are requested to make known the same in writing, to the City Clerk, on or before the....day of...., 18....

The expense of publishing such notice shall be added to the fee required to be paid and shall be paid by the applicant for such license, before receiving such license; and all communications which may be received by the City Clerk in response to any such request, shall be by him immediately delivered to the Committee on Licenses of the Common Council, if there be such committee, or if not, to the Common Council.

Sec. 5. That saloon-keepers and persons other than inn and tavern-keepers may, in the discretion of the Common Council, be licensed under this ordinance to sell spirituous and fermented liquors within said city. All applications for such license shall be in writing, and made as required by the next preceding section in the case of inn and tavern-keepers, and the owner of the place proposed for license (if the applicant be not the owner) must be one of the signers to the certificate required to be annexed to the application. Such certificate shall be signed only by reputable citizens and freeholders of said city, who have not within one year theretofore signed any similar certificate. In every certificate annexed to applications for license to sell spirituous and fermented liquors within said city, whether by inn and tavern-keepers, saloon-keepers or other persons, every freeholder recommending the granting of such license shall clearly designate the street in which he lives, and in what part thereof he lives, and also the location and nature of, and his interest in, the real property by virtue of the ownership of which he shall sign such certificate; and further, the signature of every freeholder to every such certificate shall be witnessed by some reputable person, whose affidavit, setting forth the fact that he saw said freeholder sign said certificate, shall be attached to said certificate before being presented to the Council; and no license whatever shall be granted unless the application therefor and the certificate thereto annexed shall be in compliance with all the requirements under this ordinance. No person shall be deemed competent to sign the certificate first referred to in this section who shall, within one year theretofore, have signed a certificate annexed to any application for license to keep an inn and tavern, or to sell spirituous and fermented liquors therein, and no woman, and no man who from illiteracy is unable to read and write the English language, shall be deemed competent to sign any of the certificates required by this ordinance, or any part thereof, except in the case of the owner of the place proposed for license when under this ordinance such owner's signature is made necessary, nor shall any woman be deemed competent to receive a license under this ordinance.

Sec. 6. That before receiving any license provided in the last preceding section, the person licensed shall become bound by recognizance in writing to the inhabitants of the City of Plainfield in the sum of two hundred dollars as principal, with two sufficient sureties in the sum of one hundred dollars each, conditioned as follows, to wit: The condition of this recognizance is such that whereas the above bounden A. B. is licensed to sell spirituous and fermented liquors at .... on .... street, in the City of Plainfield, until the first day of March next ensuing the date hereof, if therefore the said A. B. during the continuance of said license shall not keep a disorderly house, nor game himself, nor suffer any person to game in said house for money or the value of money, nor violate any of the provisions of this ordinance, or the ordinances of said city made or to be made concerning the business whereunto the said A. B. is licensed as aforesaid, but shall in all things during the continuance of said license keep and maintain good order and rule in his said place of business, and in all things comply with and observe the provisions of the ordinances of said city now made and to be made concerning such business, then this recognizance to be void, else to be and remain in full force and virtue.

Sec. 7. Licenses to sell spirituous, vinous, malt or brewed liquors in any quantity from one quart to five gallons may be granted under this ordinance, upon the applicant presenting to the Common Council written application therefor, signed by such applicant and setting forth the purpose for which such license is asked, and the place in which the applicant proposes to conduct his business, accompanied by a certificate recommending the applicant to be a fit and suitable person to be licensed, signed by at least five freeholders in and residents of the city of Plainfield, three of whom reside in the same ward in which said proposed place of business is situated and within one thousand feet of said proposed place of business of said applicant; but no such license shall be taken or construed to authorize any such licensed person to suffer or permit any of said liquors, sold under and in pursuance of such license, to be drunk on or about the premises where sold; and no person not licensed under this section shall sell, furnish or supply any spirituous, vinous, malt or brewed liquors to persons or families in dwellings, under a penalty of a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding sixty days, either or both, for each and every offense. That every licensed person engaged in furnishing or supplying liquors to persons or families in dwellings, shall carry with him while so engaged the license for inspection, under the penalty of five dollars for every neglect so to do; and when the licensee shall find it necessary in the prosecution of his business to use more than one vehicle for the delivery of spirituous, vinous, malt and brewed liquors, or any of them theretofore ordered from such licensee at his place of business, the city clerk shall issue to such licensee a certificate for every additional vehicle, which certificate shall be carried by the driver of such vehicle for inspection, under the penalty of five dollars for every neglect so to do. The city clerk shall demand such evidence as he may deem necessary before issuing any certificate. That the loan of any certificate aforesaid to any person not authorized to use the same, shall subject the offender to the penalty of a revocation of the license under which the certificate is issued.

Sec. 8. If any person licensed under this ordinance shall be convicted of being drunk in his own licensed place of business, such person may be fined in any sum not exceeding twenty dollars; and such conviction shall be sufficient cause for the revocation of such license by the Common Council.

Sec. 9. No person or persons licensed under this ordinance shall permit any drunkenness, riot or other disorderly conduct in his, her or their licensed place of business, or on his, her or their premises; and any person offending against the provisions of this section shall, upon conviction thereof before the City Judge be fined, for the first offense, in any sum not exceeding twenty dollars, and for each subsequent offense in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

Sec. 10. Every person licensed under this ordinance shall, within one month from date of the license, put up or fix a sign on the front of the place licensed, with his, her or the firm's (if it be a firm) name thereon; and shall keep such sign up during the whole period of the licence; and shall also cause the said license to be properly framed and hung up to public view in the public room of the place licensed.

Sec. 11. If any person or persons not licensed according to the provisions of this ordinance shall expose for sale, sell or dispose of, or cause or permit to be exposed for sale, sold or disposed of, directly or indirectly, within said city, any spirituous or fermented liquors, or any composition of which spirituous or fermented liquors shall form a part (except such as shall be compounded and intended for use as medicine) such person or persons shall be deemed guilty of an offense, and upon conviction thereof before the City Judge shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisoned for any term not exceeding sixty days, either or both, at the discretion of the Court; provided, that said prosecution shall be begun within six months from the date of the commission of such offense; and provided further, that nothing in this ordinance shall be construed to apply to druggists filling prescriptions from practicing physicians, or to prohibit any person from selling metheglin, currant or other native wine made by the seller.

Sec. 12. No person or persons licensed under this ordinance shall carry on the business or trade for which such license was granted in any other place than that designated in said license, nor shall such license be assigned or transferred, nor shall such licensed person or persons assume to give authority or permission to any other person or persons to carry on such licensed business, but such license as to any and all other persons and places than those named therein shall be void, and any person or persons who in disregard of the prohibitions of this section shall carry on any such business under a license so assigned or transferred, or under an authority or permission thus given, shall be liable to the same penalties as may be inflicted upon persons selling without license.

Sec. 13. No person or persons licensed under this ordinance shall, between the hours of eleven o'clock at night and six o'clock the following morning or upon the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, sell or offer, or expose for sale or furnish, or permit to be sold, offered or exposed for sale or furnished to any person or persons, any spirituous or fermented liquors of any kind or any composition thereof, or at any time sell, offer or expose for sale, or furnish or permit to be offered or exposed for sale, sold or furnished any of such liquors or any compound thereof, to any minor, intoxicated or weak-minded person, nor shall such licensed person or persons at any time incite, encourage or permit any game or device to be played, practiced or carried on within such licensed place, or in any shed, out-house or other place in the occupancy of such licensed person (billiards or nine-pins, if named in such license, alone excepted), or any betting or gaming for money or anything of any value whatever; and any person convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of this section shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisoned for any term not exceeding sixty days, either or both, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 14. All prosecutions under this ordinance shall be by affidavit or information filed before the City Judge, and in all cases where said prosecution shall be for the offering for sale, selling or exposing for sale or otherwise disposing of any spirituous or fermented liquors, it shall be sufficient in such affidavit or information to describe such liquors as spirituous or fermented liquors, as the case may be, without specifying particularly the kind or description thereof, and evidence may be given upon the trial of the sale, offering for sale or otherwise disposing of any particular kind of liquor included in the general description so given. All such information shall be brought by the Corporation Counsel in the name of "The Treasurer of the City of Plainfield." And whenever a fine shall be imposed and collected for violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance, one-half of such fine shall be paid to the person making the complaint upon which the conviction for such violation shall have been had, and the other half thereof shall be paid to the City Treasurer for the use of the city.

Sec. 15. In all cases of the prosecution of any person licensed under this ordinance for any offense against any of the provisions thereof, it shall be the duty of the Judge, upon conviction of such licensed person, to declare his recognizance forfeited.

Sec. 16. All licenses under this ordinance shall be granted by resolution of the Common Council, be made out by the City Clerk, signed by the Mayor, issued under the common seal of the city, attested by the City Clerk, and shall continue in force until the first day of March next after the date of such license, and no longer provided, that any person duly licensed to keep an inn and tavern may be granted license to sell spirituous and fermented liquors in his said inn and tavern for the six months beginning May first and ending November first of the year in which said license is granted, and such license shall expire on the said first day of November, and at all licenses shall be subject to be revoked any time by resolution of the Common Council for a violation or neglect of any of the provisions of this ordinance, or of any other ordinance which the Common Council may pass relative to the business authorized by such license, and it shall be the duty of the City Clerk to furnish immediately to the person or persons whose license shall be so revoked a copy of such resolution, and any person acting under such license, after notice of the revocation thereof, shall be liable to all the penalties imposed by this ordinance as fully as though no such license had ever been issued. Before receiving such license, the applicant shall be required to sign in duplicate a stipulation to be written, printed or stamped, both on the face of said license and on the stub to which the same is attached as follows: "I hereby agree to be bound by and to conform to all the ordinances of the City of Plainfield, under which this license is granted, under penalty of forfeiture of this license."

Sec. 17. Before receiving a license issued under this ordinance, the licensed person or persons shall pay the following fees: To the Mayor and City Clerk each one dollar, and in addition the following fees, viz: For each license to an inn and tavern-keeper to sell spirituous or fermented liquors, the sum of seven hundred dollars ($700) when said license is to expire on the first day of March, following, and the sum of four hundred dollars when said license is to expire on the first day of November following, provided that persons licensed to keep an inn and tavern without the privilege of selling spirituous and fermented liquors, shall not be required to pay any fees except those to the Mayor and City Clerk. For each license to a person other than an inn and tavern-keeper to sell spirituous and fermented liquors, the sum of seven hundred dollars ($700). For each other place licensed to sell spirituous and fermented liquors, in quantities as provided in section seven (7) of this ordinance, the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars ($250) provided, that all license fees under this ordinance, other than those to the Mayor and City Clerk, shall be paid to the City Treasurer and his receipt shown to the Mayor before such license shall issue; and provided further, that no such license shall be of any validity whatever until such license fees are in fact paid to the City Treasurer; and on failure to pay any such fees within twenty days from the time the Common Council shall have granted any such application for license the said action of said Common Council shall no longer authorize the issuance of a license under said application to the person failing to pay as aforesaid, unless the Common Council at the first meeting following the expiration of said twenty days shall so direct.

Sec. 18. The City Clerk shall keep a correct list of all licenses issued under this ordinance in a book to be provided for that purpose, in which shall be entered the name of the licensed person or persons, the business for which said license has been given, and the names of the freeholders and citizens certifying to the application for such license; which book shall, at all reasonable times, be open to the inspection of any citizen of said city desiring to examine the same.

Sec. 19. No person licensed under this ordinance shall keep open or cause or permit to be kept open his bar room or room in which spirituous or fermented liquors are customarily sold or permit persons to congregate therein between the hours of eleven o'clock at night and six o'clock of the following morning, and any person convicted of violating this section shall be liable to a fine of one hundred dollars or imprisonment for a term not exceeding sixty days or both.

Sec. 20. That no person licensed to sell spirituous or fermented liquors shall suffer or permit in his bar-room or any other room in which spirituous or fermented liquors are sold by him, or in any adjoining room connected therewith, any musical performance of any kind, vocal or instrumental, or both, or any mechanical music, or any acting, dancing, juggling, slight of hand, boxing, wrestling, or any similar performance, show or exhibition.

Sec. 21. Every person licensed to sell spirituous or fermented liquors shall so arrange the doors, windows and partitions of his bar-room or saloon that a full and unobstructed view of the interior thereof, including the bar, may be had from the street through the doors or windows, or both, between the hours of 11 p. m. each and every Saturday and 6 a. m. the following Monday. And no window, blind, screen, partition, curtain or other article shall be so left or placed as to prevent between the hours named the full and unobstructed view from the street of the interior of said saloon or barroom.

Sec. 22. No person licensed to sell spirituous or fermented liquors shall at any time sell or dispose of spirituous or fermented liquors from any bar that cannot, between the hours named in Section 21, be plainly seen from the streets.

Sec. 23. Every violation of any of the provisions of the three next preceding sections of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding sixty days or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 24. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed; provided that no offense committed and no liability or penalty incurred previous to the time when this ordinance shall go into effect, shall be discharged or affected by anything in this ordinance contained; and all proceedings and prosecution for such offenses, liabilities and penalties shall be instituted or proceeded with as the case may be in all respects as if the ordinance had not been adopted.

MAHOMET TEWFIK.

Personal Facts Concerning the Late Khedive of Egypt.

Mahomet Tewfik, the dead khedive, succeeded his father, the exiled Ismail I., now living in Paris. Tewfik was born November 19, 1852. He married (January 10, 1873,) Princess Eminely, daughter of El Hamy Pasha, who has borne him a son, Prince Abbas. The late khedive was the sixth ruler of the dynasty of Mahemet Ali, appointed governor of Egypt in 1806, who made himself in 1811 absolute master of the country by force of arms, and whose position was recognized by the imperial decree of 1841, issued under the guarantee of the five great European powers, which established the hereditary succession to the throne of Egypt under the same rules as those of the throne of Turkey. In 1866 the sultan agreed to make the succession to the throne direct from father to son, instead of descending, after the Turkish law, to the eldest heir. In consideration of this favor the khedive agreed to raise the annual tribute to the sultan's civil list from $1,880,000 to $3,600,000. The late khedive, by a wise administration of his government, won general respect both in his own country and among foreign nations. Notwithstanding the law allowed him four wives he had but one. While the country is nominally a dependency of the sultan of Turkey, the khedive has been completely under British influence.

Second-Hand Teeth.

Of all the odd trades in New York city that unearthed by a Telegram reporter the other day is the most peculiar. On a sidewalk stand in Vesey street, below Church, a shrewd dealer had displayed a heap of second-hand artificial teeth. In reply to an inquiry he said: "Yes; at times I sell a great many sets of these teeth. Where I mostly get them is at pawnbrokers' sales. I buy them for ten, twenty and thirty cents, and sell them sometimes for three dollars. I have had old men and old women—poor people, of course—walk up to my stand, pick out a set, examine then try them, and immediately purchase, saying that they were fitted better than a dentist could suit them. An old man purchased an upper set from me last winter, and he was so well pleased with them that he brought his wife here last week to get a set. I had none at the time, and he promised to call this week. A person might as well save a few dollars in buying teeth as in any other way. Take them home, wash them, and they are just as good as new—in fact, better, for they have been 'broken in.'"

THE GREAT COMBINE

A Possibility that the Coal Deal May be Upset.

THE LEASE SAID TO BE ILLEGAL.

But a Reading Official Says There is Not a Single Point Against It.

The Best Legal Talent Employed and the Points Carefully Considered Before the Negotiations Were Begun--A. J. Cassatt, of the Pennsylvania, Says the Reading Lease is a Clear Violation of the Constitution of the State.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 13.—The consummation of the great anthracite coal combination continues to be the absorbing topic of conversation in financial circles in connection with the rumor that Attorney-General Hensel intends to go into court and attempt to prevent the combination. The opinion is generally expressed that no legal obstacles can be placed in the way of the combination. President McLeod of the Reading railroad is not in the city. Another official of the Reading said:

"You can rest assured that all the legal points were carefully considered before negotiations were begun. We had the best legal advice obtainable, and there is not a single point that can be brought against the combination."

A. J. Cassatt, one of the directors of the Pennsylvania railroad company, declared the Reading leases to be a clear violation of the Constitution of the State.

"I think," he said, "that this is the most audacious and most impudent defiance of the law and the Constitution of the State that has ever been attempted in Pennsylvania. It is not possible that the people who have made this gigantic combination can have forgotten the result of the litigation growing out of the proposed purchase by the Pennsylvania railroad company of the South Penn road and the Beech Creek road several years ago.

"In this case the Bedford & Bridgeport Railroad, a corporation controlled by the Pennsylvania road, was used as a medium for the purchase; but as soon as the intention became known the attorney-general of the State, under the direction of the Governor, interposed and applied to the courts for an injunction restraining the Bedford & Bridgeport Railroad and the Pennsylvania Railroad from consummating the purchase, setting up that provisions of the Constitution of the State which prohibits any railroad corporation from leasing, purchasing, or in any way acquiring the control of a competing line.

"A lot of litigation ensued, with the result that the State won at every point, and the Bedford & Bridgeport and the Pennsylvania Railroad were enjoined directly or indirectly, or in any way, carrying out the intended purchase or control.

"In the reports of the Reading's transactions we are informed, first, that the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, a company that competes at a hundred different points and in a thousand different ways with the Reading, is leased to that company; second, that the Central Railroad of New Jersey, whose lines run parallel and in sight of the Lehigh Valley from Phillipsburg to Wilkesbarre, is leased to a little New Jersey corporation created by the Reading Railroad Company and now owned and controlled by that company, unless the control has been constructively parted with for the purpose of giving some color of legality to the lease.

"Here is an attempt to create a monopoly of almost the entire anthracite output of the State, which amounts to 40,000,000 tons per annum, and puts it in the power of one man to fix the price of fuel used by every household in the State."

When asked whether the Pennsylvania railroad company would institute legal proceedings to prevent the deal from being carried out, Mr. Cassatt said he knew nothing about that, but he then added:

"It happens, fortunately that the Governor of the State is the same Governor who so promptly took action against the Pennsylvania railroad in the case referred to."

To suppose the Governor would not now act would be to suspect that Gov. Pattison would fail in his plain duty, and he (Cassatt) was not willing to suppose anything of the kind.

HUNTING FOR HURLBURT.

English Detectives Said to Have Traced Him to Mexico.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The Scotland Yard detectives have been able to trace the fugitive journalist, Mr. Hurlbert, defendant in the Gladys-Evelyn breach of promise case, to a little known part of Mexico, and officers are now industriously working on his trail and keeping the London office thoroughly posted as to his movements.

The absurd quandary in which Mr. Hurlburt has placed one of the great law officers of the Crown by engaging his services in the defence, and the ridiculous story he brought forward as to a mysterious Doppel-Ganger, whom he called Wilfred Murray, are probably at the bottom of the activity of the detectives.

To Remove Riggin's Remains.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.— Application has been made to the State Department by the family of Riggin, who was killed by the Valparaiso mob, to have his body recovered from Chili. The law in most of the South American countries prohibits the disinterment of bodies once buried until the lapse of a given number of years, which differ in the length of time in the several countries. The State Department is taking steps to comply with the request of Riggins' family, and have his remains brought to the United States.

The Girl Is Thought to Be on Her Way Here in Male Attire.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Miss Kate Evanson of Reading, 18 years old, has suddenly and mysteriously disappeared, and her family and friends are in great distress, seeking her in all directions, so far without success.

Kate left her home ostensibly to return to school at Bristol. She has been traced as far as Gloucester, where she left the train. On the arrival of a later train at Mitcheldean, ten miles from Gloucester, the guard found a complete suit of girl's attire on the floor of a first-class carriage.

The police have learned that Kate purchased men's clothes at Gloucester, and stated that she was going to Hereford. It is believed that she was making her way to Liverpool where she intended taking a steamship for America.

Her schoolmates say that Miss Evanson was of a wild and adventurous disposition, a great reader of romances, and longed to see the world; but it is not known that she confided to any one of them her present intentions.

The police are watching the steamships at Liverpool. No one answering the girl's appearance, even in her disguise, has been discovered. The police are confident that she has not left the country and that they will soon be able to find and restore the missing girl to her distracted parents.

TO START A CIRCUS.

Four Boys Steal $309 to Buy White Rats, Elephants, Rabbits, etc.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 13.—Four remarkable criminals appeared in the Court of Criminal Correction. When the cases were called, four ragged urchins responded. They were charged with burglary and larceny. The ring leader of the gang, a dirty-faced, red-haired boy, was the spokesman for the young criminals.

"Did you break into a man's house and steal $309?" asked the Court.

"Yes, sir;" frankly replied the boy.

"Now tell me why," said the Court.

The boy started to cry, but finally stammered out that they wanted to start a circus and they needed the money to buy some white rats, some elepeants, some rabbits, and a few more things which they thought necessary for the circus business.

The Court ordered the charge of burglary withdrawn and one of larceny substituted, so that the quartette may be sent to the House of Refuge, instead of State prison.

SUSPECTED OF KILLING DUNHAM

The Police Are Now on the Track of Another Man.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 13.—A detective from New York has given information to the local police about the Dunham murder, and they have been searching for Patrick Byrnes, a man about 30 years of age, who has been living with Mrs. Dunham since the murder of her husband.

He is of medium height and wears a heavy mustache, and is supposed to be the man who called at the side door of the Belleville road house on the night of the Dunham murder to see Mrs. Dunham.

It may be that Mrs. Dunham will also be arrested, but if she attempts to leave this will also be done, as she is almost imprisoned now, a detective being on guard all the time.

Fuller, who is held at police headquarters, is no longer regarded as the man who shot Dunham, and he may be released at any time.

The Wrecked Elder.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The weather could not be finer for the work of salvage than it has been at Atherfield for two or three days. Six hundred tons of cargo have been removed from the Elder, but the steamer seems to be no nearer getting afloat than when it was fully loaded. The local experts in regard to wrecks do not think it possible that the Elder can be floated, but Captain Heincke is still hopeful and resolute, and says that he expects to save his vessel yet. While his pluck is admired, he is almost alone in his confidence. The powerful pumps in use do not seem to lessen the inflow of water.

Fate of a Bank Wrecker's Family.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 13.—In the Harper-Baldwin case in the Circuit Court, it was developed incidentally that Mrs. H. Harper, wife of the Fidelity Bank wrecker, is in the depths of poverty. She finds it difficult to provide food for her two children. It was generally supposed she had secreted a large sum, but it is proved she did not. This suit is really to decide to whom a $3,000 note, given by Ammi Baldwin to Mrs. Harper, shall be paid. She claims it is a personal debt. The Fidelity receiver claims it for creditors. Its loss would be Mrs. Harper's utter ruin.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 13.—A State convention of colored Republicans is called to meet at Annapolis, March 18, to consider ways to secure proportionate numerical representation in the State delegation to the National Republican Convention.

JAMES FAIR'S DEATH

Did Bi-Chloride of Gold Kill the Young Man?

SO HIS PHYSICIANS DECLARE.

He Was an Inordinate Drinker and Tried Many Schemes to Break the Habit.

Some Time Ago He Had His Palate Hypnotized and Imagination Took the Place of Whiskey, But His Old Craving Returned and He Tried the Bi-chloride of Gold Treatment, Which Affected His Heart and Hastened Death.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 13.—The death of James G. Fair, jr., is attributed by his doctors directly to bi-chloride of gold treatment.

Fair had a superabundance of flesh and and had shown signs of fatty degeneration of the heart. He drank inordinately and was always trying new schemes to cure the liquor inhit.

Not long ago he had his palate hypnotized and force of imagination took the place of whiskey for a few weeks, but when the appetite returned he drank worse than ever.

The Keeley cure came along and young "Jimmie" was among the first to try it. He declared it had effected a cure, but his friends noticed his listlessness.

Now the doctors say stychnia, which enters so largely into the so-called bichloride treatment, affected his heart and hastened death.

His younger brother, Charles, is also a dipsomaniac, who has been sent on a long sea voyage several times, but nothing seems able to eradicate the desire for whiskey.

Ex-Senator Fair has more ready money than any one in Frisco. His real estate is worth no less than $30,000,000. He is piling up millions with no heir whom he can trust to manage his great fortune when he leaves it.

FRANCE AND RUSSIA CONSPIRE.

They Want the Sultan to Insist on the Khedive Going to Constantinople.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—A dispatch from Vienna says that Khedive Abbas requires that the Sultan shall send him a firman formally recognizing and confirming his authority, and that Abbas has sent a message to that effect to Constantinople.

The Sultan's reply has been that the Khedive must come in person to receive the firman.

To this Abbas objects, as he thinks the Sultan might take occasion to extort some concession. It is claimed that France and Russia are intriguing against Great Britain at the Sultan's court, and have inspired the course of that potentate in regard to the Khedive, and that the issue has become a trial of strength between the powers concerned.

Wanted Green Goods—Got a Brick.

MONTREAL, Feb. 13.—The "green goods" men of New York have of late been flooding this province with circulars offering $5,000 worth of counterfeit money for $1,000. A number of inhabitant of the interior got together and raised $1,000, with which one of them went to New York to bring back the counterfeit in exchange. While returning the delegate acted so suspiciously with his parcel at Rouses' Point, that a customs officer instituted an investigation. The package was opened and found to contain a common red brick. The victim was permitted to continue his journey home.

Wreck on the T. & O. C.

LANCASTER, O., Feb. 13.—Information has been recsied from Pleasantville, eight miles from this city, of a wreck on the Toledo & Ohio Central road at that point. An engine drawing a train of cars loaded with merchandise jumped the track near the station, instantly killing the engineer and fireman, and fatally injuring a brakeman. The train was telescoped and the cars heaped together, forming one big mass of wreckage.

French Art Exhibit at the Fair.

PARIS, Feb. 13—The Committee on the Chicago World's Fair has decided that before the committee will give consent and make arrangements for a French art exhibit at the Fair, the American World's Fair authorities must guarantee that there will be no trouble, such as there was at the Philadelphia Centennial Exhibition, before the intended exhibits were officially accepted.

A Cargo of 6,000 Tons.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 13.—The Interstate Transportation company's towboat J. P. Jackson has just arrived from Vicksburg with the largest lot of cotton seed ever hauled at one time by one boat. The cargo consists of 101,000 sacks of cotton seed and 500 bales of cotton, making a total of 6,000 tons, which, if hauled by a railroad, would load 500 cars with the average weight of twelve tons each, or nearly twelve trains of thirty-five cars each.

GEN. BOOTH'S ARRIVAL.

Enthusiastic Salvationists Welcome Their Returned Leader.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Animated scenes prevailed at Waterloo, Victoria and Paddington railway stations, from whence thousands of Salvationists, some in uniform and some without, but all distinguished by the same degree of enthusiasm, started in special trains to meet Gen. Booth on his return from his tour in Eastern countries.

The height of ambition of the vast majority of them seemed to be to sing the Salvation hymn with all the voice they possessed, and to shake their tambourines and sound their triangles as an accompaniment. There was no hitch whatever in their departure.

Gen. Booth came overland from Brindisi to Cherbourg in company with Mr. Bremyell Booth, who went to Brindisi to meet him.

The general left Cherbourg for Southampton in a specially chartered steamboat, which arrived at Cherbourg from England with Mr. Herbert Booth, Commissioner Booth-Tucker and Mrs. Booth-Tucker, Commissioner Cadman, Commissioner Castleton, Commissioner Howard, Col. Nicol, Col. Dowdle, six of the leading officers of the army, on board to meet the general.

In the meantime Salvationsts from most parts of the country poured into Southampton in order to give the General a rousing reception. Special excursions were run from London, Brighton, Portsmouth, Yeovil, Plymouth, Exeter, and other towns.

As the Salvationists reached Southampton they went on board large steamships in waiting. Of these steamships there were twelve each able to carry at least 1,000 persons. The steamships, in fleet form, sailed down the Selent as far as Calshot Castle, to await Gen. Booth's special boat.

When the General's steamship was sighted, the others formed up in two lines, and, with bands playing, colors flying and a general Hallelujah going up to heaven, the whole procession formed in double line after the General and escorted him into Southampton harbor.

Those of the Salvationists who did not go afloat awaited Gen. Booth at Southampton.

Gen. Booth is well, but weary after his journey. The display of rockets in honor of his arrival resembled a naval review.

RECEIVER FAY'S REPORT.

Startling Evidence of Fraud Against Bay State League Officers.

BOSTON, Feb. 13.—C. K. Fay, Receiver of the Bay State League, an independent orders has made his report to Judge Barker in the Supreme Court.

He says the evidence of fraud and dishonesty on the part of the present Supreme officers is startling. These are: E. M. Harlow, Supreme President; J. W. Hamilton, Supreme Secretary and H. B. French, Supreme Treasurer. These men for a valuable consideration paid to the original officers, were allowed to take their places.

"The original certificate holders," says the report, "consisted largely of poor working people, a majority of them women with little knowledge of money matters who have been wantonly and cruelly cheated by those who took their money, but who as trustees were bound to use it honestly even if the visionary scheme which they presented so plausibly did meet with inevitable disaster. It is my firm belief that French and Hamilton bought their official positions in this corporation for the express purpose of plundering the certificate holders."

Mr. Fay has recovered assets amounting to $294,600.

Mrs. Barnaby's Money.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 13.—In an interview with Colonel Van Slyck, who has charge of the estate of the late Mrs. Barnaby, he stated, in answer to a question as to the truth of statement that Col. Ballou had found $10,000 in a banking institution belonging to the estate, which Dr. Graves had deposited, that he had never supposed there was any of Mrs. Barnaby's money in existence except that turned over to him by Dr. Graves. He said, further, that no money of the kind mentioned had been turned over to him, and if he had imagined it existed undiscovered he would have set out to find it.

DAMON AND PYTHIAS

James White and His Bosom Friend Spencer.

THEIR MANY EXTRAVAGANCES.

They Had a Common Purse and Spent from $25,000 to $50,000 a Year.

White Had a Fortune of Half a Million, and Left Spencer an Annuity of $10,000 a Year—The Executors of the Will File an Accounting and Say That All They Can Find is $2,600—Spencer Says He Will Sue for His Rights.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13 —The executors of the estate of James Moss White have filed an accounting of the estate, and thereby cut off Harvey Spencer, jr., to whom was bequeathed a legacy of $10,000.

James Moss White, a Princeton graduate, was a young man of extravagant tastes, which he was enabled to gratify on a fortune of half a million.

While in Lenox, in 1881, he met Harvey Spencer, jr., and they became warm friends. They traveled together all over the world, and enjoyed the delights of Paris in each other's company. Under Spencer's influence White became more quiet in his tastes, and settled down to take life in a more serious way. Still, he spent money freely.

White's uncle, David Wolfe Bishop, finally induced him to sign a trust deed on all his property. This he did because he needed ready money. Then Mr. Bishop told Spencer he would allow him $4,000 a year for his services in looking out for White. But this proved inadequate. The young men spent all the way from $25,000 to $50,000 a year, and had everything they could buy, including a $30,000 yacht, and they got into debt besides.

Then White proposed to share his bank account with Spencer. The latter did not object, and White told his banker to honor Spencer's checks for any amount, as half his funds hereafter were to be Spencer's.

Then the two began to live in most extravagant style. They had expensive clothes, two establishments where they entertained lavishly, horses innumerable and everything that tends to make a young man feel that he is enjoying this life.

One day, however, White caught a cold, and before he could realize it his lungs were congested. Then an abscess formed on his lungs. It was necessary to perform an operation, and as there was a chance of its being fatal, White was told to make his will and settle his affairs.

This he did. The will was drawn on March 21, 1888. It provided that all debts outstanding in the names of White and Spencer should be paid out of the estate, and that Spencer should receive an annuity of $10,000. John Jay White was the residuary legatee.

March 25 had been set for the surgical operation. White was in good spirits and no evil result was looked for. He had a fine constitution, and had never been ill in his life. He was walking to the operating table, when in an instant a fit of coughing seized him. The abscess burst and he was choked to death in the presence of the doctors who had come to rid him of his trouble.

Spencer had the body of his friend embalmed and brought to this country. Then he heard the will read making him one of the legatees. But Mr. Bishop informed him that there was nothing for him, as White had, by the deed of trust, surrendered everything he owned.

Since then Spencer has tried in vain to get the money left by the will. He urges that White was of unsound mind when the the deed of trust was drawn. Mrs. White, mother of the dead man, refuses to see Spencer, and the executors of the will have put him off time after time, he alleges.

Spencer's lawyer, William R. Wilder of the firm of Rudd, Hunt & Wilder, says the time for action is now at hand. The accounting which was filed make no mention of Mr. Wilder's client, and does not deal with the bulk of the estate. The sum of $2,600 is all that is mentioned in the accounting, and that is all that the executors will admit that White left when he died.

Spencer is a young man about town, living at the Harper, 234 Fifth avenue. He says he will sue for his rights.

THEY ARE RECONCILED.

Col. Lindley's Illness Ends the Difference Between Himself and His Wife.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 13 —Last December Col. A. F. Lindley, of the 150th Regiment, and a leading merchant of this city, separated from his wife.

The quarrel was bitter and it culminated in the wife applying for a divorce, which action was pending until a day or two ago. Colonel Lindley was taken ill and was placed in the Hudson River State Hospital for the insane. He became very ill and sent for his wife, who went at once to his bedside, where a reconciliation was effected.

Mrs. Lindley is now in constant attendance upon her husband, who is expected to recover.

The affair has excited considerable interest hereabouts because of the bitterness of the estrangement, stories of which at one time abounded in the newspapers.

IT'S PRESIDENT FOUNTAIN NOW.

The Wide-awake Grant Club Has a Lincoln Celebration.

The U. S. Grant club of North Plainfield had a rousing meeting last night in honor of Lincoln's birthday. There was a good attendance, and much enthusiasm was manifested. During the business session of the evening the following officers were elected:

President—R. M. Fountain.
First Vice-president—Harrison Coddington.
Second Vice-president—L. B. Woolston.
Secretary—H. J. Martin.
Treasurer—H. Newton Spencer.

Mayor Place of the borough delivered a stirring eulogy on the life of Lincoln, and remarks were made by Messrs. Fountain and Goodwin. Excellent music was furnished by Mr. Spencer and his son Harry on the Cremona and guitar, and by a quartette consisting of Joe Martin, Elias Southard, Robert Schiereth, and Calvin Sutton.

Fancy Dress Sociable.

A fancy dress sociable was given to Miss Regina Nash, at her residence, 22 Prospect avenue, last evening, by the Misses Hattie Putnam, Annie Marshall, and Ada Wagner. The evening passed most charmingly. A feature of the event was the piano playing of Mrs. Buckley, after which a fine supper was served, and dancing and games were indulged in. Among those present were: Miss Kingston, Miss F. Ford, Miss F Lodge, Miss B. Bowman, Miss E. Teller, and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Rockafellow.

Bishop Ninde Will Dedicate It.

The new Methodist Episcopal chapel located on the corner of Somerset street and Park place, will be dedicated to-morrow by Bishop Ninde, one of the most scholarly and eloquent ministers of the Methodist church. The Bishop will preach at 10:30 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. A platform meeting will be held at 3 p. m., with short addresses by ministers and laymen. SIX LITTLE ONES LEFT FATHERLESS.

Another Frightful and Fatal Accident to a Railroad Brakeman.

John Shay, a brakeman, died in Muhlenberg Hospital this afternoon of injuries received on the Jersey Central railroad at Bound Brook last night. He was tightening up a brake on top of a box car when the chain broke and he toppled over and fell to the ground with his body across the rails. The wheels ground his shoulder and one of his hands to a pulp, and he was otherwise cruelly mutilated. The accident occurred at 9:45. At 11:40 the sufferer was brought to this city. His death occurred at 1:40 this afternoon. Shay was 40 years of age, and leaves a wife and six children at Hampton Junction.

400 WILL CONTEST HER TITLE.

Maybe 385 Will be Queen of the Road No Longer.

Engine 385 has a rival for the title of "Queen of the Road". It is engine 400. She made her first appearance in Plainfield this morning, and followed the 10:04 to New York, with a train of 35 box cars. 400 is built on the same lines as 385, with the same compound cylinders for the use of high and low pressure. But she has six driving wheels which will help her to cling closer to the track, and in that respect she has a very great advantage over the present "Queen". The results of the tests that are now being made of 400's abilities, are awaited with intense interest by every man in the employ of the road. It is but a few weeks since 385 proved she was the fastest engine in the world, yet already a rival has sprung up and the excitement that the former created in the breasts of the railroad men all over the country, will be renewed and greatly increased by the news of 400's appearance.

Leidy to Play for Plainfield.

Manager Keller of the Crescent League ball team, has signed Leidy who was Somerville's crack left fielder last season. Thus is added another pillar of strength to uphold Plainfield in her struggle for the Central New Jersey base-ball championship of 1892. There is not a safer or surer fielder among all the semi-professionals in the country. Leidy is also a great coacher along the line.

Manager Keller has released McIndoe and it is probable that he will go to Westfield.

Turn Out and Fight the Race-track Schemers.

Everyone who loves his home and hates the evil influences which tend to draw his sons away from his fireside, is invited to attend the mass-meeting at Music Hall to-morrow afternoon at 4:15 to protest against licensing gambling and betting at race-tracks. Eminent speakers will address the meeting, which has been called as a result of the clergymen's conference in this city yesterday.

—Because of the Melopoia rehearsal this evening, the Crescent Avenue choir will hold their's to-morrow morning at 10

—C. Schepflin & Co. are to be congratulated on the success they have achieved in their new retail department. One of their latest improvements, that evidences prosperity, is the construction of a large double row of counters extending way from the front to the back of the store, for displaying goods. One thousand pair of trousers may here be displayed Jeremiah VanWinkle, jr., is the courteous and efficient manager in charge.

Mrs. Nancy Frost, Aged 108.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Feb. 13.—Mrs. Nancy Allison Frost is dead near Marietta, aged 108.

Minister Porter's Return.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 13.—Minister to Italy A. G. Porter, in an interview, states that he will not return to Italy until ordered to do so by the Department of State. When asked if he anticipated this order he said that he believed his return was contingent upon the return of the Italian Minister to this country.

The Game Laws Convention.

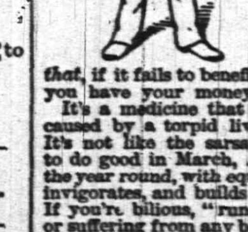
SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 13.—The State convention of sportsmen to consider the question of codifying the Game laws opened here with a large attendance of sportsmen from all sections of the State, representing the leading sporting organizations, under the presidency of Mr. Andrew White.

To Go to the West Indies.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Mr. Secretary Tracy has cabled Admiral Gherardi at Montevideo authorizing him to return with the Philadelphia and Concord to go to the West Indies.

The Swiss-Italian Treaty Fails.

ZURICH, Feb. 13.—The attempts to negotiate a treaty of commerce between Italy and Switzerland have failed.



No body advertises that his blood medicine doesn't amount to much. They're all of them "the best." But there's only one of them that's good enough to guarantee—and that is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. With that, if it fails to benefit or cure, in any case, you have your money back.

It's a medicine that cures, in all diseases caused by a torpid liver or impure blood. It's not like the sarsaparillas, which claim to do good in March, April, and May. All the year round, with equal benefit, it cleanses, invigorates, and builds up the entire system. If you're bilious, "run-down," or dyspeptic, or suffering from any blood-taint or disorder, that's the medicine you need. For the worst forms of Scrofula, and in the most stubborn Skin and Scalp Diseases, such as Salt-rheum, Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, and all kindred ailments, nothing can equal it as a perfect and permanent remedy. The genuine sold for $1.00. Beware of spurious imitations or dilutions, offered at less prices.

Delinquent Tax Sale.

GREENSBURG, Ind., Feb. 13.—That part of the Cincinnati, Wabash & Michigan railroad company lying in this county has been purchased by a syndicate of Greensburg capitalists at a delinquent tax sale, the delinquency amounting to over $5,000. The non-payment of the taxes was an oversight on the part of the company, but they will have to pay the penalty.

Snow Piled Ten Feet High.

BRADFORD, Pa., Feb. 13.—The worst snow storm known in years is prevailing throughout Northwestern Pennsylvania and Western New York. On the line of the Rochester & Pittsburg Railroad, between this city and Rochester, snow is piled up to a height of ten feet. All the southbound trains from Rochester and Buffalo are snowbound near Ashford Junction.

Navy Department Payments.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The Navy Department has made the sixteenth payment of $53,880 on truiser No. 6 to the Union Iron Works, of San Francisco, and the fourth payment of $74,965—one-fifth of the contract price—to William Sellers & Co., of Philadelphia, for turning and boring lathes.

Beat the Dumb-bell Record.

BATH, Me., Feb. 13.—Mr. Cocture, weighing only 149 pounds, has in public beaten the world's record by putting up a 110-pound dumb-bell from shoulder to arms' length above his head twenty-seven times in succession.

Killed the Brakeman.

AUBURN, N. Y., Feb. 13.—A snow plow ran into the rear of a freight train on the Auburn and Ithaca branch of the Lehigh Valley railroad at Aurora, and killed Milo Smith a brakeman who was in the caboose of the freight train.

Good Thing for Him.

"Chappie tried some of his jokes on Miss Keene last night."

"And she snubbed him, I suppose?"

"She gave him a piece of her mind."

"Gave him a piece of her mind, did she? I thought he looked brighter than usual this evening."—N. Y. Press.

An Unfortunate Accident.

Bob Bunkum (actor)—Failure? I should think it was! Why, the whole play was ruined!

Fair Hostess—How was that?

Bob Bunkum—Why, at the end of the last act a steam pipe burst and hissed me off the stage.—Comic.

Her Vocation Exactly.

Miss Flypp—Do you know, I have decided to become a lecturer.

Miss Elder—You don't say!

Miss Flypp—Yes. Just think! All one has to do is to go on the rostrum and just talk and talk and talk.—Judge.

Strictly Cash.

Customer—I want a clock to run thirty days.

Jeweler (politely)—I'm sorry to disappoint you, sir, but we conduct an exclusively cash business. — Jewelers' Weekly.

Courage.

Do not despair, oh loving heart,
If a maiden now says no.
Her thoughts may undergo a change
In twenty years or so.
—Judge.

What Wonder Is It?

The naked hills lie wanton to the breeze,
The fields are nude, the groves unfrocked.
Bare are the shivering limbs of shameless trees;
What wonder is it that the corn is shocked?
—A Jeffersonian Student.

A Coy Acknowledgement.

Walker Flohr—Is anybody waiting upon you, miss?

Psyche Wayback (blushing)—Yes, sir; Jake Skinner is my steady company.—Puck.

FOR PURE DEMOCRACY!

A committee on organization having in charge the popular movement to preserve the interests and integrity of the Democratic party in the State of New Jersey, held a meeting at the office of W. J. Curtis, 45 Wall street, New York, on the 9th inst., and determined to effect a State organization in New Jersey and to equip every county in the State with a committee to carry on the work against machine domination in the State. Those present were George H. Yeaman, of Madison, chairman of the committee on organization; Gustav Pollack, of Summit; George W. Campbell, jr., of Millburn; Charles T. Root, of Short Hills; George A. Miller, of Montclair; Dr. R. G. Stanwood, of Newark; W. S. McKean, of Asbury Park; W. J. Curtis, of Summit, secretary of the committee, and P. Steavenson, of Ridgewood. On the recommendation of chairman Yeaman the committee adopted the following

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

"That tariff reform, as advocated by the Democratic party and approved by an immense majority of the people, should be the issue upon which that party will go before the country at the coming Presidential election.

"That to abandon the advocacy of tariff reform would be an act of political cowardice, would violate the promise made to the people, would forfeit their confidence, and would be a political blunder inviting and deserving defeat.

"That tariff reform will be best accomplished by those having earnest convictions on the subject and who have in the past risked and incurred defeat in its advocacy, and not by those who halted and used doubtful phrases about it, nor by any management that depends on the mere tactics of machine politics inspired and rewarded by the spoils system.

"That the unlimited free coinage of legal tender silver would, if adopted, bring business and financial disaster to the country, and its advocacy will insure the defeat of any party making it an issue in the Presidential election.

"We pledge ourselves to use all proper exertions to have the substance of these earnest political convictions expressed by the National convention of the Democratic party; and, to insure the nomination of a candidate who, by courage, candor, and definite statement of principles, and in the opinion of the people has become the rightful and safe leader in such a movement, our choice be under all circumstances Grover Cleveland.

"We pledge ourselves to resist by all proper means any attempt to defeat, prejudge, or misstate the wishes of the great masses of the Democratic party, and to prevent the nomination of candidates, who, if they have any opinions or convictions on these great questions, have lacked either the capacity or the moral and political courage to state those opinions in such form that other people could understand them; and we further pledge ourselves to attend primaries, promote the expression of public opinion through mass-meetings, enlist the co-operation of such political organizations as have the true welfare of the people at heart, and disseminate sound political literature among the masses."

Although this movement is but a few days old, it has already elicited more than two hundred letters from representative Democrats throughout the State, wishing the work God-speed and pledging active co-operation.

It Was Decided Last Night That America Will Decay.

The High School Lyceum gave its first public entertainment, last evening, in Assembly Hall. After a few remarks by the president, reviewing the work of the society, Robert M. Clark was introduced and delivered with credit a selection from Webster on the Hungarian patriot, Kossuth. A debate on the question Whether America will decay or not, was then proceeded with. The arguments for both affirmative and negative were well taken and each speaker deserves to be congratulated for both the ease and force with which he presented his side of the argument. While the judges were agreeing upon a verdict, a quartete of High school boys rendered a few songs. The programme was concluded by an original oration on Abraham Lincoln by Ellery C. Leonard, which was most creditable expressed and remarkably well delivered The judges decided the debate for the affirmative.

What's His Name?

[From The New Brunswick News.]

The Plainfield PRESS is responsible for the allegation that Gen. E. Burd Grubb will resign as minister to Spain, come home and have another hustle for the governorship. He might as well save himself the trouble, because Middlesex has got a mortgage on that governorship and is going to foreclose.

Rhyme and Reason.

"A swarm of bees in May
Is worth a load of hay;
A swarm of bees in June
Is worth a silver spoon"—

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 20, 1890.

Having been a sufferer for sometime past with billiousness, &c, I was recommended to use Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills. I did so, and am pleased to find that they are as recommended, a cure for those ailments. I therefore subscribe myself cheerfully in recommending them to any who may suffer with those complaints.—E. JERSEY CENTRAL CONDUCTORS.

No. 2.—Charles S. Tuck—The Dog Fancier.

A popular train to New York for Plainfield men, is scheduled to leave the North avenue station at 10:04 a. m. The crew in charge of the same, returning leave New York at 7 p. m. Of the strict attention to duty and the rights of the traveling public exhibited by this crew from conductor down, columns might be written. From Plainfield to Jersey City this is one of the fastest trains on the road, the Philadelphia flyer immediately following being a close second.

It is of common occurrence that this train running east makes mile after mile from Netherwood to Roselle in 40 seconds each, which means 90 miles per hour. Such confidence does the conductor have in the clear-headedness of the engine driver, that to all appearances he pays no attention to the rate of speed at which they are running, but to a careful observer he will be seen to glance over his glasses, while lifting tickets, at objects outside his train—thus often neglecting to respond to the greetings of his friends. So pre-occupied is he with the responsibilities resting on him and by his anxiety to "make time", that he is at times called a crank, but no one riding on his train has yet been heard to express the slightest dissatisfaction with his management, excepting perhaps occasionally a "beat", or a grumbler about his running into stations ahead of the scheduled time. This latter peculiarity is noticed almost daily, but whether by reason of the indicated time being too slow for him or for other reasons it is impossible to say. In any event, it is certainly a pleasure to travel on a train in charge of such a man, who by his careful judgment, and ability to overcome obstacles where time is a factor, has justly earned the title of "Cannon Ball Tuck".

In his leisure moments Mr. Tuck is engaged in breeding dogs from stock of recorded pedigree, and his judgment as to physical disabilities in those animals is unquestionably No. 1. The other day a gentleman had a Newfoundland dog that seemed to be ill. He consulted Mr. Tuck, who promptly prescribed. Now that gentleman has no dog.

The Press Knew it Before His Wife

[From The New York World.]

The Plainfield PRESS says Gen. E. Burd Grubb will resign the Spanish Ministry in April and come back to New Jersey to run for Governor again on the Republican ticket. The news is presented as a despatch from Philadelphia and is claimed to be authorative. There is one fatal feature of the story, however, which to the thoughtful person robs it of probability. The despatch concludes with the statement that Gen. Grubb has not even told his family of his decision. It is incredible that during the first year of his married life Gen. Grubb can have advanced so far in domestic diplomacy as to keep his secrets to himself.

A Monster Train-house for the Reading.

The new Reading terminal station in Philadelphia is to boast the largest train-house in the world. What is termed the false work of the great arch has already been begun. Its span will be 266 feet, and height from the ground 120 feet. The train-house is to be 553 feet in length. The station proper will be 110 feet in length, making the terminal building 663 feet long. The train-house will be laid out with thirteen tracks at the Market street end, which will be reduced by switches to nine tracks at the Arch street end. The roof will be constructed of iron, copper, and wood.

Westfield and Somerville Base-ball.

O'Neill has been signed to pitch for the Westfield team, after his usual kick for more dollars. Hammill, of last year's Plainfield team, has been signed to play right field. Howe has also been signed and will probably play second base, as it is about decided to release McCabe who covered that position last year. McLaughlin has been released, and a new man will be secured to play left field.—Westfield Standard.

It is understood that Harkins has been re-signed by the Somerville West Ends for the coming season.

Carpet News.

Edsall says his new spring carpets are now arriving, and in a few days he will exhibit the largest and handsomest stock of these goods that he has ever shown. He says he can make it an object to any who need carpets to call and examine his large stock.

Mrs. Clum (eagerly)—And is it a secret?

Mrs. Redrivers—Oh, no; not at all.

Mrs. Clum—I'm so sorry! I did want to tell Mrs. Longjaw.—Judge.

Interested in Natural History.

Mamma—Why did you wish her to take it?

Little Dot—I wanted to see how a cat looked when she made a face.—Good News.

GAMBLING ON HORSES.

Race Tracks Devoted to Bookmakers and Betting.

Pernicious Institutions to Be Found in Almost Every Large City—Why They Are a Menace to Society—Some Pointed Illustrations.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

Betting on horse races is fast becoming the national vice of America. It has led astray more men and women than all other gambling devices combined. Why a horse race cannot be conducted on a strictly legitimate basis, just like baseball and other popular sports, is more than I can see. Thousands of persons attend ball games without ever thinking of betting on the results of the game, but let the same people go to a race and they will put up the last dollar they have on some horse which they think will come in ahead of its competitors.

Unprincipled men who have made human weakness and folly a study have reduced horse racing to a scandal. Almost every large city in the country has at the present time a race course devoted to bookmakers and their victims. The races are a mere cloak. Once in a great while a favorite horse is permitted to win a race, but usually unknown animals come in first. A betting crowd always has a favorite. A few bright young men in the employ of the bookmakers devote their time to giving "tips" to their acquaintances. In a stage whisper such information is conveyed from one race track habitue to the other, and a "favorite" is born. Betting runs all one way. At the close of the race the "favorite" is far behind some inferior animal, and the bookmakers have reaped a golden harvest.

Horse racing that is kept up by the gambling elements is not sport. In the very nature of things there can be nothing honest about it. It is conducted like all other games of chance, to make money for the promoters. Chicago, like every other large city, contains thousands of people who are always searching for a way to make a living without working, and running races over ankle-deep mud, and in cold weather, seem to afford a better opportunity to attain such an end than almost any other form of licensed crime.

The demoralizing effects of unrestricted betting are beginning to be felt in this city in more ways than one. Real estate located in the vicinity of the race tracks has lost much of its value. No one cares to build a home near such dens of iniquity and vice, and it is a noticeable fact that even persons directly interested in these "enterprises" do not care to live in the immediate vicinity of the scene of their financial operations. The races always attract a crowd of rough and loud-mouthed young fellows, painted women and outcasts from society, whose very presence is enough to pollute a neighborhood. Foul language, coarse actions and reckless driving render the surroundings and the streets leading to the tracks unfit for general use; and that no one cares to establish his family in such a vicinity is not surprising.

But while these evils should be sufficient to condemn the races, the hidden influences they exert are far more harmful than the visible tokens of their blightful existence. It will never be known how many young men have been ruined in this city alone during the past season by attending crooked races. A few cases which came under my personal observation lead me to think that the number of victims must be fully one thousand.

A young man connected with one of the largest dry goods firms in a responsible position began to "play the races" early in the season. His first venture returned him a seventy-fold profit, and proved his ruin. He neglected his work to gamble on horses. His employers learned the cause of his continued absence and discharged him. A month later he had lost the savings of three years, had sold his wife's jewelry and diamonds and disposed of his household goods. The close of the season found him a financial and moral wreck, callous alike to the call of duty as well as honor. For years he had been considered a pattern of rectitude. He had enjoyed the confidence of his employers and a large circle of friends and the love of a good woman. His one successful encounter with the bookmakers changed the course of his life. He wanted to get rich without work. Instead of winning, he lost. Then he kept on gambling to make good the deficit. He began to lose regard for truth, became a notorious liar, abused his wife, stripped his home of everything worth having, and sank to the level of a common vagabond. Here is ample material for a novel which might be entitled: "Playing the Races from June Till November." It would be a realistic story, based on actual facts and one whose general circulation might prove a great benefit.

The average daily attendance at city races is said to be four thousand. Fully one-fourth of this number is "broke" at the close of the day's programme. One of the great curses of all species of gambling is that the unlucky player expects to make to-day's losses good to-morrow. But the coveted to-morrow never comes. Instead come debts, peculation, misery and the weeping of women and children.

A pawnbroker who has done business in Chicago for more than twenty years is authority for the statement that never before in the history of the city was the demand for loans so uniform and so steady as during the past racing season. Precious stones and jewelry of every description were offered in such profusion that the money-lenders were actually unable to meet the demand on their bank accounts.

The statement is supplemented by a furniture dealer who sells goods on the installment plan. "I have had to foreclose more chattel mortgages this year than for the past six years combined," said this merchant. "Why? Because scores of the young fellows to whom I sold goods played the races and wouldn't, or couldn't, pay. We hate to take away furniture from customers, and this house never does it when misfortune overtakes a young couple. But when a young fellow begins to bet on horses he's past redemption, and we have to foreclose to save our goods."

URGED TO WIN.

The saddest feature of the last racing season in Chicago was, however, the interest manifested by women. Scores of them attended the races and placed money on the horses. They were losers in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred; and many crooked ways were invented to account to their husbands for missing funds. An instance of how some women are carried away by the gambling mania was exposed in a courtroom a few weeks ago.

The young wife of a hard-working salesman was persuaded to risk a few dollars on a horse race last June. She became infatuated with the game, forsook her husband and child, after disposing of every article of household furniture and every stitch of clothing she could spare. When her means were exhausted she sank to the lowest depths of degradation. The heart-broken husband, for the sake of his child, made several attempts to reclaim the woman, but without success. She staid with him long enough to secure more money with which to try her luck, and finally found her way into society too low to be mentioned in this journal. The affair was to be aired in the divorce courts, but suicide terminated it the day before it was to be heard. Within three months the young woman passed from a state of honored wifehood and motherhood into gambling dens, police courts and a suicide's grave.

It may safely be asserted that the vice of betting is the cause of more misery and licentiousness than are open gambling houses, as many who would never think of entering one of the latter institutions visit race tracks patronized by a sprinkling of respectable people.

The artist has succeeded admirably in depicting a race on a betting track. He shows how the "favorite" is prevented from winning. The good horse rebels against the rudeness of his jockey, but there is too much money at stake to let him come in first. The weakest animal, on the other hand, is urged to win in a way which, while it may be a trifle overdrawn, is nevertheless a truthful expose of the methods employed. In the third picture the reader gets a very fair idea of the condition of the track at some seasons of the year.

Efforts have been made in various cities to close the tracks with which this article deals, and it is to be hoped that sufficient feeling can be worked up to accomplish such an end. Everybody loves to see an honest horse race, but no fair-minded man or woman likes to have noble animals reduced to mere gambling implements, lower in every respect than faro tables or wheels of fortune.

Don't Give It Away.

The guest pushed his plate away and ran his eye down the bill of fare until the item he was looking for caught his eye.

"Waiter," he said, "bring me a glass of half-and-half."

"A bowl, you mean," replied the waiter.

"Well, if that's the way you hand it out here bring me a bowl of it."

The mixture was brought. It looked like milk.

"What's this?" he asked.

"Half-and half, sir."

"Half-and-half of what?"

"Half milk and half cream."

"Thunder!"

"What did you think it was, sir?"

"What did I think it was? What kind of a restaurant is this?"

"This is a W. C. T. U. restaurant, sir."

"Waiter, here is a twenty-five cent cigar. Don't tell any of the boys about this."—Chicago Tribune.

THE TROUBLE WITH WOMEN.

Weak Stomach and Weaker Nerves.

That fluttering! That terrible faint feeling! That load at the stomach! That swelling and distress after meals! That describes it—weak stomach and weak nerves. There is often headache, dull head, rising of gas, billousness, etc. Then follow shattered nerves, sleepless nights and tired waking, until "dragged out, nervous and miserable" is the only way of expressing your feelings. You complain more than ever of these feelings during the Spring owing to the addition of Spring Debility. And yet you can be cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura. This great remedy assists digestion, regulates liver and bowels, tones up the stomach, and makes the nerves strong and vigorous. Use it this Spring for it is the best of Spring Medicines. Purely vegetable and harmless. Druggists, $1.

"I suffered most indescribable pain in my head, pain in my heart, with fluttering, and weak, nervous spells. Often with difficulty I could sleep or rest, and at times was unable to perform my duties. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura, and my improvement has been so rapid that now I sleep soundly, appetite and strength are returning. I thank God and Dr. Greene's Nervura for affording me such relief. "It will always be our family remedy."

MRS. M. WREATH,

A PECULIAR CRAFT.

Pierre Lorillard's Floating Shooting-Box and House-Boat.

A craft has just been completed at the ship-yards of Pusey & Jones, Wilmington, Del., destined for use upon the Indian river as a floating "shooting-box" for its owner, Mr. Pierre Lorillard, and his favored friends.

The vessel is of the "house-boat" type, a style of craft which has been long in favor upon placid English streams, and has much to commend it with American sportsmen. The ordinary house-boat is unprovided with reliable means of propulsion, being dependent either upon the humble mule, a favoring breeze, or a chance tug-boat for a change of scene.

The Caiman, Mr. Lorillard's new boat, has, however, been equipped with two triple-expansion engines of about 250 horse-power, acting upon double propellers, which will swing the craft around the shortest corners in the erratic Floridian waterways. Her length is 96 feet, beam 24 feet 6 inches. The main deck contains the motive power, galley and quarters for the crew and servants. The upper deck is housed, with a considerable open-deck space fore and aft, as well as a companion-way along each side. Forward there is a roomy observation cabin, painted in white and gold and upholstered in olive; upon each side, aft of this apartment, are two ante-rooms, with intermediate bath-rooms. The dining cabin, richly furnished, occupies the after section. Lockers and cabinets for weapons and impedimenta generally are plentiful. Gunning-punts are swung from davits, and every contingency in the life of a sportsman upon a prolonged expedition seems to be provided for.

The Caiman will proceed southward outside as far as Norfolk, although her draught is less than three feet, and thence by the inland waterways available nearly all the distance to Florida, where she will again venture upon the open sea to one of the Indian river inlets.

A Flattering Request.

Servant (from the flat above)—Me lady says as will you let your daughter sing this afternoon?

Lady (much pleased)—Why, certainly. Tell your mistress that I am glad she enjoys it.

Servant—Yes, mum. She expects a visit from the landlord this afternoon, an' she wants some excuse for askin' a reduction in rent.—Judge.

Reminded of Home.

"And now," said the Gotham host, as he rose from the dining-table; "will you step into the drawing-room, and join the ladies?"

"With pleasure," responded the guest from New Orleans; "I always attend the drawings with great regularity."—Puck.

Help from the Clouds.

Bell Boy (excitedly, to hotel clerk)—Lightning has struck through in to 499, sir.

Clerk—Is 499 hurt?

Bell Boy—No, sir. He's all right.

CORNERED BY RATS

Miss Hull's Desperate Battle in a Belfry.

SHE WAS SEVERELY BITTEN.

While Mending a Broken Bell Rope the Rodents Attacked Her.

Armed Only With a Knife She Kept the Rats at Bay Until Help Arrived—Her Rescuer Also Badly Bitten—The Physicians Say It Will Be a Long Time Before She Will Recover from the Effects of the Poison in the Animals' Teeth.

NORTH PLAIN, Conn., Feb. 15.—Miss Lavinia Hull, of Myrtle Hill, three miles north of here, had a narrow escape from death in the Myrtle Hill Baptist Church.

Miss Hull is a sturdy young woman of 18 years, and for three years she has performed the duties of janitor of the church. She has built the fires, swept the floors and rung the bell regularly every week, and the people of the parish are proud of her.

While Miss Hull was ringing the bell for prayer meeting the bell rope suddenly parted. Then she climbed into the belfry, with a lantern, to repair it. When she reached the gloomy place she found that the rope had been gnawed in two by rats near the ceiling.

She began to mend the strands, but had proceeded only a little with her work when she heard a squeaking sound behind her. Looking around she saw a host of shining balls in the darkness.

She knew they were rats and she swung her arm at them, but much to her surprise the animals did not disperse. On the contrary, their number rapidly increased until she was completely surrounded by a ring of gleaming eyes.

The girl became alarmed and prepared to descend to the vestibule of the church, but before she was erect the vicious rodents rushed at her in a body and sprang upon her, lacerating her flesh wherever they could find a place to set their teeth.

Miss Hull had no weapon but a heavy pocket knife with which to defend herself, and she used it to as good advantage as possible, managing to keep the rats away from her face and throat.

Miss Hull possessed a luxuriant growth of hair, which hung in a braid down her back. The braid was completely severed from her head by the rats and her arms and shoulders bled profusely from the wounds made by their teeth.

She tried to reach the trap in the floor from which a ladder led to the vestibule, but failed. She was alone in the church and the nearest house was a quarter of a mile away, but, with a desperate hope that some one would hear her, she began to scream for help.

Luckily, Arthur Rawson was passing, and hearing the girl's cries, rushed into the church and climbed into the belfry. He fought the rats as best he could and drew Miss Hull toward the ladder, which she descended. As soon as she reached the vestibule the animals were frightened away by the light.

In the struggle Rawson was badly bitten. The physicians say that it will be many weeks before Miss Hull fully recovers from the effects of the poison of the rats' teeth.

THE BALTIMORE'S MEN'S CLAIM.

Some of the Sums Demanded Are Very Large, Aggregating $1,305,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 15.—In a few days there will be forwarded to Secretary Blaine the formal claim of the sailors and others of the United States man-of-war Baltimore who were injured in the fight with the mob at Valparaiso.

Some of the sums demanded are very large. The total claim foots up in the neighborhood of $1,305,000. The largest sums are demanded by John Hamilton and Jeremiah Anderson, both coal heavers on the Baltimore at the time the assault was committed.

Hamilton received three bad wounds and thinks that $50,000 is not too much for the Chilian Government to pay for each wound. Anderson has three or more marks as the result of his being in the row, but he says he will be satisfied if he can get hold of $150,000 Chilian money. The other claims vary from $30,000 up to $100,000.

Lawyer F. A. Orr has the cases of twenty of the men. He says he thinks the men are justified in asking the amount of indemnity they have. "If the Chilian Government turns over to the United States $1,000,000, as she should, for this unfortunate affair, why we want it," said the lawyer with a smile.

Searching for Typhus Cases.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 15.—The authorities are searching for a number of immigrants who are supposed to have been passengers on the ship which brought over the typhus victims. Preparations have been made to place them in quarantine in case they are located, but so far no trace of them has been discovered.

Reformed Inebriates.

DWIGHT, Ill., Feb. 15.—The National conventional of reformed inebriates who have been cured by the bichloride of gold treatment is in session. Most of the leading towns in the country are represented by men of prominence, who have been enabled to abjure the liquor habit through the Dwight treatment.

Mexico's Commission.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The Mexican Government has appointed its commission to assist in the work of preparing its representation at the World's Columbian Exposition. It is a very able one, the members being selected especially for the particular part of the work entrusted to their charge, and they will take a personal and professional pride in making the best possible display.

ROSSINI'S CENTENARY

It Will Be Celebrated Throughout Italy and the Continent.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—On the last day of this month the centenary of the birth of Rossini will be celebrated throughout Italy and generally on the Continent.

A committee of leading musicians, including Marchetti, Terziani, Pinelli and Maldura, has been formed in Rome to carry out the arrangements.

The Government has decided to mark the occasion by the publication of the composer's correspondence. To this end a special commission has been allowed to search the archives of the of the Paris Opera and the French Ministry of Fine Arts for any interesting documents, especially if likely to throw any light upon the puzzle and mystery of Rossini's life—his thirty-nine years of absolute silence in composition after the completion of "William Tell."

In this connection it is worthy of remark that in a recently published musical work by an English writer, Mr. Weber, organist of the German Chapel Royal in London, the explanation is given that Rossini made a vow never again to write a note of music, because he despaired of ever attaining the height of musical perfection reached by Beethoven and Mozart.

It will be interesting to see whether his letters confirm this explanation of the problem.

At Pesaro, the maestro's birthplace, the festivities will last a week or more.

The townspeople of Pesaro have resolved to purchase the cottage where Rossini was born and convert it into a museum.

At Venice, where many of the master's works were first produced, besides operatic representations, there will be a water carnival.

At Turin a grand performance of the "Stabat Mater" is announced.

Paris will observe the centenary by a performance of "William Tell."

Some disappointment is felt that no move has so far been made in London to mark the occasion.

ON THE CO-OPERATIVE PLAN.

Miners Considering a Proposition Concerning the Briceville Mine.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 15.—The labor people at Coal Creek have been holding numerous conferences during the past few days.

One thing which has caused some of the conferences was the proposition made by the Tennessee Mining company, viz: To conduct the mine at Briceville on the co-operative plan.

The miners have not fully decided yet what they will do, but the indications are that the offer will be accepted.

It is said now that if the offer is not accepted the company will sell its property to the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railway company, the penitentiary lessees, who will put convicts to work.

The State has the larger part of her standing army encamped on the hill at Coal Creek and the expense is heavy. It is certainly true that if the troops are withdrawn the convicts will be released again.

IMMIGRANTS DETAINED.

Russian Hebrews Sent to North Brother Island for Examination.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—The steamship City of Berlin is detained at Quarantine for examination of Russian passengers—forty in number.

Etmin Zurialenko, aged 48, a Russian Jewess, was taken sick February 9 with, it is supposed, typhus fever. The patient was transferred to Riverside Hospital on North Brother Island by the quarantine boat. The steerage passengers, in all 203, will be transferred to Hoffman Island for observation.

The steamer Belgenland has seventy-five steerage passengers who are from Russia. They will be detained until the quarantine officials can learn whether or not they came from infected districts.

The steamer Russia has a large number of Russian immigrants who are also detained.

Decision Against the County.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 15.—In the case of H. H. Dudley, capitalist, of New Hampshire, against the county of Custer, the plaintiff was awarded damages in the sum of $5,847.50. If sustained, the effect will be to compel the several counties of the State to pay out nearly $2,000,000. When they organized at various times, the counties issued county warrants to raise funds, and the securities were placed upon the market. Custer county repudiated her debt, hence the suit. Many Eastern capitalists are interested in similar suits.

Joe Bartlow's Claim.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 15.—Joe Bartlow, who is of a dark complexion, claims to be a full brother of Jack and Mary Bartlow, who are white. He alleges that by a mere unaccountable freak of nature he was born with a dark skin, but that he was recognized during the life of his parents. K. C. and Lokie Bartlow, as a lawful son and was treated as a member of the family. He now claims that because of his dark skin his brother and sister are attempting to defraud him of his share of his father's estate. He has brought suit.

LABOR LEGISLATION

Resolution in the House to Investigate the Slums.

TO MAKE EXHAUSTIVE INQUIRY.

Labor Commissioner Wright to Have Charge of the Work.

He Will Examine Into the Breeding Places of Poverty and Crime in All the Big Cities of the Land—The House Committee on Labor Thinks Much Good Can Be Accomplished By Informing the Public of the Extent of Misery in the Slums.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—The general subject of the interests of labor will receive a good share of attention before the House of Representatives at an early day, and probably this week.

Very few labor bills have been presented to the committee, and as a rule these were on inconsequential subjects. But the very conservatism of the committee promises to bring about results out of the usual line of labor committees. As a result of several meetings of the committee of late it has about been decided to present a resolution to Congress asking Labor Commissioner Carroll Wright to inaugurate an extensive investigation of the "slums" in the great cities of the country, and particularly New York, Chicago, Boston, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and Baltimore.

This would be a far more comprehensive investigation than that of Sherman Hoar's special committee, which will look into the "sweating system" as that system deals only with a special case of labor, mainly in ready made clothing, but there are "slums" in all great cities, and Mr. Tarsney's associates are of the opinion that much good can be accomplished by informing the public of the extent of misery in the "slum" districts and by recommending to State Legislatures means for overcoming the evils of the "slums."

It has been stated at the meetings of the committee that the Government gave less attention to the proper housing and surroundings of human beings than it did to cattle which are the subject of interstate commerce or foreign shipment. There are rigid laws to see that cattle have sufficient room, air, food and water while being shipped, but there is less attention paid to the huddled condition of the poor in the "slum" districts.

This is the opinion of the Labor Committee, and it will be presented to the House by a resolution after the committee's meeting next Wednesday. Mr. McCann of Chicago, who is one of the members of the committee, thinks much good will come out of the "slums" investigation. He says that the government can do no better service to citizens than to see that they are brought up in surroundings which will make them sturdy and muscular, rather than a people stunted by slum surroundings. The cheap lodging houses, which have become such an element of life in large cities, will receive special investigation. The tenement house will also be investigated.

In short the purpose of the resolution will be to inaugurate the most extensive investigation that has thus far been undertaken of the miseries and evils of those whose lives are spent and spoiled in the tenement house districts of New York, and whose children may become a menace to the peace and prosperity of that city in the future.

WANTS INFORMATION.

An English Officer Inspecting Our Military and Naval Resources.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Major Barter of the English Royal Engineers has been in Washington for the past week and has called on the heads of the War and Navy Departments here.

He is making a tour of inspection of the United States for the purpose of learning as much as possible about the military and naval resources of the country, and what is being done in the direction of preparing war material.

He has been given considerable information of the kind usually published in the departmental annual reports, but not much in addition. Some of the things that he would probably prefer to have, such as as plans of the coast fortifications and of the submarine mines in the principal harbors, have been withheld from him.

Major Barter is the third English officer who has been in the United States in search of information recently.

Corbett Indignant.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—James Corbett is very indignant at the remarks made by Slavin and Mitchell in regard to a match with him. He says he will box Slavin six rounds at Madison Square Garden next Tuesday night and if he does not beat Slavin he will give him the entire receipts of the house.

Corbett thinks Slavin and Mitchell should stop blowing and make a match with him.

THE KING OF SIAM'S YACHT.

He Will Make a Tour of the World in the Maha Chakrike.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—The keel has been laid at Messrs. Ramage & Ferguson's ship yard, at Leith, for a new private yacht, to be built entirely of steel, for the King of Siam, and which is intended to eclipse anything else afloat.

Though this vessel is called a yacht, she will really be a private armed cruiser of 2,600 tons, in which the King of Siam proposes to make a tour of the world, including a visit to America during the exhibition year.

Her dimensions are 275 feet over all, 40 feet beam and 20 feet moulded depth. She will be armed with the most improved broadside guns, permitting a wide range of fire.

Her internal fittings and the deck woodwork will be most expensive and elaborate. Polished teak has been specially shipped from Bangkok, selected to resist the ravages of white ants and other insects which are a scourge in Siam. Electric lights and marble baths are included among the luxuries.

She will be a twin-screw vessel, with triple expansion engines capable of being driven at the highest rate of speed. She will have double funnels, which will not show much above the deck. She will have no bowsprit, but her plumb stem will be carried out under the water into a formidable projecting ram.

This stout yacht will be named Maha Chakrike.

Work is being pushed with all possible speed and the yacht will probably be launched in September, when she will steam from Siam with a Siamese crew in charge of European officers.

The intention of the King is to cruise around the world, calling at all important European, American and Asiatic ports.

END OF A RECLUSE.

Henry Gamage's Death Apparently Due to Natural Causes.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Henry Tenbroeck Gamage, 87 years old, a recluse, was found dead in his room in the building of the University of New York, where he had lived a lonely life for forty-nine years, his only companions being a collection of paintings and other works of art.

Death was apparently due to natural causes, but the body, when found, presented a horrible appearance. The old man probably sat alongside of a lighted oil stove just before death overtook him, for when found, his face was resting against the stove, the flesh of which had been burned away to the bone.

Gamage was a classmate of ex-Senator Evarts, but beyond this fact very little of the man is known. His barn-like apartments, which was illuminated only by a skylight, was filled from floor to ceiling with paintings and portraits, many of which are said to be rare gems. Besides these, dust-covered statues, placques and medallions were scattered about the apartments.

The only known friend of the old recluse is the Rev Dr H. S Gardner, of Milford, Pa., with whom he corresponded every month or so.

GALVANIC ACTION.

Supposed to be the Cause of the Destruction of the Cruisers' Boiler Tubes.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Several days ago mention was made of the unaccountable destruction of the brass tubes in the condenser of the cruiser Baltimore.

Since then the same deterioration of iron tubes in the boilers of the Charleston has been reported to the Bureau of Steam Engineering of the Navy Department, and the subject is being most thoroughly investigated to determine, if possible, how the defect may be avoided.

Chemical analysis of the affected tubes are being made, but what they will reveal is, of course, a conjecture.

The developments respecting the Charleston's boiler tubes show that the deterioration is not due, as had been at first supposed, to the impact of steam on the interior of tubes, and the engineers are coming to the conclusion that the cause is galvanic action, and that the remedy is the introduction alongside the tubes of some weaker metal, like zinc, for the galvanic forces to exhaust themselves upon.

Protest Against the Bills.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 15.—In all the churches in New Jersey there was read yesterday the appeal issued by the Citizens' League of New Jersey, urging all law-abiding citizens to meet in Trenton at noon to-morrow, to protest against the passage of the race track bills which are now pending. Arrangements have been made for the running of excursion trains from all parts of the State, and the indications now point to a general invasion of the State Capital by at least two thousand people. Delegations are expected from Paterson, Elizabeth, Newark, Jersey City, Trenton, and Camden.

Threatened With Annihilation.

MYSTIC, Iowa, Feb. 15.—This prosperous mining town is threatened with annihilation by the action of the Iowa Central Railway in raising rates on coal to a point where it cannot be shipped at a profit. Heretofore 1,200 car loads a month have been shipped to Mason City, St. Paul and Minneapolis, but since the new rate went into effect the mines have shut down and over 500 men are out of work. The matter will be laid before the State Railroad Commission.

Defends the Keeley Cure.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 15.—Dr. Hayner of the Keeley Institute in this place ridicules the statement that young James G. Fair, the son of ex-Senator Fair of California, whose death occurred in San Francisco, died from the effects of the Keeley treatment. Dr. Hayner says that young Fair might have had organic heart trouble or other disease from which he was likely to die at any time. Of the 55,000 persons who have taken the Keeley treatment, Dr. Hayner says the death rate has been much less than under other treatments.

Brooklyn Men Will Have to Accept Considerably Reduced Salaries.

Gotham's Giants Seriously Handicapped by a Lack of Funds—Active Management of the Cincinnati Club to be Left to a Committee of Three—Fresh Gossip of the Game.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—When the magnates of the United League gather at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, a few weeks hence, they will devote several hours to the consideration of the contract problem.

Many forms of contract will be submitted to the gentlemen who run the game, and one of them will be adopted as the official contract of the League. Just now the contract most in favor is the one used by the Chicago Club last year. This paper, stripped of its legal dressing, calls for twelve monthly salary days in every year. In other words, the player receives his princely stipend in twelve, instead of seven divisions.

Jim Hart, of Chicago, says that the new contract is a gem, and that he will do his best to have it adopted at the coming meeting. The Western delegates will vote as a unit in its favor. By the wise provision of the Chicago contract a player will have no opportunity to "touch" his club for advance money. This will prove a pleasant novelty for club owners. Of course the players will object, but this is certainly not the players' year, and their objections will count for naught.

There are players, and their names are many, who always insist that $500 or $1,000 of their salary be paid while the snow is on the ground and the acute season is two or three months removed. Mr. "Buck" Ewing has always asked for $1,500 or $2,000 in advance and has never been refused. Just how he will take to the new condition of things time alone can tell.

Apropos of "advance money," the announcement that the Brooklyn Club intends to make a liberal cut in salaries attracts more than passing interest. John Montgomery Ward has been instructed to sign his stars and to sign them cheap. He will find it no easy task. In the first place, the new Brooklyn team is made up of high-salaried men.

Brouthers has liberal ideas of his own financial value as a first baseman. He will insist on having big money. There is that new man at short field, young Corcoran. He will ask for $3,500, but will probably be signed for $2,500. Joyce has already affixed his signature to a Brooklyn contract. He draws big money. The outfield is a gilt-edged one, financially speaking. Hub Collins and Tom Burns are $3,000 men, and Mike Griffin pulled in nearly $5,000 last season.

As to the pitchers, Haddock and Lovett draw big salaries. Young Inks and Hart can be signed at reasonable terms, and Dave Foutz, if signed at all, must consent to a liberal reduction. Caruthers will be in the same box. Tom Daly and Con Daley will draw big money, but Kinslow will suffer a cut in his wages.

There is nothing new to chronicle in the camp of the giants. Manager Powers is handicapped by the lack of money, and the work of "shaping up" the team progresses slowly.

The active management of the Cincinnati Club affairs will be left to an executive committee of three—Messrs. Brush, Lloyd and Ellison.

Jack Sharrot started in like a cyclone last season, but his arm snapped, and the Giants, who had led the League, dropped down, down, down. Now they say that Sharrot is all ready to jump in and duplicate his good work.

Pittsburg's club house is to be remodeled and the small rooms converted into one big apartment. It is charged that some of the players used one of the rooms for beer storage when the manager wasn't about last season.

WILLIAM AITKENS' DEATH.

Said that a 12-year-old Trenton Boy Committed Suicide.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 15.—William Aitkins, a boy only 13 years of age, committed suicide last night.

He resided with his parents at 31 Lamberton street, and while his mother was getting supper he went up-stairs and, taking a scarf and a piece of rope, he tied them together and fastened one end to a clothes hook on the wall and the other about his neck.

He then jumped from his bed and was strangled to death. His parents incline to the belief that he was playing at trapeze performance and became entangled about the neck.

The authorities believe it to be a case of premeditated suicide. No cause is assigned, however, except that the boy was of a romantic turn of mind.

Peter Dawson's Return.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 15.—Peter Dawson, the colored coachman, who deserted his wife and four children last December, has returned. Dawson says he left the city with a young colored girl, and that they went to Tarrytown, N. Y., and New York city. Dawson's wife refuses to have anything more to do with him. He will be arraigned in the police court on a charge of adultery.

Missing Since January 31.

ROCKY HILL, Conn., Feb. 15.—Samuel R. Morton, a wealthy but eccentric farmer of this place, has been missing from his home since January 31. It is thought that he has been led away by bunco sharers.

Under the direction of the Legislature of Ohio, the State Food and Dairy Commissioner, Gen. S. H. HURST, examined the leading brands of baking powder (30 in all) and the following is Gen. HURST's verdict:

"Cleveland's Superior is absolutely the best baking powder manufactured."

PENSION INVESTIGATION.

Speaker Crisp Appoints the Committee of Five.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Speaker Crisp has appointed the following committee to investigate the charges against Commissioner Raum under the resolution recently reported from the Committee on Rules:

Wheeler, of Michigan, Chairman; Little, of New York; Dungan, of Ohio; Lind, of Minnesota, and Brosius, of Pennsylvania.

Judge Wheeler entered the Union army as a private and came out a captain. He is entitled to a pension which he does not draw. He has an excellent record as a lawyer and a judge.

Mr. Little served in the Union army, entering as a private and coming out as a first lieutenant. He is a prominent Grand Army man.

Mr. Dungan served throughout the war in the Nineteenth Iowa Infantry, and was captured and confined ten months in a military prison.

Mr. Lind would have served in the war as a Union soldier had he been old enough. He is an excellent lawyer.

Mr. Brosius entered the war as a private in Company K, Ninety-seventh Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers. He was severely wounded at Green Plains and still suffers as a result of it. Just before the close of the war he was commissioned as second lieutenant for bravery on the battlefield. He has practiced law since 1868.

The committee will be assisted by Representatives Cooper and Enloe, who have gathered a vast amount of data concerning the management of the Pension Office.

Chairman Wheeler declares that the investigation will be impartial and thorough.

KATE RETURNS.

Restored to Her Parents After Several Amusing Experiences.

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Miss Kate Evanson, who disappeared on her way to school at Bristol, has been found. Her brother discovered her at an inn in Shrewsbury in male attire. She was willing enough to accompany him home and was restored to the arms of her parents.

The escapade was the freak of a romantic girl, who suddenly conceived the idea of putting into effect her long-cherished dream of seeing the world. She left the train at Gloucester, went to a clothing store and bought the suit of man's clothes on the plea that she intended to give it to a poor person who had appealed to her for charity.

She then went to a barber's and induced the man to cut her hair on the pretense that she suffered from headaches. She later took the train to Mitcheldean, and while in the compartment of a first-class coach effected a change of clothing, leaving her suit of women's apparel on the seat. At Mitcheldean she alighted, looking like a bright young boy. From that time she had a series of amusing adventures, managing to deceive everybody and elude pursuit, although the whole country was aroused and searching for her.

Riley Webb Lynched.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 15.—Riley Webb, colored, who assaulted Mrs. Crump, a white woman, in Montgomery on February 3, and who was captured yesterday, was removed to Selma for safe keeping. Early in the morning he was taken from the jail at that place and hanged to a tree and his body filled with bullets. He confessed.

Death in the Flames.

YONKERS, N. Y., Feb. 15.—A fire, the cause of which is unknown, totally consumed the residence of James Whalen, near Ardsley. Mr. Whalen's sister met her death in the flames, while the other occupants had just sufficient time to escape, being compelled to flee in their night clothes.

Examiner Witman Dead.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Dr. H. O. Witman, of this city, but formerly of Harrisburg, Pa., died suddenly in his 63d year. He had been suffering a few days only from erysipelas and was not supposed to be in any danger. He was one of the medical examiners in the Pension Bureau.

Immigration Falling Off.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—The Landing Department of Ellis Island reports that a total of 4,059 steerage passengers were landed at the bureau during the past week. For the corresponding time last year a total of 5,257 were landed, a falling off of nearly 1,200 over last year.

RACE-TRACK BILLS CONDEMNED

A BIG DELEGATION TO PROTEST AGAINST THEIR PASSAGE.

Rousing Mass-Meeting in Music Hall—Stirring Speeches by Leading Laymen and Clergymen—Citizens Urged Not to Neglect Their Solemn Duty, But to Aid in the Final Overthrow of Iniquitous Measures at Trenton.

The people of Plainfield once more strongly arrayed themselves against iniquitous race-track legislation, yesterday, and put themselves on record as unqualifiedly opposed to all attempts to legalize gambling and its attendant vices. Music Hall was well filled with representative citizens, at 4:15 in the afternoon. The stage was occupied by mayor Alexander Gilbert, who presided over the meeting, corporation counsel Craig A. Marsh, ex-mayor L. V. F. Randolph, councilmanic president S. A. Ginns, councilman E. N. Erickson, John W. Murray, Aaron M. Powell, W. D. W. Miller, Henry E. Bowen, captain William B. Ostrom, the Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, the Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, the Rev. W. R. Richards, the Rev. C. B. Mitchell, the Rev. J. L. Huribut, the Rev. Hobart Clark, the Rev. W. E. Honeyman, and the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. A few of the gentler sex added grace and dignity to the gathering.

By general consent, and at the suggestion of the Rev. Mr. Mitchell, Messrs. Clarke, Daly and Laing, the newspaper representatives present, were made secretaries of the meeting, which was then opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Yerkes. The petition of the venerable pastor was a most fervent one, imploring immunity from the curse of unrighteous legislation, and asking that the hand be stayed that would frame mischief by the law.

Mayor Gilbert in an introductory speech referred to the Plainfield anti-race-track meeting of a year ago, and recalled what had been accomplished by concerted action at that time. Now—he said—greenbacks were being used as a means of obtaining legislation which public sentiment decried, and in open and shameless defiance of popular feeling race-track gamblers were securing aid from those in authority. He pointed out that the patrons of the Jersey race-tracks were the lowest elements of New York society, who pour across the ferries and greatly increase disorder and crime within the State. He earnestly urged the people to exercise their rights and duties of citizenship, peaceably to invade in mass the legislative halls, and secure the aid instead of the opposition of the legislators in the work of the great reform of eradicating altogether the race-track evil.

Counselor Marsh made a masterly presentation of the present legal aspect of the case. He said that his conferences with distinguished leaders in the crusade led him to believe that the honest citizens of the State might not only feel an absolute consciouness that they were in the right, in fighting the scheme to legalize gambling, but might also feel in a certain measure confident of success. He firmly believed that as a result of the various meetings such as the Plainfield meeting which were then being held throughout the State this would be the last heard of the effort to shelter race-track offenses under the law.

To a layman,—continued Mr. Marsh—to a mind not a trained legal one, the pending racetrack bills seemed inoffensive, as they were very adroitly worded, with their obnoxious features carefully hidden away. But their daring purport was to grant to race-track owners and their patrons immunity from indictment and punishment, for gambling and other vices, in exchange for an annual license fee. The devisers of these bills probably thought—said Mr. Marsh—that they would catch their opponents asleep; but Dr. Kempshall, president of the State citizens' league, was on the alert, and his lynx eye discovered the attempt to hoodwink the people—he hoped in time to frustrate the plan to make the bills law.

Mr. Marsh referred to the fact that much had been said about bribes, and to the immense power that had existed in Hudson county, the home of the race-track scheme—a power that had defied the courts and almost the people. He referred to judge Knapp's sterling fight against that tremendous power, and said that hardly had the judge succumbed in the court room to the strain of the battle, hardly had he, the chief enemy of the infamous thing passed away from earth, when the hydra-headed monster came forth and sought to have put on the bench a successor who should be in sympathy with the ring. Thank Providence—he said, amid much applause—that that scheme did not succeed.

The counselor expressed the hope that the various cities would on Tuesday send to Trenton thousands on thousands of men of character to protest against the passage of the bills which purposed to legalize things which all their lives his hearers had regarded as a crime. The Legislature might just as consistently say that it was no longer a crime to be a polygamist or to steal a sum under $1,000. Doubtless the courts would decide that the proposed laws took away the right of self-protection granted by both State and National Constitution, and hence were unconstitutional, but it ought not to be necessary to go as far as that; the thing ought to be stopped at the threshold. The legislators now at Trenton had to go back to the people some day, and he believed that when they were confronted by the mass of representatives of the people next Tuesday they would reject any bribes that might be tendered, and refuse to pass the bills. Let the best citizens of the State go forward, and as the legislators listened let them be made to feel that the voice of the people was indeed the voice of God, and he was sure that the people would achieve a victory final and complete.

Mr. Marsh's stirring speech was received with vigorous applause.

The Rev. Mr. Richards said that if the whole State saw and felt the iniquity of the race-track as did the city of Elizabeth the capitol would scarcely be able to contain the mass of protestants next Tuesday. He held the true patriot to be one who though his own home or personal safety may not be endangered is so thoroughly in sympathy with his fellowman that he will make the cause of the imperiled one his own. He urged that the impending evil be treated just as though it menaced Plainfield in particular.

Editor Powell pointed out that perhaps Plainfield was endangered even more closely than people suspected. The proposed legislation applied to the whole State, and though Plainfield was an exceptional community even Plainfield had had, of late, painful and deplorable experiences. The incident of the "Elkwood" proved that Plainfield had somewhat of the material to make it easy to introduce the fearfully bad evils that would develop through the passage of the bills. He urged that the flag of purity be kept at the mast-head, and that no retrograde legislation such as removal of punishment for what was now a misdemeanor be permitted.

Ex-mayor Randolph added a few ringing words urging united and overwhelming action, and Dr. Huribut made a characteristic speech. He spoke of the pride and satisfaction he felt at hearing "Jersey justice" eulogized wherever he traveled. The State had a fine reputation that its laws were well made and thoroughly enforced. The State's reputation for punishing evil was a hard-earned one, and rightfully possessed, and ought to be maintained. The State was the highway between two of the country's largest cities; in large cities the forces of evil and crime were great. If the Jersey laws were not rigorously enforced the State would be deluged with crime. At present the jail-bird could not safely trust himself long on Jersey soil. To legislate in favor of race-track gambling was to lower the tone of public morals, and against the scheme the people ought to make themselves heard in clear and ringing utterance.

The following resolution, introduced by Dr. Rodman, were unanimously adopted by a loud and vigorous "aye" from the hundreds of throats:

Resolved, That this assemblage of citizens of Plainfield, N. J., do most strongly and unqualifiedly condemn the legislation proposed in the race-track bills now before the committee on revision of the laws, and protest against the enactment of said bills as in every way dangerous to the morals of our people and destructive especially to the character of the youth of our State.

Resolved, That this resolution be conveyed by the delegation to be appointed by this meeting to act as our representatives and by them be presented to the committee of the Legislature.

The Rev. Mr. Richards presented a partial list of the names of those whom it had been suggested should act as the delegation to Trenton. Not all of the names—he said—had as yet been turned in. He moved that the list presented be adopted, and that the mayor, in conference with the pastors, be authorized to supplement the list with such other names as was desired. The motion was unanimously carried. The partial list is as follows:

He Took a Big Drink and Disappeared.

The wife of a licensed liquor dealer, in the absence of her husband, brought up from the cellar Saturday evening a big demijohn of whiskey, valued at $8, for use in the barroom. Not wanting to go into the barroom herself, she gave the demijohn to a man who was just entering and asked him to hand it to the barkeeper. The man merely walked in and then out again, taking the liquor with him. As soon as its loss was discovered a searching party went to his house but found no one there. If he does n't return the whiskey or its value to-day, he is to be arrested.

PARK PLACE CHAPEL DEDICATED.

Methodists Have a Joyful Day in Their New House of Worship.

The handsome and complete new chapel of the Plainfield Methodist Episcopal church, situated on Park place, North Plainfield, in a hitherto somewhat churchless district, was dedicated and opened to worship yesterday. It was another red-letter day in local Methodism, and all people interested in religious work felt that the Methodists had again proved themselves eminently deserving of the reputation of being pioneers in mission work.

The formal dedication of the chapel was by Bishop W. X. Ninde, D. D., at the conclusion of the meetings of the day, and according to the form of the Methodist church.

Pastor Charles Bayard Mitchell was a deservedly happy man. It has been due in no small measure to his personal efforts that the chapel enterprise has achieved success, but his smiling and eloquent lips kept telling the people all day long that to the efficient building committee (especially its chairman, Dr. H. K. Carroll) and to the Rev. Dr. J. B. VanMeter, his predecessor as pastor, and now president of the Woman's College at Baltimore, most of the praise was due. Dr. VanMeter's advice and exertion were responsible for the purchase of the building plat (80x170 feet), several years ago. He procured the subscriptions that paid for the lot, which cost $3,600. The total cost of the chapel property, including the price of the lot and of the furnishings, was $11,466, and the beauty of the enterprise is that the mortgage to remain on the building is only $2,500. Up to yesterday there was a balance of $4,500, but by his untiring zeal pastor Mitchell raised $$2,000 of this by subscription during the day. Everybody contributed generously according to his means.

Altogether it was a most happy day for the Methodists. In the morning and evening Bishop Ninde preached excellent sermons. That of the evening was especially powerful and impressive, and literally, as pastor Mitchell aptly said, carried its hearers up into a Mount of Transfiguration. The text was "Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion!"—Isaiah LII: 1.

In the afternoon an interesting platform meeting was held, with short speeches from pastor Mitchell, Dr. VanMeter, Dr. Hurlbut, Dr. Carroll, the Rev. Charles Hutchinson of the Park place church in Elizabeth, and the Rev. W. R. Richards. Mr. Richards gave greeting not only for his own people but also in the name of all the other churches of the city. A letter of congratulation was read from the Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

Services will be held in the chapel tonight and Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights. The preacher this evening will be Dr. VanMeter. Next sunday afternoon a Sunday-school will be organized. Each one enrolling that day will receive a certificate as charter member.

An excellent choice for the superintendency of the chapel has been made in Dr. Carroll.

A BRILLIANT AURORA.

Nature's Great Master-Painting in the Sky Revealed to a Wondering People.

A magnificent exhibition of aurora borealis was witnessed by the inhabitants of Plainfield and vicinity Saturday evening. Directly after sunset a pale pink glow manifested itself on the northern horizon. As the darkness gathered the depth of color increased, and the belief was that a large fire was raging back of the mountains. Presently, however, stately shafts of white, yellow and pale green shot up through the redness. By this time it was quite dark, and the phenomenon was at the height of its beauty. Dinner tables all over the city were deserted, and the people stood in shivering groups on lawns and sidewalks watching nature's masterpiece.

At one time the aurora described a perfect arch from northwest to northeast, with the north star at the centre, and the great waves of varicolored light shifted gracefully about like the waving of a huge curtain before the evening zephyrs, developing continually soft and pleasing changes of hue, blood-red predominating. The stars gleamed through the aurora almost as lustrous and glittering as though no veil were over them. After the full moon arose the aurora rose higher and higher, and gradually faded away seemingly in the zenith. The weather was crisp and clear.

The gorgeous illumination of the heavens was visible in cities over a thousand miles apart. It was probably the most wonderful exhibition of the aurora, or northern lights, ever seen outside the marvelous electric displays of the polar regions. The phenomenon stretched over a great belt of territory from Iowa to the Atlantic coast. The magnificent spectacle was scientifically observed at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. Astronomical Director W. J. Hussey of that institution said:

"The brilliant rose-red aurora visible to-night was not altogether unexpected In a general way auroras have been predicted for about this time. To-night's display naturally follows the appearance of the great sun spot which has been visible during the past week. Other auroral displays may be expected in the near future."

TREASURER ONLY IN NAME.

Mr. Martin Says General Negley's Company Has a Capital on Paper Merely.

Treasurer Stuart T. Martin, of the European and American Credit and Trust company, of which Gen. James S. Negley of this city is president, is in trouble. Some of Martin's creditors have attached his property for $20,000. They say the above company which Martin said had a capital of $9,000,000, hasn't a cent.

"Gen. Negley, the president of the company, is at present in London", Martin says, "and though I am the treasurer of the concern he has conducted all the business and signed the papers. Some time ago a company was incorporated under the laws of West Virginia. We called it the Mexican Trust and Investment company. On the advice of Gen. Negley the name was subsequently changed to that of the European and American Credit and Trust company. The general said that it would be better not to have the name of any particular locality attached to the enterprise as it would alarm a certain class of foreign speculators. We were to negotiate securities for investors, borrowers and contractors.

"The capital of $9,000,000 was negotiated by Gen. Negley. We never did any business. I was unfortunate in being dragged into it. I was elected treasurer, with a big salary, but I have never drawn a cent, because there was no fund from which I could draw. Gen. Negley is at the London office and also manages the Paris branch."

A "Journalist" Startles the Natives.

An unwonted interruption of the mass-meeting at Music Hall yesterday was made by one Morrison, who arose from the audience and said that he had information that would startle the people. He failed to comprehend the sarcasm of mayor Gilbert's suggestion to "go right on and startle", and proceeded to tell that he had had some business at Trenton a few days ago and had seen the State superintendent of schools "hobnobbing" with two men of unsavory reputation, Hell-hole Thompson and Denny McLaughlin. He understood—he said—that the race-track men were holding another candidate for the superintendent's position as a cudgel over the head of the superintendent, who was seeking reappointment. He failed to elucidate what connection the State superintendent of schools could possibly have with the race-track question, but he evidently had an idea that Dr. Hurlbut could offset the evil effects of the superintendent's "hobnobbing" with those terrible men, for he said that he wanted Dr. Hurlbut added to the delegation, "particular", and insisted on a motion to add Dr. Hurlbut's name. Mayor Gilbert said that such a motion was entirely unnecessary, as the pastors would add the name of their own accord. Morrison resumed his seat without hearing what Dr. Hurlbut muttered, and blissfully ignorant of what the good doctor thought.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

F. W. RUNYON, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 19, 1892.

AN ORDINANCE

To License Inns and Taverns and to Regulate and Prohibit the sale of Spirituous and Fermented Liquors.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. All applications for license to keep an inn and tavern within said city shall be in writing, addressed to the Common Council, shall be signed by the person or persons desiring such license, shall state the purpose for which a license is asked, and the place wherein such business is proposed to be carried on, and a certificate shall be annexed thereto, signed by at least ten reputable citizens and freeholders of said city (three of whom shall reside within one thousand feet of the place proposed for license, and all of whom shall be residents of the same ward in which the business is to be carried on), who have not within one year theretofore signed any similar certificate, stating that the applicant is known to them to be of good repute for honesty and temperance, and provided with at least two spare rooms with beds, bedding and furniture more than are necessary for the use of applicant's family.

Sec. 2. Before any person or persons shall receive a license to keep an inn or tavern within said city, such person or persons shall become bound by recognizance in writing to the "Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield" in the sum of one hundred dollars as principal, with two sufficient sureties, being freeholders within said city, in the sum of fifty dollars each, to be taken before the City Judge in or out of court, with condition following, to wit: The condition of this recognizance is such that whereas, the above bounden A. B. is licensed by the Common Council of said city of Plainfield to keep an inn and tavern within said city until the first day of March next ensuing the date hereof, if therefore the said A. B. during the continuance of the said license shall not keep a disorderly inn and tavern, nor game himself, nor suffer any person to game in said inn and tavern for money or the value of money, nor violate the laws made concerning inns and taverns, but shall during the said term in all things respecting him as an innholder and tavern-keeper, use and maintain good order and rule, and find and provide good, wholesome and sufficient lodging, diet and entertainment for man, and stabling and provender for horse, and observe the directions of the law relating to inns and taverns, then this recognizance to be void, or else to remain in full force and virtue.

Sec. 3. Every inn and tavern-keeper licensed under the provisions of the foregoing sections, shall be liable to the same conditions, requirements and restrictions as are imposed upon inn and tavern-keepers under the general law of the State; provided, that no such license shall be taken or construed as authorizing the sale, by such inn and tavern-keeper, of any spirituous or fermented liquors.

Sec. 4. That license may be granted to any person duly licensed to keep an inn and tavern in said city to sell spirituous and fermented liquors in his inn and tavern; all applications for such license shall be in writing addressed to the Common Council, signed by the applicant, setting forth the purpose for which such license is asked, and the inn and tavern wherein such business is purposed to be carried on, and such application shall have a certificate annexed thereto, signed by at least ten reputable citizens and freeholders of said city (three of whom reside within one thousand feet of the said inn and tavern), and all of whom shall be residents of the same ward in which the business is to be carried on, stating that the applicant is known to them to be of good repute for honesty and temperance, and thereupon the said Common Council may, in their discretion, grant such license; provided, that the said certificate may be signed by the same citizens and freeholders as have already signed the certificate required to be annexed to his application for license to keep an inn and tavern; and provided further, that before any license is granted to sell spirituous and fermented liquors as provided for by the ordinance, the Clerk of the Common Council shall have caused or shall cause to be inserted in each official newspaper in the city, within ten days after such application was or is made, a notice in the following form, with the blank spaces properly filled in, to wit:

Plainfield, N. J............18....

Notice is hereby given that............has applied to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield for a license to sell spirituous and fermented liquors at No.................street, which application is signed by..................
...................., citizens and freeholders.

All persons knowing of any reasons why such license should not be granted, are requested to make known the same in writing, to the City Clerk, on or before the....day of...., 18.., ...

The expense of publishing such notice shall be added to the fee required to be paid and shall be paid by the applicant for such license, before receiving such license; and all communications which may be received by the City Clerk in response to any such request, shall be by him immediately delivered to the Committee on Licenses of the Common Council, if there be such committee, or if not, to the Common Council.

Sec. 5. That saloon-keepers and persons other than inn and tavern-keepers may, in the discretion of the Common Council, be licensed under this ordinance to sell spirituous and fermented liquors within said city. All applications for such license shall be in writing, and made as required by the next preceding section in the case of inn and tavern-keepers, and the owner of the place proposed for license (if the applicant be not the owner) must be one of the signers to the certificate required to be annexed to the application. Such certificate shall be signed only by reputable citizens and freeholders of said city, who have not within one year theretofore signed any similar certificate. In every certificate annexed to applications for license to sell spirituous and fermented liquors within said city, whether by inn and tavern-keepers, saloon-keepers or other persons, every freeholder recommending the granting of such license shall clearly designate the street in which he lives, and in what part thereof he lives, and also the location and nature of, and his interest in, the real property by virtue of the ownership of which he shall sign such certificate; and further, the signature of every freeholder to every such certificate shall be witnessed by some reputable person, whose affidavit, setting forth the fact that he saw said freeholder sign said certificate, shall be attached to said certificate before being presented to the Council; and no license whatever shall be granted unless the application therefor and the certificate thereto annexed shall be in compliance with all the requirements under this ordinance. No person shall be deemed competent to sign the certificate first referred to in this section who shall, within one year theretofore, have signed a certificate annexed to any application for license to keep an inn and tavern, or to sell spirituous and fermented liquors therein, and no woman, and no man who from illiteracy is unable to read and write the English language, shall be deemed competent to sign any of the certificates required by this ordinance, or any part thereof, except in the case of the owner of the place proposed for license when under this ordinance such owner's signature is made necessary, nor shall any woman be deemed competent to receive a license under this ordinance.

Sec. 6 That before receiving any license provided in the last preceding section, the person licensed shall become bound by recognizance in writing to the inhabitants of the City of Plainfield in the sum of two hundred dollars as principal, with two sufficient sureties in the sum of one hundred dollars each, conditioned as follows, to wit: The condition of this recognizance is such that whereas the above bounden A. B. is licensed to sell spirituous and fermented liquors at .... on .... street, in the City of Plainfield, until the first day of March next ensuing the date hereof, if therefore the said A. B. during the continuance of said license shall not keep a disorderly house, nor game himself, nor suffer any person to game in said house for money or the value of money, nor violate any of the provisions of this ordinance, or the ordinances of said city made or to be made concerning the business whereunto the said A. B. is licensed as aforesaid, but shall in all things during the continuance of said license keep and maintain good order and rule in his said place of business, and in all things comply with and observe the provisions of the ordinances of said city now made and to be made concerning such business, then this recognizance to be void, else to be and remain in full force and virtue.

Sec. 7. Licenses to sell spirituous, vinous, malt or brewed liquors in any quantity from one quart to five gallons may be granted under this ordinance, upon the applicant presenting to the Common Council written application therefor, signed by such applicant and setting forth the purpose for which such license is asked, and the place in which the applicant proposes to conduct his business, accompanied by a certificate recommending the applicant to be a fit and suitable person to be licensed, signed by at least five freeholders in and residents of the city of Plainfield, three of whom reside in the same ward in which said proposed place of business is situated and within one thousand feet of said proposed place of business of said applicant; but no such license shall be taken or construed to authorize any such licensed person to suffer or permit any of said liquors, sold under and in pursuance of such license, to be drunk on or about the premises where sold; and no person not licensed under this section shall sell, furnish or supply any spirituous, vinous, malt or brewed liquors to persons or families in dwellings, under a penalty of a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding sixty days, either or both, for each and every offense. That every licensed person engaged in furnishing or supplying liquors to persons or families in dwellings, shall carry with him while so engaged the license for inspection, under the penalty of five dollars for every neglect so to do; and when the licensee shall find it necessary in the prosecution of his business to use more than one vehicle for the delivery of spirituous, vinous, malt and brewed liquors, or any of them theretofore ordered from such licensee at his place of business, the city clerk shall issue to such licensee a certificate for every additional vehicle, which certificate shall be carried by the driver of such vehicle for inspection, under the penalty of five dollars for every neglect so to do. The city clerk shall demand such evidence as he may deem necessary before issuing any certificate. That the loan of any certificate aforesaid to any person not authorized to use the same, shall subject the offender to the penalty of a revocation of the license under which the certificate is issued.

Sec. 8. If any person licensed under this ordinance shall be convicted of being drunk in his own licensed place of business, such person may be fined in any sum not exceeding twenty dollars; and such conviction shall be sufficient cause for the revocation of such license by the Common Council.

Sec. 9. No person or persons licensed under this ordinance shall permit any drunkenness, riot or other disorderly conduct in his, her or their licensed place of business, or on his, her or their premises; and any person offending against the provisions of this section shall, upon conviction thereof before the City Judge be fined, for the first offense, in any sum not exceeding twenty dollars, and for each subsequent offense in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

Sec. 10. Every person licensed under this ordinance shall, within one month from date of the license, put up or fix a sign on the front of the place licensed, with his, her or the firm's (if it be a firm) name thereon; and shall keep such sign up during the whole period of the licence; and shall also cause the said license to be properly framed and hung up to public view in the public room of the place licensed.

Sec. 11. If any person or persons not licensed according to the provisions of this ordinance shall expose for sale, sell or dispose of, or cause or permit to be exposed for sale, sold or disposed of, directly or indirectly, within said city, any spirituous or fermented liquors, or any composition of which spirituous or fermented liquors shall form a part (except such as shall be compounded and intended for use as medicine) such person or persons shall be deemed guilty of an offense, and upon conviction thereof before the City Judge shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisoned for any term not exceeding sixty days, either or both, at the discretion of the Court; provided, that said prosecution shall be begun within six months from the date of the commission of such offense; and provided further, that nothing in this ordinance shall be construed to apply to druggists filling prescriptions from practicing physicians, or to prohibit any person from selling metheglin, currant or other native wine made by the seller.

Sec. 12. No person or persons licensed under this ordinance shall carry on the business or trade for which such license was granted in any other place than that designated in said license, nor shall such license be assigned or transferred, nor shall such licensed person or persons assume to give authority or permission to any other person or persons to carry on such licensed business, but such license as to any and all other persons and places than those named therein shall be void, and any person or persons who in disregard of the prohibitions of this section shall carry on any such business under a license so assigned or transferred, or under an authority or permission thus given, shall be liable to the same penalties as may be inflicted upon persons selling without license.

Sec. 13. No person or persons licensed under this ordinance shall, between the hours of eleven o'clock at night and six o'clock the following morning or upon the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, sell or offer, or expose for sale or furnish, or permit to be sold, offered or exposed for sale or furnished to any person or persons, any spirituous or fermented liquors of any kind or any composition thereof, or at any time sell, offer or expose for sale, or furnish or permit to be offered or exposed for sale, sold or furnished any of such liquors or any compound thereof, to any minor, intoxicated or weak-minded person, nor shall such licensed person or persons at any time incite, encourage or permit any game or device to be played, practiced or carried on within such licensed place, or in any shed, out-house or other place in the occupancy of such licensed person (billiards or nine-pins, if named in such license, alone excepted), or any betting or gaming for money or anything of any value whatever; and any person convicted of a violation of any of the provisions of this section shall be fined in any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisoned for any term not exceeding sixty days, either or both, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 14. All prosecutions under this ordinance shall be by affidavit or information filed before the City Judge, and in all cases where said prosecution shall be for the offering for sale, selling or exposing for sale or otherwise disposing of any spirituous or fermented liquors, it shall be sufficient in such affidavit or information to describe such liquors as spirituous or fermented liquors, as the case may be, without specifying particularly the kind or description thereof, and evidence may be given upon the trial of the sale, offering for sale or otherwise disposing of any particular kind of liquor included in the general description so given. All such information shall be brought by the Corporation Counsel in the name of "The Treasurer of the City of Plainfield." And whenever a fine shall be imposed and collected for violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance, one-half of such fine shall be paid to the person making the complaint upon which the conviction for such violation shall have been had, and the other half thereof shall be paid to the City Treasurer for the use of the city.

Sec. 15. In all cases of the prosecution of any person licensed under this ordinance for any offense against any of the provisions thereof, it shall be the duty of the Judge, upon conviction of such licensed person, to declare his recognizance forfeited.

Sec. 16. All licenses under this ordinance shall be granted by resolution of the Common Council, be made out by the City Clerk, signed by the Mayor, issued under the common seal of the city, attested by the City Clerk, and shall continue in force until the first day of March next after the date of such license, and no longer provided, that any person duly licensed to keep an inn and tavern may be granted license to sell spirituous and fermented liquors in his said inn and tavern for the six months beginning May first and ending November first of the year in which said license is granted, and such license shall expire on the said first day of November, and at all licenses shall be subject to be revoked any time by resolution of the Common Council for a violation or neglect of any of the provisions of this ordinance, or of any other ordinance which the Common Council may pass relative to the business authorized by such license, and it shall be the duty of the City Clerk to furnish immediately to the person or persons whose license shall be so revoked a copy of such resolution, and any person acting under such license, after notice of the revocation thereof, shall be liable to all the penalties imposed by this ordinance as fully as though no such license had ever been issued. Before receiving such license, the applicant shall be required to sign in duplicate a stipulation to be written, printed or stamped, both on the face of said license and on the stub to which the same is attached as follows: "I hereby agree to be bound by and to conform to all the ordinances of the City of Plainfield, under which this license is granted, under penalty of forfeiture of this license."

Sec. 17. Before receiving a license issued under this ordinance, the licensed person or persons shall pay the following fees: To the Mayor and City Clerk each one dollar, and in addition the following fees, viz: For each license to an inn and tavern-keeper to sell spirituous or fermented liquors, the sum of seven hundred dollars ($700) when said license is to expire on the first day of March, following, and the sum of four hundred dollars when said license is to expire on the first day of November following, provided that persons licensed to keep an inn and tavern without the privilege of selling spirituous and fermented liquors, shall not be required to pay any fees except those to the Mayor and City Clerk. For each license to a person other than an inn and tavern-keeper to sell spirituous and fermented liquors, the sum of seven hundred dollars ($700). For each other place licensed to sell spirituous and fermented liquors, in quantities as provided in section seven (7) of this ordinance, the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars ($250) provided, that all license fees under this ordinance, other than those to the Mayor and City Clerk, shall be paid to the City Treasurer and his receipt shown to the Mayor before such license shall issue; and provided further, that no such license shall be of any validity whatever until such license fees are in fact paid to the City Treasurer, and on failure to pay any such fees within twenty days from the time the Common Council shall have granted any such application for license the said action of said Common Council shall no longer authorize the issuance of a license under said application to the person failing to pay as aforesaid, unless the Common Council at the first meeting following the expiration of said twenty days shall so direct.

Sec. 18. The City Clerk shall keep a correct list of all licenses issued under this ordinance in a book to be provided for that purpose, in which shall be entered the name of the licensed person or persons, the business for which said license has been given, and the names of the freeholders and citizens certifying to the application for such license; which book shall, at all reasonable times, be open to the inspection of any citizen of said city desiring to examine the same.

Sec. 19. No person licensed under this ordinance shall keep open or cause or permit to be kept open his bar room or room in which spirituous or fermented liquors are customarily sold or permit persons to congregate therein between the hours of eleven o'clock at night and six o'clock of the following morning, and any person convicted of violating this section shall be liable to a fine of one hundred dollars or imprisonment for a term not exceeding sixty days or both.

Sec. 20. That no person licensed to sell spirituous or fermented liquors shall suffer or permit in his bar-room or any other room in which spirituous or fermented liquors are sold by him, or in any adjoining room connected therewith, any musical performance of any kind, vocal or instrumental, or both, or any mechanical music, or any acting, dancing, juggling, slight of hand, boxing, wrestling, or any similar performance, show or exhibition.

Sec. 21. Every person licensed to sell spirituous or fermented liquors shall so arrange the doors, windows and partitions of his bar-room or saloon that a full and unobstructed view of the interior thereof, including the bar, may be had from the street through the doors or windows, or both, between the hours of 11 p. m. each and every Saturday and 6 a. m. the following Monday. And no window, blind, screen, partition, curtain or other article shall be so left or placed as to prevent between the hours named the full and unobstructed view from the street of the interior of said saloon or barroom.

Sec 22. No person licensed to sell spirituous or fermented liquors shall at any time sell or dispose of spirituous or fermented liquors from any bar that cannot, between the hours named in Section 21, be plainly seen from the streets.

Sec. 23. Every violation of any of the provisions of the three next preceding sections of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding sixty days or both, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 24. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith be and the same are hereby repealed; provided that no offense committed and no liability or penalty incurred previous to the time when this ordinance shall go into effect, shall be discharged or affected by anything in this ordinance contained; and all proceedings and prosecution for such offenses, liabilities and penalties shall be instituted or proceeded with as the case may be in all respects as if the ordinance had not been adopted.

EGYPT'S NEW KHEDIVE.

The Career and Attainments of the Young Prince Abbas.

The late khedive of Egypt, Tewfik Pacha, who died in Cairo on January 7, left four children, two boys and two girls, born him by his only wife, Princess Emineh, whom he married in 1873. His eldest son, Abbas Bey, the present khedive, was born on July 14, 1874, and therefore will attain his majority in six months.

Abbas Bey was educated by A. T. Butler, who acted for several years as his tutor, and who has been for a long time while in the service of the late khedive. It is this circumstance which has given rise to the too general belief that the young prince, having been first under British tuition, would prove to be an Anglophile to a still greater extent than was his father, Tewfik. But it is difficult to decide that question, for Abbas Bey has not yet had any opportunity to show his sentiments and his opinion about the political affairs of his country. He has spent the last three years at the Oriental academy of Vienna; and he speaks German and French as well as he speaks English.

Longevity in Russia.

Famine and nihilism notwithstanding, Russia seems to be the land in which human life reaches its greatest length. During the year 1891 858 persons died in the land of the czar who were between the ages of 100 and 105; 130 who had reached ages between 115 and 120 also succumbed, while three were reported to the authorities as having died after living to be 150 years or more of age.

HER LIFE IN DANGER

Mrs. Snell Receives Letters Threatening Death.

UNLESS SHE PAYS A LARGE SUM

No Clue to the Identity of the Sender So Far Discovered.

The Letter States that if She Does Not Send $2,000 She Will be Blown Up With Dynamite—Detectives Watch Her House, But the Blackmailers Were Evidently Aware of the Fact—The Widow of the Murdered Chicago Millionaire Greatly Frightened.

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—Mrs. Snell, widow of the murdered millionaire, received a letter some time ago which ran about as follows:

"MADAM—Unless you send us $2,000 we shall take steps to murder you. We will blow you up with dynamite some day when you are stepping into your carriage to take your morning ride. Now treat us fairly and we will treat you the same. If you accept this offer insert a personal in the —— (naming a daily newspaper), saying, 'Send for your hat. G. D.' We will take this as evidence that you intend to deal with us in good faith."

The letter was not signed, and there was not the slightest clue to indicate the identity of the sender, but it threw Mrs. Snell into a fright. She placed the letter in the hands of A. J. Stone, her son-in-law, who notified Inspector Marsh.

Two detectives were sent to the house and remained there for a week, during which time nothing occurred that would throw any light on the matter. Finally the police were called off. On the evening of the day the detectives left a messenger came to the house with a missive in the same handwriting as the previous one, containing the suggestion that the widow had better send "the hat," i. e., the $2,000, by the bearer.

This created a commotion and the police were notified. The boy was thoroughly pumped, but could only say that the man who engaged him was a shabbily dressed young man. There is no clue.

IS IT A BLUFF?

Corbett Says Slavin's Offer to Fight Him in New Orleans is Not Meant.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 16.—Frank Slavin has sent a telegram to the Olympic Club, New Orleans, in which he says he will fight Corbett in that city, March 3, with four-ounce gloves, six rounds, for a purse of $6,000.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The foregoing despatch was shown to Corbett at his home. He said:

"This is another bluff on the part of Slavin. He made the statement some time ago that he could knock me out in six rounds.

"I immediately posted $1,000 as a guarantee that I was ready to give him the chance. Now he wants me to fight for a $5,000 purse. This I won't do.

"I will fight him to a finish on the date he names, or any other date, providing he puts down the cash to cover my deposit. I want to meet the winner of the Slavin Jackson go, and don't want to fight Slavin for a small purse now.

"If Slavin wants to knock me out in six rounds on March 3 I am ready. Slavin must put up his money in any event or I won't notice him."

Corbett's manager, W. A. Brady, corroborated the pugilist in every particular. He added:

"Slavin makes the date March 3 because he knows the Olympic Club will not touch it, as the great Mardi Gras festival occurs at that time."

M'ILVAINE'S EXECUTION

Dr. Moritt Says the Electrical Execution Law is Horrible in the Extreme.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 16.—Evidently the talk about the cruelty of the electrical execution is not at an end. Senator Osborne has received a letter from Dr. J. Moritt, of Poughkeepsie, an old and skillful physician who was a witness at the execution of McIlvaine.

He says in the letter that he has witnessed executions in every land, and has seen men killed by hanging, by sword, by guillotine, by shooting and by the Spanish garrotte, and nothing compares in horribleness with the electrocution. He says that the Spanish garrotte is the only thing that for cruelty equals it. He continues:

"From my medical knowledge, I can assure you that the man was not killed until the second shock. As to losing consciousness, I doubt it by the symptoms I observed."

He asserts that the man would have revived had not the second shock been turned on. The body after death presented a most horrible sight and the face showed that the man died in terrible agony. Dr. Moritt urges the immediate repeal of the law.

Assemblyman Stein has received a letter from an electrician named Gibbons, in Syracuse, and the inventor of an electrical chair. He says the men who have had charge of the electrocutions have all been amateurs and unable to use the chair properly.

Canadian Commissioners Go Home.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The Canadian Reciprocity Commissioners have left for home. The fact that the commissioners were not given power to conclude a reciprocity agreement with the United States being finally settled, there was nothing further to do in regard to the trade relations between the countries. Evidently Lord Salisbury's answers to Sir Julian Pauncefote's cables asking for some power for the commissioners to enter into negotiations with the United States were not satisfactory, for the departure of the commissioners is a somewhat sudden move.

UNIQUE SUGGESTION

A Palace of Silver for the World's Fair.

IT WOULD BE WORTH $400,000,000.

Fifteen Thousand Tons Would Give a Superficial Area of 600,000 Feet.

The Author of This Idea Wants Congress to Permit the Use of the Bullion Now in the Treasury Vaults and the Various Depositories—The Most Beautiful Structure the World Ever Saw Could be Built With an Immense Tower on Which Could be Placed an American Eagle With a Spread of Wing of One Hundred Feet.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—A most unique suggestion for what would prove an interesting exhibit at the World's Fair has been made by a resident of New York to Secretary Foster. The writer says:

"I wish to point out to you that you have in your power, with the consent of Congress if it can be got, to construct the most beautiful and magnificent, as well as the most valuable exhibit the world ever saw, and that out of a material of which the government has an enormous as well as a useless supply.

"I allude to the building of a palace of silver, constructed out of the silver now in bullion and coin in government vaults at the various depositories. This silver is now of no possible use to mankind.

"It cannot be sold, for the law won't allow it; it cannot be put into circulation, for the people won't take it; it cannot be used in redemption of the certificates issued against it, for the people will want gold. Consequently, what better use can be made of it than this?

"If the government could get permission from Congress to recast 15,000 tons of it into slabs of, say 600 pounds and one inch thick, this would give 600,000 superficial feet, out of which could be built the most beautiful structure the world ever saw. It would build a structure 400 feet by 300 feet with a tower 300 feet high, on which could be placed an American eagle with wings of 100 feet spread.

"A silver palace worth $400,000,000 would be an attraction that would draw millions of persons who always went to see something new and grand. Not over a million dollars need be expended in the construction of such a palace, which could be guarded by the army. None of it would be stolen as the pieces would be to heavy.

"Loss from melting and working the silver could be ascertained from the Director of the Mint, but it would not be much.

"Now, if the government of the United States wants to show something to the world that they have never seen before, here's a chance."

SEXTON'S HOT SHOT.

He Turns His Guns on Joseph Chamberlain and Lord Salisbury.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—In the House of Commons Mr. Thomas Sexton, one of the members from Belfast, moved the amendment he gave notice of on February 10, declaring that the Imperial Parliament had shown its inability to legislate for the special interests of Ireland, giving as an instance of this inability the failure of the Land Purchase act of 1891.

Mr. Sexton, during the course of his remarks on the subject, referred to the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain in terms which must have disturbed even the extreme placidity of that gentleman's nature.

Mr. Sexton, said, for instance, that Mr. Chamberlain, having mutinied, was now the commander of a gang of political wreckers who were seeking, by means of a false light, to lure to destruction the vessel which was freighted with Ireland's hopes and desires.

Mr. Sexton also turned his guns upon Lord Salisbury, the Premier, classing him as an "erratic and unruly statesman, a scoffer by nature and a bigot by calculation."

MAY BE DISMISSED

Court Martial Verdict in the Throckmorton Case.

HE IS RECOMMENDED TO MERCY.

The President May Commute the Sentence to Suspension on Reduced Pay.

The Verdict Will Not Be Made Public Until the President Has Formally Acted Upon the Matter, But the Above is the Rumor in War Department—Col. A. P. Morrow Retires and Thus Escapes Court Martial for Disobedience of Orders.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Although the verdict of the court martial in the case of Major Charles B. Throckmorton, who was tried in New York some weeks ago on charges of duplicating his pay accounts, will not be officially announced until the President has formally acted upon the papers, it has become pretty generally known throughout the War Department that the sentence is dismissal.

It is reported, however, that the sentence is accompanied by a recommendation for mercy signed by all the members of the court. This circumstance, coupled with the officer's long service and the trmendous amount of influence at work in his behalf, will probably spare him the loss of his commission.

It is generally expected the President will mitigate the sentence to two or three years' suspension on half or three-quarter pay.

Charges of disobedience of orders reders have been made against Col. A. P. Morrow by General Stanley, commanding the Department of Texas, and a court martial was thought to be imminent, when his friends intervened and induced him to apply for retirement under the thirty year service law, the War Department agreeing to pigeonhole the charges on condition that the application for retirement should follow.

The arrangement will not be fully consumated until next August, when Colonel Morrow will complete the thirty years necessary to entitle him to retirement. The War Department has relieved him from his command and ordered him to his home in anticipation of that event.

The charges against Colonel Morrow are based upon certain actions of that officer during the recent Garza campaign. One of the principal charges, constituting disobedience of orders, recites that Colonel Morrow issued passes to men of his regiment to pass over the border into Mexico in the face of positive instructions prohibiting such action issued by General Stanley.

Colonel Morrow, it will be remembered, was tried by court martial in this city a few years ago on charges of duplicating his pay accounts and was suspended for three years. He was an aide to General Sheridan for a number of years.

FOUND DEAD IN THE ICE.

The Mysterious Disappearance of Mrs. Force Is Explained.

Jesse and Fred. Baldwin, sons of Dayton Baldwin, while skating on the Passaic river late Saturday afternoon, saw a strange object imbedded in the ice. They soon found it was the body of a woman. They returned to their home and informed their parents. The neighbors hurried to the spot and one of them recognized the woman as Mrs. William Force, of Madison, who mysteriously left her home on Dec. 29.

Mr. Baldwin drove to Madison to notify justice Rathbun. Coroner Hughson, of Morristown, reached Summit early yesterday morning and gave permission to remove the body to Sampson's undertaking establishment in New Providence. He has decided that an inquest is unecessary, and has granted a burial permit.

William Force, the husband, identified the remains. Remarks he made at the undertaker's shocked the residents.

Ida Kendall was Mrs. Force's name before marriage. She was about twenty-eight, and the oldest daughter of Joshua Kendall, a well-to-do farmer in New Providence. Her mother is prostrated with grief. She was not permitted to see the remains, which will be buried at once.

The body was found about two hundred yards north of Burrill's Bridge. It is surposed that when the woman left her home in Madison she started to reach her parents' home in New Providence, about a mile from where the body was found. She was about six miles from her own home. She had five children, and was soon to become a mother. Friends say she was despondent on this account, and had said she would sooner be dead than alive. On the night she disappeared she left this note on the bureau:

"You need not look for me. I have drowned myself."

Florence Mission Workers at Reform Hall.

[CONTRIBUTED.]

There is no city of its size in the country that is more blessed with churches and charities than Plainfield, and as a result we often have the privilege of hearing fine speakers from foreign lands, and we may sit at ease and reap the fruitage of life-denying labors. Sometimes we welcome those at work nearer home, in the slums of our own cities, but it is a rare treat to look into the faces of the faithful few and realize how great need there is for greater zeal to snatch these thousands of human souls out of the vortex underneath the beautiful surface of city life. We always consider Philadelphia as a model abode of purity, but we shall hear from those engaged in the great mission work there the true conditions to-morrow afternoon in Reform Hall. They come to us at personal inconvenience without thought of recompense on their way home from the Florence mission, and we should all welcome them by our presence and sympathy. We are not personally acquainted, but each comes with a loving message, and as they stand among those best loved in their churches also we extend the welcome to our homes to them in turn.

Come and bring your friends at 3, and 7:30 in the evening.

Curious Things from New Market.

President Allen of Alfred University is busily engaged in classifying conchological specimens. In company with Geo. H. Babcock of this city and with the Smithsonian Institute, he has been puzzling over some exceedingly curious lithological specimens found at New Market. Whether these be of natural or human workmanship is the question.

High Scores on the Crescent Alleys.

VanEmburgh and Lyman did some fine bowling in a friendly contest on the Crescent League alleys yesterday afternoon. The scores:

PARTICULAR MENTION.

The Alfred Centre university paper says: "Miss Susie Emerson, Ph. B., '89, is studying voice and piano in New York, while living at Plainfield, N. J."

James P. Powers, of East Front street, has purchased the Benedict tract of land, bounded by Second street, Berckman street and Midway avenue. It consists of 3½ acres, and will be cut up into building lots and otherwise improved.

Horace G. Adams and John V. Beekman of Franklin council, No. 41, of this city, are attending the session of the Oriental courts, connected with the Jr. O. A. M. of this State, at Trenton, to-day.

Paul V. Roux, private secretary to Senator Jones of Nevada, and secretary of the committee on contingent expenses in the United States Senate, spent Sunday in Plainfield as the guest of Noel Verrier. He is one of the most genial and best informed men in Washington, and is an old newspaper man.

Mr. Wincoop of Dunellen, president of the Dunellen Congress of N. A. E. A., is a representative to the National convention of that society now in session at Hartford. It is understood that Mr. Wincoop is a candidate for the National congress, and it is hoped he may secure enough votes to elect him, as he is one of the most able men in the order and would represent New Jersey very satisfactorily.

Old remedies under new names are being constantly introduced to the public, but Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup still maintains its preeminence.

Lathe Hand's Chat of the Tool Works.

The Pond Machine Tool Company's Beneficial association was formed in November, 1891, with a membership of 230, mostly machinists, and although we had the misfortune to lose two of our members almost at the first start we are in a prosperous condition. The dues are ten cents per week, deducted from each member's pay by the paymaster of the works, who is the financial secretary, and the benefits are $5 per week in case of sickness and $100 at death or $50 for death of a member's wife. But on account of the above-mentioned deaths coming so quickly and for which we were hardly prepared an assessment of 25 cents per week for six weeks was made, which will again put us well on our feet, which is quite remarkable as we have had over 40 sick with the grip alone. But with our worthy president, John W. James, vice-president Thos. Fox, treasurer Richard B. York, and secretary A. H. Leivers, at the helm, we are bound to gain the top notch with the city relief associations.

We understand that James C. Greensmith and wife will leave on Wednesday for their new home at Portland, Me.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of Watchung Lodge, 167, I. A. of M., was held in the I. O. O. F. hall on Second street, Saturday evening. After the business was through and two candidates were initiated brother Chas. Burns as chairman of the committee on entertainment took the chair and brothers Turner, York, Garve and Burns sang several songs and brothers Leighs and Veglard gave recitations, while brother A. H. Leivers gave a spirited address. A programme similar to the above will be given each night under the head "of the good of the order", so boys don't fail of a meeting or you will miss a treat.

LATHE HAND.

The Most Charming Young Women Will Participate.

One of the most novel and charming affairs of this season of varied entertainments will be given in the Casino the evening of February 28. The Chronothanatoletron—or in plain English the Time and Death Annihilator—is something entirely new in this vicinity, but it has been given with great success at Wellesley college, is in its present production under the direction and supervision of Wellesley graduates, and is participated in by a number of the most charming young women in the city.

The object of this entertainment is a most charitable one. The "Y's" are interesting themselves this winter in drawing from the streets a class of boys and girls who seem to be reached by no other means, and it is from such children that numbers of our future men and women will grow.

Tickets may be obtained for fifty cents, from members of the union, or may be purchased at the door on the evening of the entertainment. As the number of tickets will necessarily be limited, it will be "Y's" to secure them promptly.

Linking Three Great Cities.

The Alton railroad has linked together three great cities, Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City. If you are planning a western trip take the Alton road and you will be sure of courtesy from the train men, comforts and conveniences that no other road offers free to its patrons, and swift and safe transit from the east to your destination. For particulars write to Fred. L. Chase, the accommodating general passenger agent, at 105 South Ninth street, Philadelphia.

TYPHUS PATIENTS FROM TRENTON.

They Were Transported Across the State to New York Hospitals.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—No new cases of typhus fever were reported this morning, and up to the latest reports no deaths had occurred on North Brother Island.

Seven new cases were discovered yesterday afternoon and sent at once to the pest-house on North Brother Island. The patients were all found at 42 East Twelfth street.

Dr. Edson of the Health Department received a despatch yesterday afternoon from Trenton, N. J., asking if he would take charge of two Italians who were fellow-passengers on the Massilia with the fever-infected Russian Jews. Dr. Edson replied that under no circumstances would he take charge of the men. In spite of this, however, two men, Vitto d'Arrighi and Giovania Phillipo, were brought to the city late last night. They were taken to the receiving-rooms over the ambulance stable at 128 Worth street, where they now are. One of the inspectors of the Board of Health examined the men this morning. There were no symptoms of typhus fever. The men will be kept in their present quarters for two or three days, however, in order that the disease may have an opportunity to make its presence known, if latent.

Great indignation is felt at the action of the Trenton authorities, and stringent methods to prevent a recurrence of this act will be taken. President Wilson of the Health Board has given order for the arrest of any person caught bringing people supposed to have typhus fever into New York.

SAFE AND EFFECTIVE.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS are the safest and most effective remedy for indigestion, irregularity of the bowels, biliousness, headache, dizziness, malaria, or any disease arising from an impure state of the blood. They have been in use in this country for over fifty years, and the thousands of unimpeachable testimonials from those who have used them, and their constantly increasing sale, is incontrovertible evidence that they perform all that is claimed for them.

Sold in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar-coated.

DAINTY DEVOTION TO DELSARTE.

Remarkable Experience of Two Young Men Where the Crescent and Broadway Merge.

An extremely good-looking young woman somewhat negligently attired all in white, and whose mother either did n't know she was out or did n't care where she was, posed in the centre of the triangle opposite the Crescent Avenue church at a very late hour the other night like the ghost of our soldiers' monument and went through a series of gestures all by herself. Two young men of irreproachable connections, on their way home from a social function on the west side of town, came up, and, observing the lone female figure, which had become as still as death when they approached, stopped to investigate. They leaned on the fence on the LaGrande avenue corner for fully five minutes, but the object of their solicitude stirred not. Then one of the young men drew a bad nickel from his pocket and tossed it in the air. The other young man muttered "Heads", the thrower returned the coin to his pocket and with "All right, here goes" started across the street. His companion whispered a parting and relapsed against the fence. The adventurous youth went over to the edge of the triangle, and, intuitively sizing up the motionless figure, murmured softly:

"Ah there, Miss Lonesome: don't you know the night air is bad for a delicate constitution?"

The maiden slowly turned and regarded him with the cold, cynical gaze of infinite superiority, and the youth began to look as if he wished he had n't come, but there was the other fellow on the fence across the street, and he had to make a brace. Retreat was not to be considered for an instant. So he summoned up all his nerve, and, walking straight over to the pretty mystery, said blithely:

"Now, see here, young woman, I do n't want to appear impertinent or inquisitive, but you will admit that your presence, alone and unprotected, in this place, at this hour, is unconventional to say the least, and I merely request your assurance that it is all right and I will gladly leave you to your own devices."

While he spoke the sweet creature had been gazing with the delightfully vacant stare of a Grecian goddess into the starry vault above, but she lowered her eyes when he finished, and the faintest suspicion of a blush came to her pretty cheeks.

"You can go on then"—she said, musically.—"It is all right."

The young man marveled greatly, but, not knowing what else to do, politely tipped his hat and turned to go, when there there came running down Broadway with a rush as of many cyclones a middle-aged, wild-eyed gentleman clad in his last year's trousers, a smoking jacket, and a pair of suspenders. He made a deadset for the young man and the beautiful maiden, and, seeing no opportunity for escape, the youth stood his ground like one of Rider Haggard's Zulus. He was resolved not to move, come what might, and this determination was materially augmented when the young lady at his side gave a little shriek of despair, and, throwing her pretty arms about his neck, besought his protection. The elderly angel of vengeance from up Broadway came along-side at this crisis and puffed out:

"Where is that girl; where is she?"

This was unnecessary, as he could see perfectly well where she was, and so no one volunteered a reply.

"What are you doing out of your bed at this hour, you vixen? Who is this young vagabond you have picked up from the gutter? Where is your overskirt and basque and shawl, I want to know?"

The lovely girl wept, and the young man held her closer and eyed the wrathful intruder and kept quiet.

"Why don't you answer?"—roared the irate parent.—"You can't, eh? Ha, ha! You would elope, would you? I guess not! Ha, ha!"—and he leaped in the air and gnashed his teeth. Then the beautiful girl raised her shapely head and said, calmly enough:

"Papa, this young gentleman has nothing whatever to do with the case. He simply saw me here and stopped to say good evening. I came out here to practice my Delsarte, which neither you nor mamma will allow at home, and I can't do in daylight without being taken for a lunatic. See, I've got my Delsarte robes on, and I'd only gotten through the fifth pose. I wish you'd kept yourself away; but you always were so horrid and officious and"—

"Come with me, girl"—the father sternly broke in, as he led her homeward.—"Don't let me hear another word from you. I've had enough of this Delsarte business. And, as for you, young man,"—turning on the youth—"for goodness sake don't breathe a word of this sad affair. Here is a cigar that I can vouch for—smoke and be quiet. I would n't have this get to the men in the club car for two hundred dollars!"

But the other young man, who had been left across the street against the fence, although unseen, had not been dreaming all the time.

CHASMS ON THE SUN'S FACE.

Peculiar Characteristics of a Solar Spot that Is Now Visible.

Astronomers are intensely interested just now in the great sun spot recently developed on the eastern limb of the sun. By means of a piece of smoked glass anybody may observe this great chasm on the sun's face, and it will well repay observation. A warning must be given, however, against the inexperienced use of an opera glass in this connection, as the concentration of the sun's powerful rays is sufficient to crack the glass or burn the eyes.

Sun spots will probably be much talked of this year, as a spot period is now approaching, and during a maximum the sun's surface is hardly ever free from them. Sometimes as many as forty or fifty will be visible at once, while at a minimum not one will be seen for weeks. The spot period is about eleven years. The last maximum was in 1883 84, but it was a year behind time.

It has been established that there is a decided connection between these violent disturbances on the sun and so-called magnetic storms on earth—such manifestations, for example, as the gorgeous aurora borealis.

Sun spots are vast cavities on the photosphere of the sun, and it is as yet uncertain whether they are caused by or are the cause of eruptions on that intensely-heated luminary. They are usually found in two zones extending from 5° to 40° of latitude north and south of the sun's equator, and develop rapidly, lasting but a comparatively short time—from a few days to a month or two. One spot was known to have lasted for over fifteen months, but that was an exception.

They are usually quite irregular in shape, and are composed of two parts—namely, the umbra, or black centre, which is dark because filled with cooler gases and vapors which consequently absorb light; and the fringing gray penumbra, consisting of long, feathery filaments reaching toward the middle of the umbra, and usually very lovely in form. The diameter of an umbra varies from 500 to 1,000 miles in a small spot to tremendous tents of 50,000 to 60,000 miles in a large one, into which our little earth might be dropped many times without making an impression on the penumbra.

Anneke Jans Claimants Active.

The Anneke Jans claimants, many of whom live in this city, are stirring again. Clinton Roosevelt, an old lawyer who has been interested in their case since he was a young man, has come to the conclusion that previous efforts to oust the Trinity corporation from the enormously valuable real estate it holds were taken on a wrong tack, and that now the State should be invoked to seek the title to a big share of the property by escheat. In that case the informants would get 25 per cent. of the value of the property, and as they would be the heirs something like one-quarter would be realized on the claims.

Mr. Roosevelt has submitted a lot of papers to the Attorney General, and the heirs are waiting to see what that officer will do. Mr. Roosevelt held an informal reception in his office, 46 Exchange place, New York, the other day, which was attended by some of the claimants. Most of the callers were veterans in the pursuit of the estate phantom, but there were some younger persons who did not appear to be as sanguine as their elders of ultimately securing Trinity's wealth.

Mr. Roosevelt explained his plan to all who came. He referred those curious about the Anneke Jans case and claimants to John A. Anderson of Brooklyn, who is head of the Anneke Jans Bogardus Literary association, which has 640 members, every one of whom has paid in $50 for the cause.

The Last Man of a Nation.

Most men possessed of a healthy imagination have at times pictured to themselves the gradual decay of a mighty race until at last one sole survivor remained, and have wondered just what sort of a life he would lead in his loneliness. That the last man of a nation actually exists is graphically told by V Z Reed, who in the February issue of Munsey's Magazine gives a most unique account, with appropriate pictures, of the only living representative of the lost tribe of Pueblo Indians. Other delightful articles in the number are: "Berlin, the City of the Kaiser", "The Episcopal Church in New York", "Stephen B. Elkins", "Sir John Millais", and "The Affair of Morris Davidson", a complete and highly dramatic novel by Matthew White, jr. In addition there is a choice variety of short stories, poems and editorial matter. Munsey's is one of the brightest and most readable monthlies published. It has already firmly established itself in the hearts of the people. One of its chief beauties is that it is distinctly American. It is judiciously edited and finely illustrated.

No Hill For Jersey Democrats.

The Bergen County Democrat of Hackensack, N. J., edited by State Senator Winton, says: "Upon a careful examination of our Democratic exchanges in this State we find but two that seem to endorse Gov. Hill's midwinter convention, or speak favorably of his nomination for the Presidency. Our old friend Vanderhoven of the Passaic Herald has kept David B. Hill's name at the top of its editorial columns for months past, while the Newark Journal, which in this case reflects the views of an exceedingly small percentage of the Democratic vote of Essex county, feebly supports Hill."

STRONG WORDS FROM MR. MILLS.

The Evangelist Makes a Stirring Appeal to Men in the Race Track Battle.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills has heard of the fierce fight being made against the race-track bills, and especially the grand rally which is to be made at Trenton to-day.

The following ringing words of endorsement and appeal he telegraphed to the Elizabeth Journal yesterday morning in the hope that they might decide some who would otherwise be indifferent and unmoved:

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 15.

My whole heart is with the good people in their struggle for purity and against the powers of hell. God says, "Woe unto them that decree unrighteous decrees"; His curse will abide on all who sanction the "framing of mischief by law". The people made the calf that Aaron made, and neutrality, at this time, is criminal indifference. My great desire is that all unselfish people may come to God's help in this battle, and if my influence could add anything of courage to any individual it would be a cause for eternal thanksgiving. There is but one side for any true man.

B. FAY MILLS.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 20, 1893.

Having been a sufferer for sometime past with billousness, &c, I was recommended to use Dr. Deane's Dyspepsi-Pills. I did so, and am pleased to find that they are as recommended, a cure for those ailments. I therefore subscribe myself cheertully in recommending them to any who may suffer with those complaints.—E. B. NAAR, News Editor True American.

Testing the Borough Engine.

Warren engine has been thoroughly overhauled and was tested last night, under the direction of foreman Fairchild, on Grove street near Green brook. It was found to be in the pink of condition. Water from the Water Supply hydrants was used, and a singular effect was produced in houses on the line of the company's mains. The sudden checkings, spurtings and other manipulations of the tremendous pressure in the mains caused severe vibrations in the pipes and meters in houses as far distant as Grandview avenue, where houses fairly trembled under the pulsations in the piped-up water. The matter will probably be remedied by the Water company, and such vibrations prevented in the future. They are said to be due to air in the pipes.

Want Senator Hill to Speak.

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 15.—The Legislature has unanimously adopted a resolution inviting Senator Hill to address it any time before March 3.

On the one hand there's $500 in cash; on the other, there's a cure for your Catarrh. One of these two things has got to come to you—that's promised and agreed by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

But, do you think they'd make any such promise if they weren't sure that you'd be cured? That has come to thousands, through this Remedy, when everything else has failed. By its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, the worst chronic cases of Catarrh in the Head have been perfectly and permanently cured.

That's the reason they're willing to take such a risk. This is what they say, clearly and plainly: "If we can't cure your Catarrh, no matter how bad your case or of how long standing, we'll pay you $500 in cash." If they have faith enough to say that, isn't it safe for you to have a little faith, too?

BEAUTY IN THE SADDLE.

Bold and Daring Horsemanship in Virginia.

Tournaments Conducted According to the Traditions Handed Down from the Age of Chivalry—Women Who Know How to Ride.

The bold and dashing horsemanship displayed by the Lees and Ashbys, by Jackson, Stewart, Mosby, and others who were the leading spirits of the confederate cavalry service during the late war excited the wonder and admiration even of their enemies, and developed the fact that the Virginians are by nature the most accomplished and fearless riders on American soil.

Nowhere in the South to-day can be seen more splendid exhibitions of the bona fide fox hunt, the old-time tournament and cross-country riding than are given by the inhabitants of a little town called Warrentown in Piedmont, Va., situated among the foothills of the Blue Ridge range of mountains in the midst of a beautiful pastoral region, which is chiefly devoted to stock raising, and largely inhabited by the F. F. V.'s of the old regime and their descendants, who have recovered from the financial and social distresses occasioned by the loss of their slaves, and are reviving many of those delightful customs and pastimes which formerly prevailed among them and rendered southern life so unique and enjoyable.

Here it was, says the Chicago Tribune, that Ashby and Mosby were reared and had their homes, and the latter made this romantic country of hill and dale, of stream and woodland, the scene of those daring raids which so crippled the northern forces when operating in that section of the state, and gained for him the sobriquet of "guerrilla."

The battles of Manassas and Bull Run were fought only twenty miles away, where the gallant boy soldier, Quincy Marr, was the first to lose his life on the confederate side. McDowell's splendid army, 100.000 strong, camped within the limits of the pretty village, and were so touched by the nobility of the women, whose homes had been appropriated and turned into hospitals, that they left its quiet precincts unharmed and its inhabitants unmolested. It is not remarkable, then, that a people who before the war were fond of the chase and during the two years and more of that bloody conflict literally lived in the saddle, should be the riders and marksmen that they are to-day and have a penchant for the sports of the field.

The summer in that country is the season for tournaments, which are conducted with all the pomp and military mock of a joust in the days of "Merrie England," when a chivalry had its seat in the hearts of men and inspired them to deeds of romantic valor.

Young, unmarried men are only qualified to enter the lists of these tournaments for the honor of crowning "the queen of love and beauty." They assume titles for the occasion which are suggestive of knighthood and are supposed to ride for the women who reigns over their affections and might be regarded as a possible bride. The picturesque costumes of the contestants, their gayly caparisoned steeds, the silver-tongued orator and his grandiloquent charge to the knights, the inspiration of the fair spectators whose hearts palpitate with expectancy, the bearing off of the victorious ring, and the old-fashioned coronation ball that follows at night, which opens with the address of the hero of the day and the crowning of the queen and her maids of honor, the dance of the royal set, and the grand finale in which the assembled company, young and old, unite in that jolly dance of the olden time—the Virginia reel—form a picture of social life that recalls the manners and amusements which were common to the south thirty years ago, but were wiped out and forgotten through the war—as well as the men.

The women of Virginia are distinguished for their horsemanship, and many of them ride like centaurs before they get out of short dresses. In the fall of the year they can be seen riding across the country unattended, and frequently participate with their husbands, brothers and beaux in the excitements of the chase. The Virginia girl is generally conceded to be charming under any circumstances, but when she assumes her riding habit and mounts into the saddle she is an outdoor picture of grace and health that has no replica in the gallery of nature!

Amber Incense.

A large quantity of amber, particularly the coarser kind, is exported to China, where it is used in the form of powder in incense. It is used also in the manufacture of varnishes for carriages, builders and photographers. The kind used for carriages is expensive, and it takes a long time to dry, but it is harder and more impenetrable than any varnish known.

LITTLE RHODY'S HOME.

The Building to Be Erected at Chicago by Rhode Island.

The plans for the world's fair building which will be used by Rhode Island exhibitors at the Columbian exposition in Chicago have been completed and the design is herewith reproduced.

The building, as the majority of the other buildings to be constructed, will be built of wood, surmounted by a flagstaff. It will be merely a temporary affair, but will be substantial and convenient.

It will be a two-story structure and built after the Doric style of architecture, with large towering pillars resting on porches at either end. In front the main entrance will be through three circular arches into a circular porch twenty feet in diameter. This opens into the main hall, which is 20x24 feet. On the first story, opening out of the hall, is a room 12x24, which will be occupied by the secretary. Just beyond this is the winding staircase to the second floor. At the right of the entrance and opening from the center of the main hall, through a wide archway, is the woman's room. This is 12x24 feet. In the rear of the building on the first floor are located the water closets. Directly in the center of the main hall, in the rear, is an exit through a passageway to an arbor which is connected by a walk with the main building. At the top of the winding stairway is a long landing, 7x20, which leads to the gallery on the second floor. In the front of the building, directly over the entrance below, is a circular room set apart for the governor. It is 20 feet in diameter. At the right and left of this are two rooms, 12x14, set apart for the use of the commissioners. In the rear, opposite the stairway, is another small room which can be used as a store room.

On the ends of the building are spacious porches with four pillars towering to the second story above. Over the entrance, supported by the architrave, is a cornice bearing the Rhode Island shield and the large letters "State Building of Rhode Island." The roof is encircled by a balustrade.

The building is considered to be the best that could be constructed for the amount which the appropriation allowed. The cost of construction will be $8,000 and will certainly come within a $10,000 limit. Work on the building will be commenced as soon as possible and will be superintended by the architects, who will be in Chicago from time to time.

THE POISON ALARM.

An Electric Safeguard Against Careless Drug Clerks.

In order to overcome one of the dangers in the compounding of medicines, due to carelessness, an inventor has devised the electrical arrangement, shown in the illustration. The mechanism, says the Philadelphia Record, is intended to automatically announce any changes made in the position of bottles containing poisons.

It frequently happens that the careless drug clerk in taking a harmless drug from the shelf by mistake uses a poisonous drug, owing to forgetfulness to read the label. In the arrangement shown the bottles containing the drugs that should be handled with care are placed in a stand, in the bottom of which there is a device similar to an ordinary push button.

When the bottle is in its proper place it compresses this arrangement, but should the bottle be removed a contact is made and the bell rings, advising every one in the store that a poison bottle has been taken down.

Etiquette of Scarf Pins.

There is an etiquette in scarf pins that must be learned. In the big, irregular scarf a pin is absolutely necessary. The big, made-up scarf must also have the pin. In the self-tied De Joinville the scarf pin should pierce the cross folds at the intersection. No matter how irregular the fold, the head of the pin must appear in the center of the scarfing. For the scarf pin must appear to be doing some service to be correct. With the regulation Teck, which is palpably made up, no pin can be worn, as it would appear useless, and therefore in bad taste. The four-in-hand tied in this form needs the pin right in the middle of the tie at the lower end of the cross fold—and there it should be placed. A Windsor tie or cravat must never have any jewelry. The scarf pin, after all, is "going out."

QUITE A ROMANCE

The Ruggedness of Love's Road Demonstrated.

WEDDED UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

Queer Matrimonial Complications Encountered by John Dwyer and Mary Clear.

After a Secret Marriage the Bride's Father Carries Her Off—Then the Husband Gets a Writ of Habeas Corpus, and Secures His Wife, But She Would Not Embark on the Honeymoon Until the Rites Had Been Performed By a Priest—He Only Consents to Marry Them After Tears, Appeals and Protestations of Repentance.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 17.—A romance that has been interesting Dutchess County people for some time ended last night in a quiet wedding in the village of Wappingers Falls. The story is remarkable inasmuch as it embraces all the elements that go to make up a romantic novel.

John Dwyer and Mary Clear became engaged at Wappingers Falls some months ago. The bans were published at St. Mary's Catholic Church two weeks ago last Sunday.

Mary's father, Michael Clear, a prosperous farmer of Sylvan Lake, Dutchess County, hurried to Wappingers Falls, forbid the marriage and created a scene in the village.

The couple, however, were bent on matrimony, and were secretly married by Justice Hignell on the same day.

A few hours later Michael Clear compelled his daughter to accompany him to Sylvan Lake, leaving the disconsolate groom of an hour to ponder on the ruggedness of love's way.

Last Friday Dwyer obtained, through Counsellor George Wood, a writ of habeas corpus from Judge Barnard, demanding that Michael Clear produce the bride, his daughter Mary, in court on Saturday morning.

Farmer Clear learned for the first time that his daughter was married when the constable and Dwyer drove to his door with the writ last Friday night. Clear relented at once and permitted the bride and groom to meet for the first time since their marriage, which occurred on February 2.

Then a new trouble developed. The bride, being a devout Catholic, was not satisfied with the civil marriage, and refused to embark upon the honeymoon until married according to the laws of the Roman Catholic Church.

Rev. Dr. Mahoney, of Wappingers Falls, was appealed to, but he told the couple to go their way, as they had already deceived him and disobeyed the church by going before a justice of the peace to be married.

This nearly prostrated the bride, who would not be satisfied unless properly married in the church. The couple earnestly pleaded, cried and said they repented of their behavior, and the good priest's sympathies were finally aroused and he consented to marry them.

The wedding took place last night and a happier couple, after the culmination of their troubles, it would be hard to find.

The bride is 18 years old and very pretty. John Dwyer is 26 years old and is connected with the print works of Wappingers Falls.

Fertilizer as an Issue.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., Feb. 17. A petition signed by 172 citizens of Egg Harbor Township and Pleasantville has been presented to the Board of Health, asking for the repeal of the code which forbids the use of garbage as a fertilizer, after the farmers are placed under a $1,000 bond to use it judiciously. The Board refuses to act, and the farmers are indignant, claiming that they will be driven to the wall unless allowed to use this cheap fertilizer. The matter will undoubtedly become an election issue.

Railroaders Depressed.

EASTON, Pa., Feb. 17.—Fifteen men employed in the bridge department of the Lehigh Valley Railroad have been discharged. The reason assigned was lack of work. EXECUTION BY GAS.

A Syracuse Physician Suggests a New Method of Killing Murderers.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 17.—Assemblyman Stein, who has gained considerable notoriety on account of his opposition to the electrocution law, is in constant receipt of letters from all parts of the State commending his action.

He has received a letter from Dr. Gibbons, of Syracuse, the inventor of the improved chair used in electrocution.

The doctor not only disapproved of killing by electricity, but suggests a novel method for killing murderers by gas while they are sleeping. He says:

"I would suggest the execution of murderers by means of a gas, such as carbonic oxide, or any of the poisonous gases, the gas to be used while the murderer is asleep.

"The method I would suggest is to have the cell of the criminal airtight when the door is closed, except the window, which could easily be made so on the outside without disturbing the prisoner. When the prisoner falls asleep the window should be closed and the gas turned on from a tank, or the city gas might be used. With either of these you could kill a man in a small cell before he could raise a hand.

"But the law should provide that the criminal be killed while asleep. This does away with the sight of the electric chair or gallows."

Dr. Gibbons sent with his letter drawings from which a better idea of his plan might be obtained.

LATTER DAY SAINTS MEET.

They Now Hold Property in Independence, Whence They Were Driven.

PLANO, Ill., Feb. 17.—The conference of the Northern Division of the Latter Day Saints is at present in session in this city.

The numerical strength of the Church is now 30,000. They boast of the fact that their greatest strength is in Iowa, with 5,000 members, where less illiteracy prevails than in any other State in the Union.

Their next conference will be held at Independence, Mo., where they were driven out and dispossessed of their property in 1838. Here they now have a membership of 800 and are finishing a $40,000 edifice.

TO CATHOLIC FRANCE

Pope Leo's Declaration to the Republic.

IN WHICH HE PREACHES PEACE.

Church and State Have Separat Missions and Should Not Clash.

France Shall Rise Again, But the Government Should Keep From Vain and Irritating Persecution of Her Citizens and Catholics Should Cease Fighting the Republic—The United States the Model that France Should Take.

PARIS, Feb. 17.—The Pope has written the following declaration. It is published by the "Petit Journal."

"My desire and the wish of the Church is that France should be happy."

"She is a nation whose pious mind and generous character, though they may not always keep her fast in the straight path which is best suited to her interests, soon repair all faults and show her the clear truth.

"I pray (and I act in accordance with my prayer) that, despite all resistance, there may come an end to the dissensions and the sterile quarrels which weaken her.

"All her citizens should meet upon the ground of legality. Each individual may cherish his own preferences. But when in the domain of action nothing else exists but the government which France has chosen.

"The Republic is as legitimate a form of government as any other.

"I have just received a communication from the president of the committee of the Chicago World's Fair asking the Holy See to take part in that great American undertaking. And the United States, which constitute a republic, grow greater every day despite the drawbacks incidental to their boundless liberty. There, too, the Catholic Church develops without clashing with the the State. The two Powers act in perfect harmony, as they should in all lands when neither infringes upon the rights of the other.

"Liberty is indeed the base and the foundation of relations between the civil power and religious conscience.

"The Church aspires before all to liberty. May my voice, which speaks with authority, be heard, and may my aims and attitude no longer be distorted by unfounded attacks.

"What suits the United States is still more suited to republican France. To all Frenchmen who visit me I speak the same language. I wish that language to be known by all. I regret that certain persons in high places should not dare to proclaim publicly, as they should, the efforts that I make for the peace and the prosperity of your noble nation, which I regard ever as the eldest daughter of the Church.

"In this course I persist, and I encourage all who enter on it steadfastly help me in my task.

"The Church should keep to its true mission. It should reform souls, inculcate the spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion. The Church should take an interest in the condition of the weak. My assertion of the rights of workingmen should facilitate and hasten the restoration of internal peace and diminish the insignificant minority which strives to disturb the public mind and prevent union in your country—a union indispensible to the fulfilment of its high destinies.

"Thanks to her strong constitution, France will rise to her old greatness in spite of her foes.

"I learn with joy that, though she boasts such abundant military resources and such valiant sons, France has not faltered in her prudence and patience.

"If she will but free herself from the dissentions that check her development and paralyze her influence; if she will but restain from vain harassing and persecuting, she will soon regain the conspicuous place and glorious rank in the world which of right belong to her."

This language of the Pope will make a great impression in France, where the adhesion of His Holiness to the Republic will cause widespread satisfaction.

Europe will now understand that the Holy See is for Faance and against the Triple Alliance.

It will no doubt be gratifying to the United States to find that the Sovereign Pontiff takes them as a model. Liberty of conscience is nowadays the highest title to glory a country can produce.

PARKERS' DANGER.

The Appearance of the Allegheny River Ice Gorge Alarming.

PARKERS, Pa., Feb. 17.—The Allegheny river is more than seventeen feet deep at Parkers' Landing bridge, and is gorged for miles above and below.

The river at Parkers runs clear, but notwithstanding the immense amount of ice that floats past, it fails to move the gorge. The ice is about two feet along the roadway of the bridge, and about twelve feet from the bridge iron.

The river is steadily rising and the gorge is becoming more completely welded together. The present appearance of the field of ice is alarming.

The mayor of Parkers has telegraphed to the government officials in Pittsburg in regard to opening the gorge if possible at Brady, in hopes of saving this place from the threatened danger. The present gorge is the worst this town has ever experienced. The weather is clear and cold.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 17.—A large quantity of nitro-glycerine has been shipped and it will be distributed at various points along the river from Parkers to Brady's Bend to break up the ice pack.

Nine years ago Parkers was inundated by a gorge and several houses carried down the river.

The Bavarian System Better.

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—Considerable sensation has been caused in military circles by Chancellor von Caprivi's concession that the Bavarian system of military trials, which brings upon the offender the weight of public knowledge and opinion, has a better effect than the secret Prussian method. The Kaiser has lately been trying to harmonize the Bavarian system with that of the rest of the Empire to which the Bavarians objected.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—Between 8,000 and 9,000 persons went to Madison Square Garden last night to see James J. Corbett, the California boxer, try to best three men, each in three rounds.

Corbett's opponents were Joe Lannon, of Boston, who was a sparring partner of John L. Sullivan for a long time; Bob Caffrey, of Philadelphia, and Bill Spillings, of Rochester, all heavyweights, of course.

There was great trouble in getting into the building, as the crowd fairly blocked the only entrance from Madison avenue, and caused a jam that neither police nor the garden officials could lighten.

There were a number of good exhibitions of sparring before the event of the evening, over which William Muldoon, the wrestler, acted as master of ceremonies.

An unusual thing happened in one of these. Muldoon was not satisfied that a pair of local scrappers were doing their best, and disqualified them for "faking," assuring the spectators that neither would receive any pay.

On Corbett's appearance he was heartily cheered. Jim Daly, of Philadelphia, was in his corner. His first opponent was Bill Spillings, of Rochester, who after two minutes sparring was knocked down twice by smashes on the jaw, and then said he had enough.

Bob Caffrey, of Philadelphia, came up next, and went down twice in forty-five seconds. Then he quit like his predecessor.

When Joe Lannon came out he met with a great reception, and during all his bout a majority of the spectators seemed to sympathize with him, for every time he hit Corbett, and he did it often, they cheered him.

Corbett did not succeed in knocking Lannon out, though he tried hard to do so. He did not even knock him down. Lannon put up an excellent show and landed on Corbett's body several times with force.

Corbett, on the other hand, did not appear to as good advantage as usual, and missed many blows he sent out to do work, neither was he so shifty as ordinarily.

At infighting Corbett did some hugging, but not as much as Lannon. Even the little, on Corbett's side, surprised his friends. The Californian was plainly not at his best strength. One punch in the stomach that Lannon gave him in the second round stirred him up considerably.

In the third round Corbett was more active and had Lannon very tired. He got in on face and body, and Lannon could not respond.

If one more round had been fought Corbett might have knocked his man out, and, as it was, earned the decision on points.

Pope Leo Gives Audience to a World's Fair Commissioner.

ROME, Feb. 17.—Pope Leo gave an audience to a member of the Chicago World's Fair Committee, who kissed the hand of His Holiness, and, by the request of the Pope, gave a brief explanation of the circumstances and objects of the Exposition.

The speaker urged that Italy, as the birthplace of Columbus, ought to take a strong interest in the Fair, and also reminded His Holiness of the close connection of the papacy with the discovery and early settlement of America.

Pope Leo asked several questions about Chicago, to which the visitor replied, explaining the growth, population and extent of the city.

The Pontiff said that he would take steps to stimulate Catholic interest in the Fair, and would especially commend the subject to the Holy Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith. The Pope also promised to pray for Chicago.

CARVED HIS OPPONENT.

Two Lawyers Engage in a Disgraceful Affray at Macon.

MACON, Ga., Feb. 17.—A disgraceful affray took place between Arthur Dasher and Hope Polhill, two young lawyers, in the ladies' parlor of the public library.

The two young men were acting as commissioners in a railroad case when a dispute arose as to some point to be recorded in the papers they were drawing up.

Polhill called Dasher a scoundrel and the latter retaliated by striking Polhill in the face. Polhill tried to respond in kind, but Dasher, who is a skillful boxer, warded off his blows, at the same time opening a small pocket knife with which he proceeded to carve up his opponent.

When the men were finally separated Poihill had an ugly gash in the top of his head, another across his forehead, a third from his eye down to his lip and an ugly wound in his wrist.

Dasher will probably be arrested. He says the cutting was done in self-defence.

Two Killed, One Injured.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 17.—An explosion that resulted in the death of two men and the serious injuries of one other occurred at the Baldwin locomative works. They were working in the dome of of one of the engines in course of construction tightening bolts, and were using benzine to ease them up. The quantity of benzine used was small, but the volume of gas generated was large, and when one of the three men lowered a lighted lamp into the dome, an explosion followed.

THE VOICE OF NEW JERSEY.

A STRONG PROTEST AGAINST THE RACE-TRACK GAMBLING BILLS.

A Great Throng of Ministers, Lawyers, and Women Argue for the Cause of Morality—Plainfield's Representation Does the Town Proud.

The largest gathering of indignant people that ever startled the gaze of trembling legislators, was that which filled the corridors of the State Capitol at Trenton yesterday, and thronged the new Assembly chamber to the very doors. The most progressive moral elements of the State were represented and the enthusiasm and indignation manifested made the event one of the most thrilling in the legislative annals of the commonwealth. Ministers, college professors, lawyers, teachers, merchants and laboring men, were all among the delegates and every county of the State was represented in the throng. From Plainfield 60 of her best citizens were ready to demand right at the hands of the Legislature. There were probably 2,500 people present.

The storm of indignation was so fierce that the two race-track bills are doomed, and it is believed by very many that they will never pass. Members who before thought there was a chance for them to become laws, were free to express their opinion last night that the demonstration of yesterday had swallowed up all hope of the bills getting to the statute books.

After their arrival the delegates proceeded to the State Capitol in a body, and soon a meeting was called in the museum on the third floor. The delegates eagerly crowded into the room but, though capacious, it was far from being large enough to accommodate all who desired to enter. R. V. Lindabury, the Elizabeth lawyer, who has been so prominent in the prosecution of the race-track criminals, called the meeting to order and was chosen as chairman in the absence of the Rev. Dr. Kempshall, who has for two years acted in that capacity, but is now in Bermuda for the benefit of his health. Charles C. McBride, editor of the Elizabeth Journal, was made secretary.

It was about noon, after the numerous anti-race-track people had squeezed into every available space on the floor and on the galleries of the Assembly chamber, that chairman Ford D. Smith, of the committee on revision of laws, into whose hands the race-track bills have been committed, announced that the committee was ready to hear anyone upon the bills. Mr. Lindabury arose and said he was requested to present resolutions expressing the views of 100,000 people. He then read the following resolution which had been prepared by the committee appointed by the meeting held prior to the hearing. It was subsequently sent up to the chairman of the committee.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting, composed of citizens representing all the counties of this State, that the Assembly bills Nos. 193 and 197, known as the race-track bills, meet with our most emphatic disapproval and condemnation. In our judgment they tend to throw down the barriers which remain upon the statute books against the monstrous evils of race-track gambling, and are subversive of the legislative policy that has prevailed in this State unchanged, and without any attempt at change, until a very recent date, and which policy still commands the support of the people of this State.

Bishop Scarborough made an earnest and eloquent address. The Louisiana Lottery and the Monte Carlo gambling hells were not in his eye a circumstance to the abominations at Guttenberg and Gloucester. He was appalled at the proposition that the State should become a partner, for blood money, in the crime against good morals that horse racing embodied. He awoke thunders of applause when he said that if the bills passed the State would see such an uprising as she had not seen since the war called all patriots to order.

A handsome woman in sober attire stepped forward to claim the attention of the committee.

"Mrs. Knowles of Newark, representing 300,000 women",—was chairman Lindabury's introduction of her as he bowed her into view. With Mrs. Benjamin Williamson, jr., of Elizabeth, she had been chosen by the State Charities Aid society to argue the case with the committee. "There are times"—she said—"when a woman must put herself aside, and that time comes when a great evil is to be faced and pleas for truth and honor must be made." The women were the sufferers by the debauching of the sons and husbands of the Commonwealth, and it was in their behalf that she had come to raise her voice.

Some one on the floor proposed a special compliment of cheers for her as she retired after making her pleasant address, and the women in the gallery answered in all the keys of the octave. The men joined in, too, and she received an ovation that made her blush.

Mrs. Williamson, as an active member of the Charities Aid society, talked by the book. Prisons were her tarrying places and the luckless creatures who fill them her wards. She did not want to see the jails fuller than they are, but they would be if the race tracks were allowed to curse the State again.

PLAINFIELD'S SENTIMENTS.

Craig A. Marsh, corporation counsel of this city, said the passage of such acts would be morally, a sin, and politically, a crime, and for those reasons they ought to be adversely reported. They would make lawful a practice which no one would dare engage in through the mails and which no newspaper would dare advertise with a view of using the mails, for such acts would be criminal under the laws of Congress. The people outside of New Jersey, he said, could not prevent local legislation that would tend to debauch the morals of Jerseymen, but they could and would prevent the Post Office Department of the United States Government from being used to spread the contamination. He had no fear, however, that the State which had made herself famous as the home of Jersey justice would ever yield to the dictation of gamblers. It would lower us below the moral standard of the rest of the country. He told of the big meeting at Plainfield Sunday and concluded by urging the committee to regard the voice of the people in this matter as the voice of God.

"I congratulate the committee"—said the Rev. Dr. Duryea as he stepped out into the open—"that they have just heard the voice of the honest women of New Jersey—not the voices of the women of Guttenberg and Gloucester." He presented the petition of the Rutgers students against the reopening of the tracks. Many other most eloquent speeches followed, and the demonstration was made the greatest in the history of the State.

At the request of delegates, chairman Smith asked whether any gentlemen favorable to the bills would like to be heard. There was an ominous silence, and then the chairman repeated the question, but no response was made. Somebody shouted: "Those favoring the bills are sick!"

Father McNulty of Paterson appeared, presented protests from societies in his parish, and against the bills with great force. For one, he was n't willing to succumb to the scoundrels of New York and Brooklyn. Clifton must go!

A loud call was made for Mr. Parker, who introduced the bills, but he refused to speak.

The committee had been sitting about two hours when the delegation retired, after an expression of thanks for their patience and courtesy.

The Mysterious Canons Penetrated.

A year or two ago, the papers had much to say of the experiences of a party of railroad surveyors who had repeated Powell's feat of twenty years ago, and made their way in boats through the walled-in gorge of the Colorado, their leader and one other man being drowned in some of the terrific rapids down which the boats were swept. The full story of this wonderful voyage has never been published; but The Overland Monthly has now secured it, written by a member of the party, accompanied by photographs taken by them, and it is announced for the March number.

Other Churches Are After Him.

The Elizabeth Journal says: "Plainfield may not lose pastor Dilts after all. A committee has been appointed to look into the matters under question and see what can be done toward affecting a settlement satisfactory to the pastor." It is hoped that matters will be adjusted and that Mr. Dilts will reconsider his resignation. It is understood that already he has received very gratifying offers from other churches, whose congregations think him just the man of conscience and high principle they want.

BISHOP WALKER'S SERMON.

He Delivers an Interesting Discourse to the Young Men of the St. Andrews Brotherhood.

Bishop Walker of North Dakota addressed the congregation of Grace Episcopal church Sunday evening, taking his text from I John, iv: 21: "And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God love his brother also". The service was in charge of the St. Andrew society, an organization of young men of the church, whose aim is to bring men within the sound of the Gospel and to spread Christ's kingdom in the world.

Part of Bishop Walker's interesting sermon was as follows:

"I have seen a beautiful picture, a work of modern art. It represents a great red cross rising from the midst of lashing billows. In the midst of the waves is to be seen the brawny hand of a man, clutching at the fragment of a wreck that drives by. The man finds no help in it. Clinging to the cross is a woman. Both hands are upon it, and her whole soul seems centred in that cross. She has found safety; she has come to the cross; she is on the rock. That beautiful picture, as you know, bears the name 'Rock of Ages'. It is familiar to you all. As I have gazed upon it I have said to myself again and again It tells me very sweetly the hope, the salvation, that there is for sinners. It tells me of the one place where I may find safety amid the storms and perils of this world of sin. But I have also, as I have gazed upon it, said to myself: It tells not the whole story of my duty as a man and a Christian, and as a follower of Jesus Christ.

"I have seen another picture, a companion to this one. It presents the same cross, and there are the same lashing waves and sea, and the sinking hand of a woman. Only one hand is now on the cross; the other is outstretched that she may lift up from the danger and death that is imminent a sister who but for that outstretched hand would be swept away to her ruin. That tells me my duty as a Christian; that gives me the Gospel; that gives me the love of the man who would do Christ's work, as he presents it in this Book of Truth. It is an allegory, but it is a mighty statement of the truth of God.

"I am here to-night briefly to speak to those who are banded together for work in the name of Christ; to the young men who have joined hands and resolved that they will not live the life which is merely a life of the world, the life that is merely a life for self, but the life that will be given more or less to the helping of brothers that they may come with them hand in hand to the same Christ and the same cross which is theirs. This principle of living more or less for others in this world, and dying for them, is a principle which is at the foundation of this Christianity which is ours. I reverence the man of prayer; but I tell you the man who works as well as prays is the man that Jesus Christ loves.

"We are in this world working together hand in hand. There is no man nor woman who is not leading another. It may be for good, it may be for evil. You may think you can shift the responsibility elsewhere, but I tell you there is none of us who shall not on the great day of account be made accountable for the influence he has personally exerted either by his open action or by his inner character, which is manifesting itself in ways one knows not. None of us lives alone. None of us stands by himself. Each is a helper or a hinderer to his brother in this world as he walks his way on and on through duty, on and on to the life beyond.

"And now I am led to speak of the principle which should guide all in their works of mercy and love. Young men of St. Andrew Brotherhood, whether you be many or whether you be few, you have power, you have influence, you have responsibility. And here is the serious point of the whole matter, that you, young men, are to be made accountable, whether you are in the brotherhood or whether you are not of it, for your influence on the man who stands next you, whether it be in social life or whether it be in the business life. I spoke a moment ago of the unconscious influence, the influence that is going out from the hear when you know not of it. Shall the man be made accountable for that? Yes. Because this influence is the outcome of the real character.

"Now I wish to speak of the spirit which should influence the young man in his work as a brother in this band of Christian men. My text refers to the love which we are to manifest in our living. 'This commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God love his brother also.' I would speak briefly of that grandest of the possessions that sway the heart of man—love. I am not speaking of that which is known in the sentimental world by that title. I am speaking of that passion that is continually referred to in this Book, devoid of anything that is impure, splendid in its influence and beautiful in its holiness. I refer to what may be called the spirit of a divine love.

"Young men, your life may be a life noble or ignoble, as you recognize these duties or as you reject them; as you recognize that you are not to live merely to gain money, to gain name, to gain place, but that you are to live that Jesus Christ may smile on you and may give you his choicest blessing.

"Some years ago Bishop Whipple said to me 'My brother, I will be glad if whenever opportunity comes you will tell a story that I am about to relate to you and of which I know the truth. It is—he said—regarding an Indian. I was sitting, about 12 or 13 years ago, in my home at Faribault, and I observed coming down the street four Indians. As I saw them approaching my doorstep I went out, and then they came forward and one after another dropped upon his knees and kissed my hand. The last to approach was a blanketed Indian. When he rose he said "My father, I am not one of your children. I am a heathen. But I have learned something of the Saviour of mankind; how He gave himself upon the cross for me, a poor red man, as well as for the pale face. How He loved me and loves me to-day as much as He loves any king or great man of the earth. I have heard of it, but I feel that I do not know the whole story. These my friends told me some of it. I have come to you to ask you if you will give me more light."' The Bishop sat down and proceeded to tell him the plan of salvation; the story of the Saviour's love; the hope that there is for red men as well as for white men. The Indian listened, and after a long time he said 'I must go away into the forest that I may sit down for a few days and think, and think, and think.' And he went away, the Bishop giving him his blessing.

"Two months after that General Grant, who was then in the Presidential chair, sent a deputation consisting of a commissioner and three ministers of different denominations to distribute certain moneys due them from the Government as payment for their land. The work took several days, and when it was finished the ministers resolved that they would pass over into the State in which I live, North Dakota, and see there some Indians—Chippewas—who were living in a little village in that State. They arrived Sunday morning. They approached the group of wigwams, and when they reached the largest of them they heard a man speaking solemnly within. They approached the door and there upon his knees was an Indian, and grouped about him sitting on the ground were about twenty others. Presently the man within finished his speech. He arose, turned around, and saw those men standing there and came out to them, with outstretched hands, saying (he was able to speak a little English): 'I am glad to see you. I have been here on this Sunday morning trying to tell these my friends something of the love of Jesus and of the sacrifice of Jesus. My words are poor and weak, I know, but I heard the story of that infinite love, it filled my heart with joy, and I feel I must tell some of it to these my friends.' This was the blanketed Indian who had gone away with the Bishop's blessing only two months before.

"Here my sermon ends. I wish for those who are banded together in this work of love that they may have this spirit of love which the Saviour manifested, which is ever manifested to the man who is Christ's man. Recognize that you have some responsibility for the soul that your soul touches in the ordinary walks of daily life. Let us recognize the fact that if we would please God and love Him truly we shall love our brother also."

DRIVING OUT THE WITCH.

Stirling People Hang and Bury in Effigy the White Cap Leader, and Pray for Peace Again in Their Hamlet.

STIRLING, N. J., Feb. 12.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—There has been a great sensation at Stirling. The leader of the White Caps was hung last Saturday in effigy, and left hanging until Thursday night, when the citizens of Stirling thought best to cut him down to hold an inquest and wake over the remains, and give him a decent burial, and to erect a tombstone over his grave, as he had no friends. They deputized a coroner, and he summoned a jury, but could find nobody to cut down the corpse, so they deputized a constable, because constable Havey was sick abed and could not be present. The one they deputized could not climb the tree, so one of the boys clumbed up and cut down the body. In the fall the dummy of the White Cap leader broke one of its legs. Then eleven of his brethren White Caps took charge of the remains, and laid it upon a stretcher, made in the old Indian style of limbs of the tree which he had hung on. The crowd formed two lines, then the four bearers carried the remains between the lines, with the two priests walking ahead and seven White Caps acting as chief mourners. Thence the line of march went up to Broadway, with the drum corps playing a dead march. About 250 people followed in line, passing down Elm street to Maple street, thence down Main street to Railroad avenue, thence to the picnic grounds platform, with the dogs barking and howling, where they held the inquest over the remains of their dead brother White Cap. Their physician was there, and pronounced their brother White Cap dead. Then the jury retired and found a verdict as follows:

"Our brother came to his death by remorse of conscience, and committed deliberate suicide."

Then they "waked" him for about 30 minutes, with torches all around him, and marched around him and cried "No, no White Caps here! Oh, why did you go and hang yourself on a hickory tree!" Then the remains were taken up by four bearers and carried to the burial-place opposite the railroad station. There was held a solemn service. The two priests officiating were from the grand lodge of Anti-White Caps of Stirling. The sermon was as follows:

"Dearly beloved brother White Caps, this is the first time that I have been called on to officiate at the grave of one of our brethren. Our departed brother strayed from the path of truth and virtue by going out among the common trash of Stirling to make proselytes of them, and fell in bad company, and from the remorse of conscience went and committed suicide by hanging himself to a hickory tree. I now commit his remains to the earth."

Then all took chunks of dirt and threw them on the remains. "This"—continued the preacher—"is a warning to you true White Caps to keep out of bad company and the low trash of Stirling, for if you do n't it will corrupt you, and you will come to the same end, and I will be called upon to officiate at your grave as I have over that of your dead brother." Priest No. 2 cried "Amen".

Then they erected a head-board 6x2, with the following inscription:

"We can not have things to please us. We hope this White Cap has gone to Jesus. And yet we can not always tell. We think this White Cap has gone to Hell."

Then they all returned to the platform at the corner of Railroad avenue and Main street and built a large bonfire to burn the witch out of the little hamlet so that he will never return to the heart of any man in Stirling again. And they had a jolly good time until 11 o'clock. They kept it up to drive the witch offender out of the place, as Saul did when he was persecuting David, a man after God's own heart, as the people of Stirling think. The White Caps are as Saul was when he was persecuting David and trying to drive him from the land of Israel. The people here think that the White Caps are Beelzebub, the prince of devils, while the Rev. A. C. Dill is as David was—being slandered and abused for naught.

The Republicans in a Hole.

[From The Passaic News.]

We hope the report set afloat by the Plainfield Press that Gen. Grubb intends to resign his post at the court of Madrid, and return home in time to run for Governor is untrue; not that we lack respect for his qualifications or running qualities. Our objection rests upon a firm belief in the danger of renominating defeated candidates. It seldom works well. We have lost a senator and sheriff by it in Passaic county. The proper candidate has been found already in the person of the Hon. John Kean, jr., of Elizabeth, and the proper thing is to stick to him until he is nominated and elected. The Republican party of New Jersey is in a hole and needs a veritable Moses to put it on the road to the promised land again. To depend on Gen. Grubb for such a herculean task would be unwise. As a defeated candidate he is not unlike Sampson shorn of his locks.

Having been a sufferer for sometime past with billiousness, &c., I was recommended to use Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills. I did so, and am pleased to find that they are as recommended, a cure for those ailments. I therefore subscribe myself cheerfully in recommending them to any who may suffer with those complaints.—E. You can save money with Dr. Pierce's medicines, if you get the genuine. Suppose they're not the lowest in price — what does that matter? The point that's important is this: — they're the cheapest medicines you can buy at any price, for, with them, you pay only for the good you get. If they ever fail to benefit or cure, you have your money back. Can you ask more?

But, there's only one way to get these genuine guaranteed medicines. To guard against fraud and imposition, they're sold only through druggists regularly authorized as agents, and always at these long-established prices:

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery (for the liver, blood and lungs), ... $1.00.
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription (for woman's weaknesses and ailments), . . $1.00.
Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets (for the liver, stomach and bowels), ... 25 cents.

Beware of fraudulent imitations and dilutions offered at lower prices than the above.

"CONFIDENCE BEGETS LOVE."

CHILD. "Gran'ma, kiss me good-night. Sister is asleep, but we so love to hear you tell of all the ladies that call you Mother."

MRS. PINKHAM. "Yes, darling, when you are older perhaps you may do as I have done."

CHILD. "Everybody loves you, gran'ma; I wish everybody would love me."

MRS. PINKHAM. "Everyone will love you, my child, if they can confide in you."

The above dialogue tells its own story; even the little child, without knowing why her grandmother is so universally loved, sees in her face a light of intellectual sympathy that satisfies her. That sympathy has extended itself all over the world, for wherever civilized women exist, Mrs. Pinkham is known and reverenced.

THE PRESS GALLERY.

One of the Most Interesting Spots in the Capitol Building.

How the Washington Correspondents of the Metropolitan Papers Gather News — Reciprocity Between Statesmen and Scribes.

[Special Washington Letter.]

The press gallery at this season of the year is a kodak camera. The gallery is an automatic machine, and its photographs of public men and events upon the floor of the senate and house are not only instantaneous, but artistic. The gallery is not only a perfect, but a complex machine, containing the most delicate organism ever invented. Nearly two hundred men now have the privilege of the press galleries of the house and senate and every one of them is believed to be in a general sense the most competent man connected with the staff of the paper which he represents. Because of this conceded superiority in the newspaper field these men are selected above their fellows and sent to the national capitol to become parts of the complex kodak, the gallery.

One of the popular fallacies in the newspaper offices throughout the country is that all the news of the day is gathered by the correspondents from their seats in the gallery, from which perch they behold and portray all the proceedings of the national legislature. As a matter of fact the ablest, most experienced and most successful correspondents at the national capital are seldom seen in the press gallery, because that is not a good place to ascertain bottom facts concerning current events. Of course upon great occasions, such as the obsequies of a deceased senator or member of the supreme court, the galleries are crowded with the gentlemen having seats there, because only from that vantage ground can good descriptive articles be written. But probably only once or twice during an entire session of congress does such an event occur.

These privileged newspaper characters not only represent the leading papers of the United States, but their constituencies are world-wide. Senators represent, in part, great sovereign states; the representatives represent congressional districts whose boundaries are circumscribed by a few county lines; the correspondents represent in no small degree not only the 65,000,000 people in the republic, but a number of them send forth their statements of facts and their opinions concerning affairs to England, France and Canada. Of course for the purpose of having the privilege of the gallery, if for no other reason, the correspondent must represent one of the leading papers of this country; but in addition to that representation he has the privilege, and usually avails himself of it, of doing foreign work, whereby an income may be increased or possibly doubled.

None but the most reliable, accurate, conservative and honorable men can represent leading newspapers in the national capitol. The managing editor in San Francisco, New Orleans, St. Paul, Chicago, New York, Toronto or London must be able to feel that his representative at the city of Washington is constantly alert, diligent and careful in his representation of the paper; must feel that it is not necessary to prod and spur him on to do his duty; must feel and know that the paper is in the fullest sense of the term represented with fidelity and skill. Scholastic training, extraordinary talents and ability as descriptive writers or word weavers, will never suffice for a lack of painstaking care and a constant feeling of personal responsibility on the part of a correspondent. These representatives in the press gallery sometimes spend whole days or even weeks doing almost no work whatever; but that is in all cases because there is nothing to do and the news market is exceedingly dull. This sometimes happens in every city on the globe. No matter whether the correspondent is heard from every day by wire or not, he must be maintained at the national capital and his salary goes on just the same. The intelligent and discriminating managing editor knows that when the occasion arrives for a tremendous amount of work involving the ascertainment of facts and the compilation of statements involving twenty thousand words a day or more his correspondent will represent the paper with sleepless determination to succeed at every point. It is this quality of reliability that makes a successful Washington correspondent. And for this reason gentlemen having the privilege of the galleries at the capitol are absolutely their own bosses; more so than any other class of men engaged in the profession of journalism.

Although very few of the gentlemen are to be seen constantly in the press gallery, nearly every man having the privilege of that place visits the sanctum back of the gallery either of the house or senate every day, and does more or less work there. The rooms in the senate wing of the capitol were greatly improved during the last congressional vacation by the sergeant-at-arms. An additional room has been added, a quiet, private place, where men may go with their stenographers and be absolutely free from the interference of conversation or the noise of oratory. The telegraph instruments have been removed to the outer lobby, so that their clicking has been dispensed with. An additional telephone has been given to the gallery, while new carpets, new furniture, new pier mirrors and other adjuncts of comfort and adornment have been liberally bestowed. The senate gallery is the best place in the capitol for doing quick work and good work; for the reason that it is always quiet, dignified and refined, like the august body assembled in the chamber below. The house of representatives is a hurly-burly body of noisy gesticulators, and the house gallery is like unto it. There the fellows go who have more talk and less writing to do than their more industrious confreres. There stories are told, sometimes in loud tones of voice, followed by piercing laughter. The rules of the gallery are occasionally enforced and quiet restored by the gentlemen who have real work to perform and are anxious to do it; but they seldom succeed in the house gallery. Almost invariably, if they have time, they traverse the entire length of the great marble building for the purpose of taking their seats in the senate gallery in order to do their writing.

One singular thing about the press gallery is never told and it will be almost impossible for the average reader to understand the situation and appreciate it for its true worth. It is generally understood that these newspaper writers have their political preferences and strong antipathies concerning men and measures; but this is another popular fallacy. The newspaper men of the present generation who are the most competent in their profession are nonpartisan, as a general rule, as attorneys at law in their business. Journalism is a profession and a first-class newspaper man ought to be so fully equipped with information concerning all national affairs, and so wholly unbiased in his mind, as to be able to become the managing editor of any paper, no matter what its politics may be. I know correspondents here who are doing excellent work for leading democratic papers, who are at the same time representing with equal ability several republican papers. They are equipped for the kind of service rendered and they render it with utter indifference as far as their own personal feelings are concerned in the matter. Moreover I have been informed that the papers thus represented consider themselves better and more fairly represented than they would be by men of strong partisan prejudices. It is a singular thing, but it is true, and the average reader will find it hard to understand how such things can be. As an illustration of this fact it may be said that during the turbulent, exciting and revolutionary scenes in the house of representatives during the Fifty-first congress, when all precedents were laid aside and new rules for the government of that parliamentary body were established, the speaker was criticised most severely by certain republican correspondents who represented democratic papers, which several democratic correspondents who represented republican papers were equally severe in their criticisms of Mr. Mills, Mr. Springer, Mr. Breckinridge and other leaders of the minority.

While the statesmen in both houses of congress have an idea that newspaper men make and unmake men, no such belief is cherished in the press gallery. The most experienced newspaper men believe that while they can be helpful in building up good men and useful in pulling down bad men, they are utterly powerless to injure a truly good man, if they should so desire. A statesman who attends to the duties whereto he has been sent, needs never fear the most virulent criticism of any writer on earth. But I have noticed that those gentlemen who are most kindly disposed towards the gentlemen of the press remain longest in public life. For example: Senators Allison, of Iowa; the late Senator Plumb, of Kansas; Senators Cockrell and Vest, of Missouri; Senator Ransom, of North Carolina; Senator Frye, of Maine, are all gentlemen, especially well disposed towards the news gatherers, young as well as old. Mr. Reed, of Maine; Mr. Springer, of Illinois; Mr. Crisp, of Georgia; Mr. Henderson, of Illinois; these, and many other public men who have served their people long and well, are and always have been good and kindly news-givers. Therefore, their constituents read many good things concerning them, but never see anything in print which is uncomplimentary of them. Thus, you see, there is something like substantial reciprocity existing between the statesmen and the correspondents.

TENNYSON AT HOME.

Sir Edwin Arnold's Visit to the Poet Laureate.

Lord Tennyson's Charming Home at Freshwater and His Residence at Haslemere—The English Language and Its Importance.

There has been a good deal published lately about Sir Edwin Arnold's visit to Lord Tennyson. Sir Edwin himself now contributes an article to the Forum on the subject. Lord Tennyson, as is well known, divides the year between his seaside abode at Freshwater, in the Isle of Wight, and his residence on the top of Blackdown in Surrey, named "Aldworth." Of the former Sir Edwin Arnold writes:

Lord Tennyson's house at Freshwater is placed near the sea, in a very charming locality under a great green down which shields it from the breezes of the Channel while opening the view towards Freshwater and Alum Bay. The house, comfortable without pretension, is surrounded by a thick-set garden and groves of fir-trees, where—

"The magpies gossip Garrulous under a roof of pine."

The village of Freshwater is old-fashioned and not very populous; nor are there many houses in the vicinity of the poet's retirement, which he maintains with a good deal of strictness, having found himself in former days somewhat overwhelmed by his own popularity. There are amusing stories related of desperately enthusiastic attempts to invade his seclusion; and he himself tells jokingly how he has sometimes strategically defeated these too friendly assaults. But no man is more hospitable to his accepted friends.

The laureate's residence at Haselmere is some three miles from the railway station, and the road to it leads through a beautiful bit of country.

Suddenly a large wayside board is observed, inscribed "private," and you come to a roadway in the side of the down, leading evidently to a private residence. Traversing this for about half a mile you emerge upon the open plateau, and down in the hollow you see a black mass of fir trees, and amid them the point of a chimney. This is Aldworth. The gateway stands wide open, and you walk by a broad pathway to the porch of the modest and by no means ostentatious abode. It is an English villa of ample proportions and pleasing elevation, such as any country gentleman might build for himself, yet in no way remarkable for size or embellishment. In front of it extends a large and well-kept lawn surrounded by beds richly adorned with flowers of all sorts, for the soil has been thoroughly conquered here, and Lord Tennyson's home lies embowered in trees and shrubs of all kinds, and parterres bright with all sorts of blossoms.

Of the poet himself Sir Edwin Arnold gives the following description:

Albeit past his eighty-second birthday, Lord Tennyson's figure is only weakened, not broken, by age. His hair preserves much of its old dark color, and, excepting in places, is hardly more than "sable-silvered." His spirit is as alert, his glance as keen and bright, as ever. Though he does not rise upon our entrance, making no ceremony with friends, he leads at once an animated conversation. . . . His hands are manly and powerful in outline, but delicate and finely formed, as those of a poet should be. On his head, as an additional protection from the caprices of the English weather, he wears a small black velvet cap.

LORD TENNYSON, POET LAUREATE.

The laureate agreed with his visitor in earnest praise of the English language as an instrument now become almost perfect for the uses of the orator, the philosopher, the historian and the poet; but

When I observed that by the help of America it was destined to become the common speech of the world, he laughingly shook his head and said: "That is very bad for us." At first I did not understand the drift of this observation; but he went on to remark: "When a language dies out, like Latin and Greek and your black Sanscrit, the literary monuments contained in it are, so to speak, embalmed. They remain standards; and all ages, in proportion as people master these dead classics, admire them, form their style upon them, and perpetuate the memory and the name of the bygone writers. But when a language endures it gradually changes; and the time will come, Arnold, when you and I will be as difficult for Englishmen and Americans to read and understand as Chaucer is today." This was quite a new view.

When Sir Arnold rose to leave—

To my surprise and pleasure Lord Tennyson declared his intention of accompanying me part of the way. Hallam threw over his shoulders the great black cloak familiar to those who possess photographs of the poet, and taking a big stick and two or three of the dogs he set forth up the broad garden path to trudge across the heath with me. The wind was blowing keenly, and Lord Tennyson was not quite free from his old enemy; but with fair strength and sturdiness he faced the gorse-clad hill, staying now and then to recover his breath, partly to complete some point of interest in his delightful conversation.

His Wife's Fault.

A certain Frenchman, famous for his habit of grumbling at everything and on every occasion, was attacked by inflammatory rheumatism and was carefully nursed by his wife, who was very devoted to him in spite of his faultfinding disposition. His sufferings caused her to burst into tears sometimes, as she sat at his bedside. One day a friend of the invalid came in and asked him how he was getting on. "Badly, badly!" he exclaimed; "and it's all my wife's fault." "Is it possible?" asked the friend, in surprise. "Yes. The doctor told me that humidity was bad for me; and there that woman sits and cries, just to make it moist in the room!"

Smells Good and Frightens Moths.

A delightful mixture for perfuming clothes that are packed away, and which is said to keep out moths also, is made as follows: Pound to a powder one ounce of cloves, caraway seeds, nutmeg, mace, cinnamon and Tonquin beans respectively, and as much orris root as will equal the weight of the other ingredients put together. Little bags of muslin should be filled with the mixture and placed among the garments.

LOVE FINDS THE WAY

Hugh Shepard Finally Weds the Girl of His Choice.

COURTED HER FOR THREE YEARS

In Spite of Opposition They Embark on Life's Journey Together.

Miss Hart's Parents Objected to the Match, So the Young People Plan and Carry Into Execution an Elopement—Embarrassment of the Groom on Finding Himself Without Money to Go Home With Relieved by the Interested People of Millerton, N. Y.—They Go to Ask For Her Parents' Forgiveness.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Hugh Shepard and Miss Hattie Hay Hart, both of Winsted, Conn., alighted from a train at Millerton, Dutchess county, last night, and in five minutes' time the village was in an uproar.

The couple were looking for a clergyman and acted as if they feared they might be overtaken before they found one. They inquired of half a dozen persons where a minister might be found and they were finally directed to the Rev. M. Wolff, pastor of the Baptist Church of the village. A goodly portion of the villagers had been attracted by the actions of the pair.

After the ceremony had been performed the couple, now all smiles, went to Barbour's Hotel, where they told their story to a group of eager listeners.

It was a runaway match, but as this was already known to almost every man, woman and child in the village, details were anxiously asked for.

Young Shepard, who was greatly agitated, said that he had been courting Miss Hart for three years, but her relatives had prevented their marriage on many occasions. At length they concluded to get married anyway and in their coming to Millerton and haste to find a clergyman told the rest.

Miss Hart is a beautiful young woman not more than 18 years old. She was elegantly dressed and her superior station in life to that of her companion was apparent at a glance. She is said to belong to one of the best families of her town.

The groom, in the morning made an embrassing discovery. He found that after paying the marriage fee of three dollars and his hotel bill, he had come to the end of his resources. His predicament, however, was short-lived.

When it became known, he had no difficulty in borrowing all the money he needed to carry himself and bride back to Winsted for forgiveness. Quite a crowd saw the happy couple off at the railroad station.

The residents have done scarcely anything since then but talk of the romantic marriage, and they will not soon forget the beautiful runaway bride that created such a sensation in their village by insisting upon marrying the man she loved.

THE BRIDEGROOM CAME NOT.

A Chatham, Ont., Pastor's Many Engagements and Flight.

CHATHAM, Ont., Feb. 18.—Rev. N. H. Martin, who, for the past fifteen years, has been pastor of the leading Episcopal Church here, was to have been married last night to Miss Kitchen, a prominent member of his flock.

The guests had assembled and all was in readiness for the ceremony, but the bridegroom came not. An investigation revealed the fact that he left the city on Saturday last, since which time no tidings had been received from him.

The sensation caused by his disappearance was added to by the announcement that he was engaged to be married to Miss Delmage, another member of his church, and also to Miss Sarah Bonet, a farmer's daughter.

The latter has a document in the pastor's handwriting in which he promises to marry her on Monday, Feb. 15, and further gives her full possession of all his household effects.

Cheaper to Move Than Pay Rent.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 18.—Landlord B. F. Crane, who owns the house No. 8 Nassau place, was surprised to find that Henry Jenks, his wife and three children had taken possession of the house and had filled it with three loads of furniture. It is said that the Jenks family have been here from England but a few months, but have as yet paid no rent, merely taking possession of vacant houses and awaiting ejectment by process of law, which in this State is slow. When threatened they have retaliated with threats of suits for damages.

Four Years for Attempted Murder.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Feb. 18.—Judge Conover has sentenced Thomas Timothy, at Freehold, to four years' improvement at hard labor, for attempting to kill Miss Illia Petrovia with Paris green, after betraying her. The sentence has caused considerable comment because of its lightness.

ANOTHER READING REPORT.

Said to Have Obtained Control of the Baltimore & Ohio.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 18.—Private advices have been received by a banker which are regarded as thoroughly reliable, to the effect that the Reading Company has secured absolute control of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and its numerous branches, and also the New York & New England Railroad.

The terms of the agreement were finally determined by the great financiers who have been negotiating the deal at a conference in Philadelphia, at which all the necessary papers were signed by the contracting parties.

It is the opinion of local financiers that the next announcement will be that it has a trans-continental line to the Pacific.

This latter feature is all the more probable inasmuch as Jay Gould is said to be the secret spring which has put in motion this movement to solidify the great roads of the country.

THE ROOF FELL IN.

Three Men Killed Outright, One Died of His Injuries—Others Hurt.

PLATTSBURGH, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Timbers in the roof of the Arnold ore mine at Ferona, this county, gave way in the morning while the full force of men were at work.

The following were severely wounded: Patrick Dowd, who subsequently died of his injuries, leaving a wife and family; Thomas Russell, who was badly cut on the head, Alexander Dupleas, Antoine Lamarke.

Horton secretary. T. G. Risley was elected president of the league and E. T. Sadler secretary. Delegates were elected to the National Convention and resolutions were adopted indorsing the administration of President Harrison and particularly commending the appointment of Gov. Seay.

Davis, who died in Butte, Mont., leaving property valued at several millions of dollars.

Will Send Them to Paraguay.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—As the people of the Argentine Republic regard with great disfavor the large immigration of Jews into their country under the auspices of Baron Hirsch, the latter is now endeavoring to divert immigration of his countrymen to Paraguay where he has obtained a large tract of agricultural land.

Racing Accident.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 18.—Jockey Murkett, while riding Morristown on a practice gallop at the race track here, collided with another horse, Murkett and Morristown being thrown heavily to the ground. Murkett was seriously injured and Morristown had one of his legs broken and had to be shot.

HIS AWFUL DEATH

A Grip Victim's Blood-curdling Method of Suicide.

HIS NURSE HAD JUST LEFT HIM.

He Broke a Pane of Glass and Sawed His Throat on the Jagged Edge.

After the Physicians Had Put Twelve Stitches in the Wounds, George Grumbling Regained Consciousness, Tore Off the Bandages and Lacerated the Cuts in a Fearful Manner, Dying From Loss of Blood Before the Medical Men Could Again Dress Them.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 18.—George Grumbling, a prominent citizen of Old Ninevah, took his life in a most horrible and blood-curdling manner. Mr. Grumbling has been ill with grip for two weeks past and this probably affected his mind.

In any event, during the temporary absence of his nurse, he arose from his bed and going to a window broke a pane of glass. Then, placing his head through the hole, he deliberately sawed his throat over the jagged edges, inflicting terrible injuries.

Blood spurted in all directions, but the unfortunate man kept on sawing his throat until he fell to the floor exhausted from loss of blood.

A few moments later the nurse returned, and seeing the man's condition, hastily summoned physicians.

The doctors put twelve stitches in the frightful wounds and then put Grumbling to bed.

They had scarcely turned away from the injured man when Grumbling, who had recovered consciousness, tore out the stitches, lacerating the gaping wounds afresh.

Death ensued before the doctors could staunch the renewed flow of blood.

Grumbling leaves a wife and several children.

WILL USE DYNAMITE.

Unless Mrs. Hamilton Returns to Her Husband She Will be Blown Up.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 18.—Mrs. Martin Hamilton, the school teacher of Sheboague Island who, at the instigation of her parents, left her husband immediately after their wedding, and who is now living with relatives in this city, has recently received a letter signed "Jack the Ripper," which says that unless she returns to her husband the house that she lives in will be blown up with dynamite.

Mrs. Hamilton believes the letter came from her husband, and has asked the police to investigate.

Mr. Hamilton's friends intimate that it is a trick to prejudice the public against him.

Mrs. Baker Dies of Joy.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18. — Mrs. Catharine Baker, the widow of a veteran of 1812 and a pensioner, died suddenly at Metropolis yesterday, aged 88 years. A few days ago she received a letter from one of her sons whom she had not seen for thirty years, telling her he was coming home to visit her. The good news caused her so much joy that she grew nervous. Just before reaching home her son sent her a dispatch that he would be with her in a few hours. When the message was read to Mrs. Baker she fell down and died.

Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria Raging.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18. — Although the health authorities continue to deny the existence of typhus fever, they will not make public the location of the Italian immigrants who came over on the infected vessel. Fifty-two new cases of scarlet fever and diphtheria were reported for the twenty-four hours ending at midnight.

Taking Up the Fight Again.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 18.—Miss A. A. Chevalier, who made an expose of the Thomas Lake Harris community at Santa Rosa last fall, lectured last night to a large audience on "Mysticism and Harrisism." Proofs are incontrovertible, consisting of a mass of letters, affidavits and statements by people who have left the community.

SIX INJURED.

A D., L. & W. Train Runs Into a Newark Street Car.

NEWARK, N. Y., Feb. 18.—A train from Bloomfield on the Delaware, Lackawana & Western railroad ran into a street car of the Broad street line at 11:25 last night.

The accident occurred at a crossing. The gates were lowered just as the car was passing under them and it was thus pinned. The railroad train was runing on a down grade and though the engineer made an effort to stop, he was unsuccessful and his train crashed into the car.

There were thirteen passengers aboard the horse car and of this number six were badly injured. Their names are: J. Cullinghan, driver, seriously; Frank Gould, F. W. Matthews, George W. Jeroloman, Earnest Hirsch and Annie Barkley.

All the wounded were removed to the hospital.

HUDSON STILL FASTING.

The Aged Bostonian is Now Reduced to a Mere Skeleton.

BOSTON, Feb. 18.—Charles Hudson, aged 83, who lives with his son-in-law, George Richardson, at 24 Tremont street, in this city, was taken with grip on January 1.

In ten days he recovered, but expressed sorrow at not having died, and soon after he began to starve himself. For forty-one days not a mouthful of food has passed his lips, and his only subsistence has been water and ice. He refuses to take medicine as well as food.

A day or two ago some nourishment was given him in water, but he discovered the trick and refused to swallow the dose.

From a comparatively strong and healthy man of his years, Mr. Hudson has become reduced to a mere skeleton. The case is exciting widespread attention.

Want to Return to Russia.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Many Russian Jews are applying daily at the office of the Russian Consul-General in this city, to be sent back to Russia. They are unable to make a living in the United States and want to get back to their homes and friends. The Russian Vice-Consul, C. G. Petersen, said to-day that the talk about the people being expelled from Russia was all nonsense. "The Jews in Russia," he said, "are restricted to certain provinces, and in none of these provinces does famine exist. It is not the Hebrews who are suffering from famine but the great mass of the Russian peasantry." Mr. Petersen said the secret of the Jewish exodus was that they had an idea they would get money from the Hirsch fund. He said the Consulate had no money to send the Jews back to Russia.

His Crime a Secret.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 18. — General Fredericks, chief of the Warsaw police, has arrested at Dumbowa the son of the famous patriot and historian, Joachim Delewell, who was prominent in the Polish uprising of 1830, when the Russians were driven from Warsaw. General Fredericks' prisoner was escorted by a strong military force from the place where he was arrested to Warsaw, whence he will be banished Siberia. The charge made against the prisoner is kept a profound secret and much mystery attaches to the case.

A WONDERFUL CASE

McCarthy No Longer Breathes Like a Steam Engine.

SEVERAL YEARS OF TORTURE.

Physicians Gave Him Up, but Father Adams Used the Faith Cure.

The Hotelkeeper's Respiration Reached as High as Three Hundred Per Minute, But It is Now Normal—He Was an Unwelcome Guest at Hotels, Where the Other Guests Complained That His Breathing Sounded Like a Bellows—He Could Eat and Speak Only With Difficulty.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Michael B. McCarthy, proprietor of the West End Hotel, offers himself as a living proof of the efficacy of the faith cure. In 1880 McCarthy, then a Boston policeman, was thrown from the platform of an electric car and struck on his head and shoulders. His bruises healed quickly enough, but about ten days after the accident it became evident that he had sustained some internal injury.

His breath began to come a great deal faster than he wanted it and he called in one doctor after another until there was scarcely a reputable physician in Boston who was not taking an active interest in his case. In spite of them all, however, his respiration grew more and more rapid until it reached the unprecedented rate of 180 a minute—ten times the normal rate.

The physicians were almost unanimous in locating the seat of the trouble in the brain. They believed that the nerves controlling the respiratory organs had suffered injury, and made all sorts of experiments in the hope of hitting upon the remedy. At length they pronounced McCarthy's case incurable, but as his health was apparently unimpaired by his malady they predicted that he would live for years if he kept out of the reach of pneumonia.

McCarthy went South, stopping in this city on his way to be examined at Roosevelt and Bellevue Hospitals. His respiration had got close up to a 250-rate and was still rising. He was an unwelcome guest at hotels because his stertorous breathing attracted the attention of everybody who happened anywhere near him. He suffered constant torture because the quick, jerky respiration rasped his throat and kept it raw and sore.

In April last he returned North and soon obtained control of the West End Hotel, but his affliction injured his business prospects and he again resorted to the doctors. On the 3d inst. he was examined again at Bellevue and his respiration registered 300. Dr. Henry B. Cooper and all the other experts once more pronounced his case incurable.

McCarthy recently heard of Father Adams, the clergyman whom Bishop Loughlin suspended from priestly duties about fifteen years ago. He had lost all faith in regular medical practitioners and was willing to see whether prayer and contact with holy relics would do him any good.

Accordingly he visited Father Adams at 144 South Fourth street, Brooklyn. The priest told him to have faith in God's power to help him, and in the potency of the holy relics which he was about to see. Father Adams prayed with him before a little altar, and then produced what he says are particles of flesh of several martyred saints, a piece of the manger in which Christ was born, and a chip of stone from the tomb in the Garden of Gethsemane.

These relics were passed about the patient's neck and shoulders, and he was then dismissed with a blessing. McCarthy noticed no change in his condition as he left the priest's house. Five hours later he fainted. When he regained consciousness he was overjoyed to find himself cured. His respiration had dropped to its normal rate.

Dr. Cooper and Dr. Blank called to see McCarthy and spent a long time with him. Dr. Cooper told a reporter last evening that the cure, no matter how it was brought about, is a fact. He describes it as a hypnotic cure and is of the opinion that, if McCarthy had ever before used so much will power as he had exercised in the presence of Father Adams he would have recovered long ago.

HIS FIENDISH PLOT.

An Engineer Makes Arrangements to Blow Up a Factory.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 14.—Charles Dexheimer, who attempted to blow up the leather factory of S. & J. Weil, has been arrested.

Dexheimer is the engineer of the factory. Yesterday morning he drank very heavily and at 10 o'clock, when he should have started the engines, he did not appear. Several employes went into the boiler room where they found he had formulated a fiendish plot to wreck the factory and endanger the lives of the 150 employes.

Dexheimer had removed or loosened the bolts from the steam chest, so fixed the steam gauge that it would fail to register and put the entire machinery into such a condition that, when started up, an explosion would follow.

BY PERSONS UNKNOWN.

Verdict of the Coroner's Jury in the Senior Murder Case.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 18. — Coroner Phalan and jury have concluded the investigation of the circumstances surrounding the murder of Mrs. Elizabeth Senior, in Millburn, on January 30.

John Guntzel, the 16-year-old boy who claimed to have seen Gus Lentz, the man in custody on suspicion of having committed the crime, in Millburn at 7 o'clock on the night of the murder, would not swear to his former statement without qualifying it. To the best of his knowledge and belief the man was Lentz.

After the examination of several other witnesses, the jury found that Mrs. Senior came to her death at the hands of some persons unknown.

NORTH PLAINFIELD'S NEXT MAYOR.

His Name is William L. Saunders, and He'll Make a Good One.

The borough Democrats made the best possible nomination for mayor last night in the person of William L. Saunders, a gentleman who is sure of election because of his personal qualities of head and heart and because of his eminent fitness for the office.

The borough primary was called to order by Andrew E. Kenney, who acted as chairman, with Ira F. Riker secretary. The borough ticket nominated was as follows:

For Mayor—William L. Saunders.
For Councilmen—George H. Neal, M. L. Connolly.

Mr. Saunders was introduced to the voters and made a most excellent speech, which was followed by speeches from the councilmanic candidates.

The township primary was then held, the same president and secretary officiating.

Nominations were made as follows:
For Town Clerk—Frank C. Krewsen.
For Overseer of the Poor—W. E. Mattison.
For Member of Town Committee—David N. Force.
For Justices of the Peace—W. I. Westervelt, Wm. Demler.
For Commissioners of the Highway—John Bodine, Thomas Newman.

When the primaries had adjourned a meeting of the Democratic association of North Plainfield was held. Andrew E. Kenney presided in the unavoidable absence of chairman John Vetterlein. Officers were elected as follows:

President—E. C. Morse.
Vice-presidents—Ira F. Riker, Samuel H. Townsend, John Bodine, Lewis C. Kline.
Secretary—Andrew E. Kenney.
Treasurer—Benjamin Gavin.

Rousing speeches were made by Mr. Morse and others, and thus the association started in on a campaign that promises to be not only an agressive one but one that will bring victory to the Democratic banner.

A CHARMING PINK TEA.

Notable Social Event at "Tunlaw", the Home of Col. Wilson.

The tea given by Miss Minnie Wilson at her beautiful home at "Tunlaw" yesterday was generally conceded to be one of the most delightful events of this and past seasons. The decorations were in exquisite taste, and the music was charming. Philadelphia was represented by the Misses Thomas, Arnold and Andrews, and Baltimore by the Misses Desport, Green and Williams, all of whom were beautiful and bewitching, while the Plainfield buds and belles were equally winsome. Nearly 300 enjoyed the hospitality of Col. Wilson's home. Dancing began at 9, and continued till early morning.

Though gentlemen joined in the afternoon dance the afternoon was wholly restricted to the "ladies' pink tea". Miss Wilson was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Samuel McCutchen, Mrs. J. W. Jackson, Mrs. T. L. Murphy, Mrs. Edward Waring, Mrs. Clifton Wharton, jr., Miss Caroline Streull, Miss Jean Erickson, Miss Annie Murphy, Miss Emily Arnold of Philadelphia, Miss Thomas of Philadelphia, and Miss Andrews of Cincinnati. The parlors of Col. Wilson's home are admirably adapted to such social events. They were especially beautiful in this instance with their lavish decorations of roses and other flowers. Those presiding over the refreshment room were Miss Emma Haviland, Miss Edith Taylor, Miss Mary Wells, and Miss VanDeventer. Two little maidens flitted about serving dainty bonbons. Among the guests were Mrs. William E. Lowe, Mrs. George Dupee, Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Miss Yerkes, Mrs. J. Edgar Corlies, Miss Annie Corlies, Mrs. Charles Wadsworth, Miss Maude VanBoskerck, Miss Marion Dumont, Miss May Taylor, Miss Katheryn Yates, Mrs. Warman, Miss Ida Cook, Miss Edna Pitman, Miss Kate Miller, Mrs. Tracy, Mrs. J. At Last a New Prima Donna in Plainfield

Of all the things for which Plainfield has to thank the Melopoia, none is as great as the fact that at that society's next concert the music-lovers of this city are to be introduced to a new singer. She is, as THE PRESS has been alone in telling, a sweet, pretty little woman, and modest though a great artist. She and Signor Galassi—who is also to sing at The Casino on the 23rd inst.—appeared at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, the other day, and a well-known critic of taste and judgment in that city, wrote:

"Mrs. Blauvelt sang her difficult role superbly, never once faltering or hesitating, but executing a long succession of upper G's, A's, and occasional C's with an ease and volume which spoke significantly of a splendid constitution and the best of scientific training. In the final duo with Galassi she was grand, and Galassi came out, as ever, triumphant and victorious, his majestic voice rolled through the building clear, distinct and resonant, and his unapproachable declamation was without a fault.

NORTH ELIZABETH STATION BURNED.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb 18—Passengers on the Pennsylvania railroad had an exciting experience this morning, when, at 8:50, the North Elizabeth station, a two-story frame building, which extended across the four tracks of the road, was burned. The Philadelphia fast line train, 36, eastbound, dashed into the mass of flame and smoke, while the debris fell in showers on the roofs and windows of the cars, terrifying the passengers and nearly suffocating the engineer and fireman. The station was erected twenty years ago. The loss is $5,000. Trains were delayed but a short time. A spark from a locomotive flying into an open window and igniting a curtain was the cause of the fire.

WRECK IN THE TUNNEL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—A little piece of broken rail, five inches in length, caused a crowded train on the New York, New Haven and Hartford road to jump the track, smashing several hundred feet of track, and endangering the lives of over a hundred passengers this morning in the Fourth avenue tunnel, near Seventieth street. The train was a New Haven accommodation. No one was hurt. All traffic is blocked over the New Haven and New York Central. There will be no regular time made before this evening.

THE KNIGHTS' BIRTHDAY.

Pythians Celebrate the 25th Anniversary of Their Organization, and Grand Chancellor Ulrich of Plainfield Makes Many Suggestions for Their Good.

The Grand Lodge, Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of New Jersey, of which ex-city judge and ex-Assemblyman John Ulrich, is grand chancellor, commenced holding their annual session and celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary of organization in Trenton, yesterday.

The representatives present of the one hundred and twenty-four lodges of the State numbered four hundred, including a large delegation from Plainfield. The attendance surpassed all previous grand lodge sessions. The session was called to order at 11 o'clock in Masonic hall. The report made by grand chancellor John Ulrich was elaborate, and contained many suggestions for the future good of the order.

Chief of all, the grand chancellor congratulated the representatives over the unprecedented increase of lodges during the past year. Seventeen new lodges, constituting about 600 members, were added. Chancellor Ulrich said this increase surpasses all the gains made in membership in the order for the fifteen years ending February, 1891. The increase of members in the whole order during the past year was 1,049. One lodge was suspended and one resuscitated during the year. The grand chancellor approved heartily of public installations saying that such public manifestation redound to the credit of the order and a confidence is inspired by the impressive ceremonies which cannot otherwise be publicly instilled.

To the mind of the grand chancellor, the Uniformed Rank of the order is its strongest adjunct and is more attractive than all other military organizations; and he added: "Considering that the Uniformed Rank is the only civil military organization recognized by the war department at Washington, there is no wonder that it is such an attractive feature".

There are now in the State fourteen divisions of the Uniformed Rank numbering nearly six hundred. Two new divisions were organized during the past year.

In conclusion, the Grand Chancellor said:

"And now, my brethren, in a few hours I shall deliver to you the insigna of my office with which you invested me one year ago, and to my successor I shall hand the jewel of authority, and again fall in the ranks from which you have called me. Such is the law of organization that some must lead and others should follow; in each capacity loyalty to duty should prevail.

"In throwing aside the mantel of leadership my greatest desire is that in the rank and file, as in the high, exalted office, you will find me ready to respond to all Pythian duties and whose constant aim shall be to further the interests of our magnanimous Order.

"What I have done in my office has conscientiously been done 'without fear, favor, reward or hope thereof', and despite the cares, the responsibilities, the sacrifice of the fireside and business, the labor has been at times pleasant to me. I leave the record I have made for your kind inspection, confident that you will not speak unkindly of the errors I may have committed, and as confident that free from all envy you will commend whatever good in the record may be contained.

"To my associate Grand Lodge officers, to the Subordinate Lodge officers, to the Knights of this State, one and all, who have so kindly and earnestly seconded endeavors, I now, in closing, return thanks with this injunction:

"Brethren, a golden opportunity now awaits you, and with the beginning of the new year the order is thoroughly awakening; from all parts of the State come words of good cheer and enthusiasm, our castle halls are receiving nightly new created Knights. This is the injunction:"

"Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

George E. Pierson, Grand Keeper of the Records and Seals, reported receipts for the year to be $6,625.22, and a total membership of 12 643.

C. V. N. Wilson, Grand Master of Exchequer, reported balance on hand Feb. 4, 1892, $1,398 89.

In the afternoon session the following officers were elected:

Grand Chancellor—Chas. W. Kilbourn, New Brunswick.
Grand Vice Chancellor—Walter F. Hayhurst, Lambertville.
Grand Prelate—George C. Cranmer, Barnegat.
Grand Keeper of Records and Seals—George E. Pierson, Woodbury.
Grand Master at Arms—Ralph Donath, Jersey City.
Grand Inner Guard—W. E. Hitchcock, Newark.
Grand Outer Guard—D. S. Rockefellar, Somerville.

The Grand Lodge made a contribution of $200 to the Uniformed Rank, to be used as prizes for the divisions best drilled.

The Regimental Board of the Uniformed Rank could not come to any agreement in fixing a day and place for the annual field day, and the subject was adjourned until the Board's meeting at Elizabeth.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 20, 1890.
Having been a sufferer for sometime past with biliousness, &c., I was recommended to use Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills. I did so, and am pleased to find that they are as recommended, a cure for those ailments. I therefore subscribe myself cheerfully in recommending them to any who may suffer with those complaints.—E. B. NAAR, News Editor True American.

AN INTERRUPTED LOVE SCENE.

The Story of a Plainfield Society Man Who Courted a Girl on the Bridge.

A New York paper says that last Sunday evening in this city, an amusing little drama was enacted at the Richmond street bridge, which crosses the brook dividing Plainfield from the borough. The actors in the piece were a well-known blood of this city, whose family moves in the best society and who is remarkable for his small stature; a young lady, not so high up in the social scale, and an unknown villain who had followed the loving pair unknown to them.

About half-past nine the sport arrived at the bridge with the heroine and while sitting there billing and cooing they were suddenly interrupted by the appearance of the villain. Hastily catching hold of the fair one the hero fled with her and the villain was lost in the darkness. After seeing the young lady home the sport started for his house, but he had not proceeded far when he was stopped by the interrupter of his bliss, who gave him some sound advice on the impropriety of conducting his courtship on the public highway. It is safe to say that Fred will look around him next time before he begins his love making.

The Same Old Play, but Enlivened With Donkeys, Dogs and Dancing.

Music Hall has been rented for Thursday evening of next week to "Heflin's Mammoth Spectacular Co.," for one performance of "Ten Nights in a Bar Room". To those who have seen the old play a novelty will be offered. To those who have not, a treat is in store. The company is said to be composed of an excellent cast of actors, who will produce a new version, rewritten by Lawrence Russell, who acts the part of Switchel. The new play contains one entirely new scene, the old mill and two new acts, and the following additional characters: John Morgan, a wealthy farmer; Josiah Wilkins; a miser; Zeke, a mill hand; Ezra Smith, a farmer; Anna Colbourne, Joe Morgan's sweetheart, afterward Mrs. Joe Morgan and Bill Edwards, a hanger on at the "Sickle & Sheaf". The bar room scene will be enlivened by the presentation of trained donkeys and dogs and dancing. The street parade, which will occur about noon, will be a novelty of itself, comprising a chariot drawn by horses, Trinity church chimes, a sextette of colored jubilee singers, donkeys, dogs, etc. Every lady attending the performance will be presented with a souvenir.

Where to Go Next Monday Afternoon.

Many of our citizens will go to New York to enjoy Washington's Birthday, and many of them will include a visit to some theater as part of their holiday programme. The leading, laughing success in the metropolis to-day is Wm. H. Crane in his new play, "For Money", at the Star theatre, and a special matinee of that play will be given on Monday afternoon, so that out-of-town visitors may attend the performance and return home early in the evening. Mr. Crane's funny impersonation of the Colonel and the Comodore in this play is one of the most notable successes of the present theatrical season, and no play-goer who wants to keep abreast of the times can afford to miss seeing it.

What do You Think of This?

Advertising pays when you advertise in the right place. Mr. Andrew Kenney had a safety bicycle taken from his house, presumably as a "joke". It was left in front of the depot and found by Policeman Lynch, who advertised the fact in THE NEWS cent-a-word column last evening. Mr. Kenney has his wheel again, which he never expected, at the cost of only a few cents.—Plainfield News.

Now as the facts of the above case are that the bicycle was advertised in THE PRESS, and that Mr. Kenney and Mr. Lynch saw the advertisement in THE PRESS only, and the owner recovered his wheel through that medium alone, what do you think of the fabrication quoted above?

An Accident to 892's Eccentric.

The Blue Line train leaving New York for Washington at 5 o'clock p. m., was delayed an hour near Fanwood, last evening, and the westward bound trains were switched around it. The trouble was that just as the express drawn by engine 892 at full speed reached the top of the grade in the cut, the pin of the eccentric on the left of the engine, broke. The engineer who was, fortunately, a clever mechanic, took out the rod on the disabled side and the engine was run with one pair of drivers to Bound Brook where another had been wired for to take its place.

The Difference Between Was and Is.

The News in printing secretary Adams's statement that there is no foundation for the report that the physicians of Plainfield contemplate raising their fees, says: "The report did not appear in the News."

Of course it did n't. News never finds its way into that impoverished sheet. The report appeared in THE PRESS because the matter was being suggested by some of the doctors and talked of among them. There was foundation for the report then, but since THE PRESS sounded a warning for the people, the doctors "contemplate" such action no longer.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED.

Persons with weak lungs—those who are constantly catching cold—should wear ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER over the chest, and another between the shoulder blades during cold weather. Remember they always strengthen and never weaken the part to which they are applied. Do not be deceived by imagining any other plaster like them—they are not—may look it, but looks deceive. Insist always on having ALLCOCK'S, the only reliable plaster ever produced.

THIS MUST NOT BE!

The Indecent Are Not the Ones for a Mayor and Police Board to Select to Rule in Such Communities as This.

The following is quoted from the Courier of this city:

Mayor Gilbert, President S. A. Ginna and Councilmen F. E. Marsh, E. N. Erickson and H. Weber, constituting the Police Board, met in the Mayor's office last evening and decided to reappoint Tunis J. Carey as captain of the Plainfield police force.

In spite of the source from which the above is taken (which is the city clerk's own paper) and in spite of the source from which the Courier received it, (which is, probably, councilman Marsh) THE PRESS is not ready to believe it, and the people who may will be sorry to.

If, however, the police board as mentioned above intend doing this thing, they will regret the fact of its publicity before the week's out. Councilmen Ginna, Marsh, Erickson and Weber may not care what the people think as they have recently been elected for terms of two years, but Mayor Gilbert certainly cannot be so careless of the hitherto untarnished record of his reign, as to blot it so black that it would be forever and ever a reproach!

This Carey was suspended by the police board of a past council for cursing and defaming his superiors. What will president Stephen A. Ginna's feelings be when captain Carey, forsooth, calls him what he called president Elmore D. Moffett ?

Sentence is now suspended in the city judge's office, over this Carey for a violation of a city ordinance. Is the law-breaker the man Mayor Gilbert chooses to be the guardian of the city's peace and morals ?

This Carey is now under bonds to await the action of the grand jury, charged with breaking into the store and seizing the goods of a tenant whom Carey said owed him rent, but for which the tenant says he holds receipts. Is the house-breaker the man councilmen Ginna, Marsh, Erickson and Weber choose to be the protector of the people's property ?

But THE PRESS prefers to believe that this is not true of the mayor and of the police board. The fact that the statement appears only in the Courier is alone sufficient reason to doubt it, for if it was so Carey would have known it and his organ the News would have slopped all over with big letters and bad English telling of the obscene policeman's "vindication".

THE PRESS joins with all decent people in hoping that Mayor Gilbert, President Ginna and councilmen Erickson, Marsh and Weber have not forgotten what is due and decent in this community.

No State-sanctioned Vice for Mr. Powell's Society.

At the sixteenth anniversary meeting of the New York State committee to Guard Against the Introduction of State-sanctioned Vice and for the promotion of Social Purity, held Tuesday night at 110 Second avenue, New York city, a resolution was passed denouncing the bill advocating the regulation of vice about to be introduced into the legislature of that State.

The president of the meeting, the Hon. Aaron N. Powell of this city, said the attempt made to regulate vice in the manner proposed was infamous. The Rev. Dr. Sabine said that such a bill purposed "To repeal on earth the law of heaven". Dr. Andrew F. Currier also spoke.

The Rev. Dr Rainsford sent a telegram in which he said: "I need not say that I think the bill to be as bad as it is vicious".

Morris Glick's Fate.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 18.—Morris Glick, a pack peddler who has been but six weeks in the country, stepped out of the way of a freight train on the Lackawanna Railroad and was struck and killed by a passenger train on the other track.

Looking Up the Law.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—A Philadelphia dispatch quoted on Wall street says that Gov. Pattison has written a letter to Attorney-General Hensel calling his attention to the reports of a coal deal, asking him to investigate and report whether there is any law covering such cases.

Tschigorin in the Lead.

HAVANA, Feb. 18.—The nineteenth game of the chess match was won by Tschigorin. The Russian for the first time played a Scotch gambit. The game lasted thirty-two moves. The score is Tschigorin 8, Steinitz 7, drawn 4.

As to the Canals.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 18.—Robert Sedgewick, Deputy Minister of Justice, denies that the treaty of Washington declares the St. Lawrence canals free and open for commerce as well as navigation to the subjects of both countries.

Checked—the progress of Consumption. It's cured, too, if it's taken in time. What is needed is the one unfailing remedy for Scrofula in all its forms—for one of those forms (Lung-scrofula) is Consumption.

Purify your blood—that's the first thing. Rid it of the taints and poisons that make it easy for this dreaded disease to fasten its hold. Then if you haven't delayed too long, you can be cured.

From beginning to end, the remedy is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It's the most potent blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and flesh-builder known to medical science. Consumption, and every form of Scrofula and blood-taint, all yield to it. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, and all severe, lingering Coughs, it's an unequaled remedy—and the only one for the Blood and Lungs that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

A Competent Question.

"But," said the speaker, "there are a great many people who disapprove of divorce as strongly as I do. What is your opinion of divorce, sir?" he added, addressing a young man who was listening with the deepest attention.

"I don't believe in divorce," answered the young man.

"Are you married?"

"I am."

"H'm! Here is the opinion of one competent to speak on the subject. How long have you been married, sir?"

"Since yesterday."—N. Y. Press.

One Load He Carried Alone.

Mrs. McBride—George, dear, when we were married only a year ago you said I should help you carry your burdens.

McBride—Yes, love.

"Then why didn't you let me help you yesterday?"

"I don't understand you, love."

"Why, papa says he saw you with a heavy load on and you never let me help you with it."—Epoch.

Too Bad.

Miss de Muir (at reception, to stately young lady)—Miss Highup, permit me to introduce my brother Maj. de Muir.

Miss Highup—I am glad to meet you, Maj. de Muir. Are you in the army, major?

The Young Man—No, Miss Highup. Major is my Christian name.

Important News.

George—Whew! What can be the matter? Telegram says: "Come home immediately."

"Yes," returned the loved one facetiously. "I think Sol must be a sort of prodigal sun."—Judge.

Oh, What a Cough!

THE MAN OF FASHION.

He Should Have a Code of Health to Govern Him.

How, When and What to Drink and Eat —His Morning Exercise — Follow the "English Style" — Some Well-Known Men "Around Town."

[COPYRIGHT, 1892.]

The man of fashion should have his code of health as he has his code of ethics. From October 1, when society takes up its town life, until the Lenten days of rest, the strain on his brain, nerve and muscle is constant, and the vitality of the strongest man in the world would be undermined in at least two seasons unless a rigorous system for the preservation of health, coupled with a good deal of self-abnegation, is followed. The duties of a man of fashion involve his presence at innumerable "affairs" each season. The opera and the assembly, the theater and the ball, entail a necessary complement of convivialities. These tear down the society man. Of course, a fashionable man drinks his rich and rare wines, for his life would be unbearably stupid if he eschewed these beverages. But he owes it to himself to regulate his "wining" as far as possible. The one rule to follow at any "little affair" is to drink sparingly of all that is set before him. A good caterer will see that the guests at the banquet are served with only such wines as suit each particular course, and moderate amounts of each vintage can only serve to aid digestion. But here is a rule with regard to drinking that every man of fashion should bear in mind. Avoid the matutinal cocktail. Of course, it seems just the right thing when you get up in the morning to look into the mirror and find unmistakable evidences that you had a great time the night before. Your thoughts naturally advert to bromides and antypyrine. Your physician, if he is a good one, will tell you to avoid all these temporary expedients. His advice will run something like this: "Swing your Indian clubs for ten minutes, or exercise with your dumb bells for the same length of time, and then jump into a bath as cold as you can stand it. If you have a shower bath handy take it in as icy a shape as possible, and then rub yourself down with a crash towel until you can fairly feel the blood purling into every part of your now reviving constitution."

In his sleeping apartments the man of fashion must be a fresh-air crank. He need not have at his tongue's end the number of cubic yards of air that one adult human being will poison in one hour, but he must know the value of breathing fresh, pure air, or air as nearly pure as the polluting city will permit, while he sleeps, and to do this, too, without exposure to grip-breeding draughts.

In the first place, in selecting your room, try and select one into which the light of day will not pierce at too early an hour. The man of fashion must sleep at least eight hours and in that time the restorative powers of the body must be given full play. There should be absolute quiet and for this reason it is advisable that the society man get as far away as possible from the early din of New York's granite-paved streets. It will be a difficult matter to secure proper ventilation for an inside room, and that is why, in the selection of an apartment, the ventilating system of the whole house should be looked into. If it is compatible with the requisite of perfect quiet, the man of fashion should make it a rule to have the windows of his apartment open in cold as well as in warm weather. It is not necessary to sleep in a cold atmosphere, but it is necessary to sleep in one that is pure, and for this reason you may turn on your heater and get your room as warm as you like it, but keep the window open.

There is one thing above all others that keeps the English man of fashion in such fine health. There has been no specimen of ruddier manhood on American soil in years than was brought to notice in the person of Col. Vivian, whose marriage to Mrs. Roberts occurred in New York recently. He is an example of the physically-trained military gentleman and English man of fashion, and he himself says that his powerful physique and strong constitution are but the result of the physical training that he has had since childhood. This is told to emphasize the need of exercise on the part of every American society man.

Harvard and Yale have done much to bring physical training into favor among men of fashion. The sons of America's rich men do not outgrow the love for athletics and outdoor sports acquired in the "nines," "elevens" and crews of those institutions. After graduation, although they no longer keep up their football and baseball games, they nevertheless continue exercising to some extent, whether it be in bicycling, tennis or riding. Many go in for gymnastics, as the membership roll of the Manhattan athletic club shows. Dr. C. P. Linhart, the physical director of that institution, has in his charge a number of sons of millionaires and prominent club men who take regular weekly exercise under his supervision. Dr. Linhart has adopted the chart system of development first introduced by Amherst and which has since been adopted by Harvard and Yale. The idea of this charting system is to keep progressive record of a man's development so that at any given time it may be ascertained just which muscles need special training to keep up the symmetry of the body. For instance, if the measurements show that he is "pigeon-breasted" or proportionately too deep through the chest, he is put on exercise that developes him laterally, and vice versa. But in general it cannot be said that gymnastics are popular in the ranks of men of fashion. Boxing is not much of a fad now, though several wealthy young men are still waited on in their apartments by champions from whom they take instruction in the use of their fists. But boxing is too violent. A man who needs his head in his business, even if that business is only saying charming nothings about Ibsen and Browning between waltzes, can't afford to have it undergo the concussions of a sparring bout.

Riding is deservedly popular in fashionable circles. It is an exhilarating exercise, and, although it does not develop all the muscles of the body, it takes first place as a supplementary means of refreshing one's constitution, for there is nothing really so invigorating as fresh air and sunshine; but the man exposed to the wearing dissipations of society life needs something that will do more than shake up the body; he needs something that will bring every muscle into active play.

Dr. W. Seward Webb, the well-known clubman and president of the Wagner Palace Car Company, uses the dumb bells and Indian clubs. Chauncey M. Depew takes his out in walking. De Lancey Nicoll, the district attorney, is also a great walker, and about once a week, when the weather is propitious, takes a twenty-mile constitutional out into the country. Tom Johnson, the great society favorite and statesman of Cleveland, is devoted to the bicycle. Eddie Gould has strong predilection in the direction of athletic sports in addition to his skill on horseback, which makes it improbable that he will ever have to employ a private physician, as does his father. The Cutting brothers owe their splendid physiques to their active engagements in healthful outdoor sports.

ALBERT EDWARD TYRRELL.

PRESIDENTIAL DINNER.

A Formal Meal with George Washington in 1789.

The following is a description of one of Gen. Washington's dinner parties, given on the 27th of August, 1789, taken from the "Senator McCloy Diaries" recently published: "Senate adjourned early. At a little after four I called on Mr. Bassett, of the Delaware state. We went to the president's to dinner. The company were: President and Mrs. Washington, Vice President and Mrs. Adams, the governor and his wife, Mr. Jay and wife, Mr. Langdon and wife, Mr. Dalton and a lady (perhaps his wife), and a Mr. Smith, Mr. Bassett, myself, Lear, Lewis, the president's two secretaries. The president and Mrs. Washington sat opposite each other in the middle of the table; the two secretaries, one at each end. It was a great dinner and the best of the kind I was ever at. The room, however, was disagreeably warm. First was the soup; fish roasted and broiled; meats, gammon, fowls, etc. This was the dinner. The middle of the table was garnished in the usual tasty way, with small images, flowers (artificial), etc. The dessert was, first, apple pies, pudding, etc.; then ice creams, jellies, etc.; then watermelons, muskmelons, apples, peaches, nuts. It was the most solemn dinner I ever sat at. Not a health drank; scarce a word said until the cloth was taken away. Then the president, filling a glass of wine, with great formality drank to the health of every individual by name round the table. Everybody imitated him, charged glasses, and such a buzz of 'health, sir,' and 'thank you, madam,' never had I heard before. Indeed, I had liked to have been thrown out in a hurry; but I got a little wine in my glass, and passed the ceremony. The ladies sat a good while, and the bottles passed about, but there was a dead silence almost. Mrs. Washington at last withdrew with the ladies. I expected the men would now begin, but the same stillness remained. The president told of a New England clergyman who had lost a hat and wig in passing a river called the Brunks. He smiled and everybody else laughed. He now and then said a sentence or two on some common subject, and what he said was not amiss. Mr. Jay tried to make a laugh by mentioning the circumstances of the duchess of Devonshire leaving no stone unturned to carry Fox's election. There was a Mr. Smith who mentioned how Homer described Æneas leaving his wife and carrying his father out of flaming Troy. He had heard somebody (I suppose) witty on the occasion; but if he had ever read it he would have said Virgil. The president kept a fork in his hand, when the cloth was taken away, I thought, for the purpose of picking nuts. He ate no nuts, however, but played with the fork, striking on the edge of the table with it. We did not sit long after the ladies retired. The president arose, went upstairs to drink coffee; the company followed. I took my hat and came home."

A Silver Question.

Ponsonby — Heigho! every silver lining has its cloud.

Popinjay—Yes. You can't earn a quarter dollar without working for it. —Jewelers' Circular.

OUR LIVER IN SPRING.

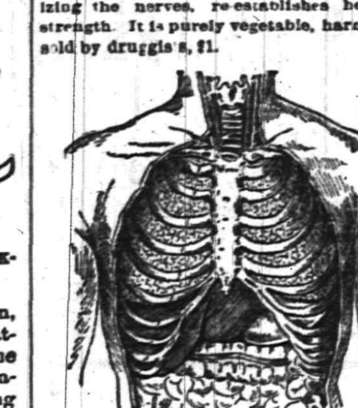
What People Ought to Know of It.

THE LIVER.

The nerves which control our liver often become weakened, irritated, diseased—more so in Spring. The function of the liver is disturbed and torpid liver or disordered action results. Hence the bile, which is waste and poisonous material designed to be expelled, is not properly s creted and eliminated from the body. Thus retained, it causes indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, bloating, biliousness, bad taste, headache, dizziness, dull head, nervousness, and particularly during Spring, weak, languid and tired feeling. "If not cured, this condition leads to fatal liver and kidney diseases!" All persons need a medicine to stimulate and regulate the liver and strengthen their nerve force in the Spring.

The Grip also, had a peculiarly weakening effect upon the nerves and liver and thousands who had this disease have never recovered their former health.

The best remedy and most certain cure for liver complaints and weak nerves is Dr. Greene's Nervura, which restores digestion, corrects the disordered liver, regulates the bowels, invigorates the blood, and by strengthening and vitalizing the nerves, re-establishes health and strength. It is purely vegetable, harmless, and sold by druggists, $1.



WHERE YOUR LIVER IS.

"I was taken sick with liver disease and ulceration of the bowels; my heart was also affected. I was finally confined to my bed three months. A consultation of physicians was held, and "I was pronounced incurable!" After that I stopped taking their remedies and began the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura. Previous to this I could not sleep, my nerves were excitable and spasmodic, my stomach would not bear food, vomiting almost constantly. Soon after beginning Dr. Greene's Nervura I slept better, and my stomach would bear light food. I continued to gain until I could get out. I now work the greater portion of the time, and feel that Dr. Greene's Nervura "saved my life!"

JAMES MEEHAN,
57 Granite St., Quincy, Mass."

N. B. ☞ Dr. Greene, the successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases, 35 W. 14th St., New York, can be consulted, free, personally, or by letter. Call or write him about the case, or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter fully explaining the disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free. 22 td tts

She Bought It.

There is no end of new shades, or it might be nearer the truth to say of new names for shades. Of one of the latest we find this anecdote told but not vouched for by London Tid-Bits.

"Have you any buff trimmings to go with this stuff?" asked a flashily-dressed woman of an assistant in a draper's establishment.

"I think so, miss," answered the polite young man, taking down a piece of goods and spreading it on the counter.

"Buff! Do you call that buff?" exclaimed the woman. "That's too dark for a buff."

"But, miss, that is—"

"It's too dark! I can see it is."

"Why, of course it's dark, madam!" persisted the man. "It's blindman's buff—the new shade, you see."

He sold the goods.

A Sympathetic Jury.

First Female Juror (some years hence)—There seems to be no doubt that the prisoner, Mr. Handlecash, stole a hundred thousand from the company that employed him. Was he indulgent to his wife?

Second Female Juror—Yes, indeed. He gave her everything she wanted.

Third Female Juror—She had just a lovely time! trips to Europe, Worth's dresses, opera-box, everything!

Verdict—We, the jury, in the case of Mr. Handlecash, find that the prisoner was an over-indulgent husband, who should be reprimanded by the court, the company to pay the costs.—N. Y. Weekly.

Used to Sitting Down.

"Oh, yes, I often have to sit on the jury," said the supreme court judge, as he administered a reprimand.—Life.

A Believer.

A Difference of Opinion.

Aunt Ella—So you don't feel well, Hal? You ate too much of that pudding at dinner.

So Considerate.

Farmer's Daughter—Pa, there's a couple of bunco men in the front parlor.

Farmer—Well, here's the bank book. Tell 'em to help 'emselves. I'm busy to-day.—Puck.

When She Was Pleased.

He—Ah! I fear you do not care for me so much when I am away from you.

She—No—no—no — no — you wrong me. That is when I care for you the most.—Jury.

A REVOLTING FEAST

Sad Story of Destitution and Misery Revealed.

DISEASED HORSE FLESH AS FOOD

German Immigrants Seek Wealth and Find Worse Than Death.

Seventy-Year-Old William Kindermann and His Son Have but a Sorry Existence in the Land of Their Golden Hopes—When the Horse Was Killed They Tasted the First Meat They Had Eaten in Months—They Receive Three Dollars for the Hides, With Which They Will Buy Flour and Potatoes to Keep Themselves from Starving.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Feb. 19.—Ridgefield Township's Board of Health has discovered that two diseased horses have been slaughtered and eaten by Germans living near the little village of Palisades Park.

It was reported first that the animals had been converted into Frankfurter sausages and sold in this city. An investigation revealed a story of destitution and misery such as is seldom encountered in a civilized community.

The supposed sausage factory is a little shanty where two men, father and son, exist in the most abject squalor.

Inside there was but one room, about fifteen feet square, inclosed by walls of mud and mortar. In one corner stood a bunk of rough boards upon which lay an old man, shivering with the cold. The floor, which was of dirt, was shared by six dejected looking fowls and a goat. Across the middle of the room upon a hickory pole were hung parts of a horse. On the stove, in a tin pail, horse flesh was stewing.

The old man seemed to be very feeble and miserable. They at first resented the reporter's intrusion, but finally told their queer story. The old man was Wilhelm Kinderman, the young man his stepson, Johan Wilhelm Schaefer. They came to this country three years ago from Spremberg, Labau, Saxony.

Young Schaefer had been in the German army, as his papers show, as clerk to the commander of an English regiment. His step-father, who was 70 years old, persuaded him to take advantage of a two years' furlough and come to America to try their fortunes in the land of plenty.

Their hopes were blasted. A few days in New York satisfied them that the field was too crowded. They wandered up the Hudson river, through Bergen county. The wild wooded hills reminded them of their home in the Bavarian Alps, and upon a steep hillside they built their wretched hut.

Winter came and with it starvation.

"We had no food in the house and Johan brought the old horse from the woods and knocked it in the head. That night we eat the first meat we had tasted for months.

"A few days afterward a man from Englewood brought a horse here and said we could have it. Johan killed that also and we now have enough meat to last us a year. We will smoke it and then chop it up and stuff those skins with it and it will keep many months."

Young Schaefer produced three silver dollars he said he had received from a dealer in hides for the skins. He had carried them to this city in a bag and he thought that this is what gave rise to the report that he was selling the meat here. The money, he said, would buy a barrel of potatoes and they could live very comfortably until warm weather when he expected to get work grading some of the new streets.

ADJUDGED INSANE.

Hamilton Imagines That He Possesses Unlimited Wealth.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Feb. 19.—Counsellor Frederick L. Hamilton, who was arrested in New York city several weeks ago charged with robbing a citizen of Vermont, and who has at various times caused his relatives considerable trouble by uttering false checks, has been adjudged insane by Drs. Howard and Aldrich, of Warrensburgh. He will be taken to Ogdensburg to-day.

When Hamilton reached home from New York he flourished a revolver and drove his mother from the house.

Hamilton labors under the delusion that he is in the possession of unlimited wealth and can settle all his troubles by simply drawing a check.

The exact nature of her malady is not officially announced, but it is said to be the after effects of an attack of influenza.

TRIALS AND TRIBULATIONS.

The Divine Sarah Can Secure No Quarters for Her Menagerie.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 19.—Sarah Bernhardt has reached here in her private car. Her manager had telegraphed ahead for a suite of seven rooms at the Southern Hotel, but the managers at that hostelry were unable to comply with the request, and the divine Sarah had to be content with three rooms, but the hotel people said that they could not permit her to bring her pet animals with her, so Sarah said that rather than be separated from her four-footed companion she would remain in her car.

After a two hours stay at the depot she reconsidered her determination, and, entering a cab, drove to the Lindell.

Here she was told that her requirements could not be granted and after a rather stormy scene Mlle. Bernhardt drove to the Southern.

She had evidently wearied of the attempt to keep her St. Bernard companion with her and told the hotel people she would not insist on the dog sharing her rooms with her; but during her ride the rooms had been engaged and Sarah's choler, which had been gradually rising, now reached a point which she could find relief in an outburst of the most emphatic French that has greeted the ears of the hotel folks in many a day.

She again folded her wraps about her and giving the hotel clerk in particular and St. Louis in general, such a scorching as only Sarah can give, once more entered the cab, and at a late hour in the afternoon, was wandering about the streets in a pouring rain, seeking quarters for herself and dog.

FIVE LIVES FOR ONE.

Falling Walls Crush Rescuing French Firemen to Death.

LILLE, France, Feb. 19.—Five men lost their lives here in a gallant attempt to rescue a person supposed to be within the walls of a burning building.

The disaster occurred at a fire in a drapery store. When the whole building was wrapped in flames a report was circulated that one unfortunate person had failed to escape, and the five men bravely entered the building and began to feel their way through the blinding smoke and flame in the direction where the missing person was supposed to be.

They had been in the building only a few seconds when the walls fell in with a terrible crash and the five heroes were buried beneath a huge pile of burning debris and instantly killed.

A Ghost Breaks Up a Club.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 19.—Two or three years ago Herman Mack, a prominent member of the Allemania, the richest Hebrew club in the Ohio Valley, committed suicide in the club house. Immediately afterward some of the younger members claimed they saw his ghost. Gradually the whole club became affected. Is a Duel On?

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 19.—Stories are rife to the effect that Park Commissioner Richard Klemm has challenged Louis Willich to a duel on Tuesday, and that seconds have been agreed on. The gentlemen interested refuse any interview on the subject. They are three of the most prominent Germans in St. Louis.

TRIED TO KILL THEM

Goodbody Offers Poison to His Wife and Child.

LAUDANUM AND WHISKEY.

When They Refuse It He Swallows the Mixture Himself.

He is Now in the Hospital, but the Physicians Say He Will Recover, When He Will Have to Answer to a Charge of Attempted Suicide—Mrs. Goodbody Had Her Husband Arrested for Neglecting to Provide for Her—He Hoarded Every Cent, Depriving Her of the Necessities of Life.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—After trying to poison his wife and his 11-year-old son, Richard Goodbody, a janitor, swallowed a big dose of whiskey and laudanum yesterday. He is now in the Presbyterian Hospital. He will recover, and when he does he will have to answer a charge of attempting suicide.

Goodbody is 55 years old and earns $9 a week as a janitor. He concluded some time ago that he could get along much better in the West and began to save money. He hoarded every cent, depriving his wife of the necessaries of life. But he drank whiskey all the time.

Mrs. Goodbody had her husband arrested last Tuesday for neglecting to provide for her. Justice Welde, in the Harlem Police Court, ordered him to pay her $3 a week. Mrs. Goodbody on Wednesday visited a friend, and returning home found she was locked out. She pounded on the doors, but received no response.

Her husband was lying in a drunken stupor. She passed the night at a friend's house, and went to an institution in Brooklyn yesterday and asked for board. She could pay but $3 a week and the institution demanded $6.

There was nothing to do but to return to her husband. She reached home about 11 o'clock yesterday morning. Goodbody was out. Presently he entered with a bottle of whiskey and a vial of laudanum. He poured the whiskey into a pitcher and then put in the laudanum. Bennie, the 11-year-old son of couple, was in the room.

"We'll all have a nice drink now," he said. "There's no fun in working all the time."

He poured the poisoned whiskey into three glasses, one of which he offered to his wife. She refused it. Then he called Bennie to him and putting one arm around the boy's waist held one of the glasses to his mouth. The boy was about to drink when Mrs. Goodbody struck the glass from her husband's hand. Then she seized Bennie and dragged him across the room.

Goodbody said gooby to Bennie and his wife, and gulped down the contents of one of the glasses. Then he caught Bennie in his arms and kissed him.

The wife ran toward the door. Her husband caught her by the dress, dragged her back, and locking the door, took out the key. Mrs. Goodbody struggled to get it from him, and as the laudanum began to take effect, she succeeded. She ran to the police station. A policeman returned with her. They found Goodbody doubled up on the floor groaning with pain. Little Bennie had run out of the house and sat on the curbstone crying.

An ambulance was summoned and Goodbody was taken to the hospital.

WEIR WINS.

He Knocks Out Steele in Twelve Rounds at New Bedford.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Feb. 19.—Several hundred spectators paid $4 each for admittance to the rooms of the New Bedford Athletic Club to witness a fight between Ike Weir and Frank Steele, for a purse offered by the club.

It was one of the best contests ever seen in the city, and many sporting men were present from out of town.

Both men were in excellent condition, lasting one hour and a half, when Ike had punished his opponent so badly that he laid down and could not get up for thirty-two seconds, and the "Spider" won.

James F. Moore was referee. It was a clean knock-out, Steele's face clearly showing the punishment he had received.

The Double-Sculls Championship.

BOSTON, Feb. 19.—Edward Hanlon and William O'Connor write from Toronto that they have accepted Teemer's challenge for a double-scull race between them and Teemer and Hosmer for $1,000 a side and the championship of the world, at the Point of Pines, Massachusetts, next June.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., Feb. 19.—Isaac L. Corwin, for many years superintendent of the Consumers Gas Company here, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. He was 65 years old. His wife died by suicide last year and her fate preyed upon her husband's mind.

MENNONITES DRIVEN OUT.

Russia Insists on Military Service, Which Is Against Their Creed.

ODESSA, Feb. 19.—The proposed emigration to America this spring of the German Mennonites settled near Tashkend, in Asiatic Russia, is the result of the new policy adopted by the Russian Government in requiring the Mennonites to do military service the same as other subjects of the empire.

This is against the Mennonite creed, the people of that sect being equally averse to lawsuits and to war.

For over 100 years their prejudices have been respected, and they have been regarded as desirable residents of the empire, on account of their skill, industry, and law-abiding character.

It is now desired, however, to get rid of all Germans, no matter how remote their descent, who are not entirely amalgamated with the Russian population. Hence the measures that are about to deprive Russia of its Mennonite population.

GIVING FAMINE RELIEF.

Peasants Starving Themselves to Keep Their Horses Alive.

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Count Tolstoi gives, in the "Daily Telegraph," an interesting description of the soup kitchens which he has established for the relief of his famine-stricken country people. When he hears that the people of a village are starving, he journeys thither and subjects the starosta, or leading elder, to a series of inquiries calculated to ascertain who are most in need.

Besides his soup kitchens, he gives rye bread and potatoes to those who are in need of relief. The peasants are most anxious to save their horses, as they are their chief dependence for future agricultural operations.

The peasants of one place, themselves virtually starving, have kept eighty horses alive through the winter so far on famine rations rather than kill the animals. Men and brutes starve together.

Refuse to Report Unless Paid.

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—Quite a number of physicians, including some wealthy and distinguished ones, have refused to comply with the health commissioners' request for reports of all new cases of typhoid unless they are paid a fee for such reports. They say the information is their own, and they do not propose to give it away for nothing any more than they would their medical services. Health reports show nineteen deaths this week from scarlet fever, thirteen from diphtheria and twenty-five from typhoid.

From this mammoth plant the Reading will obtain all powder for use in the collieries of the company under the new deal. The tract is about ten miles from Scranton.

Actor Dixey the Defendant.

BOSTON, Feb. 19.—Harry E. Dixey, the actor, is a defendant in a suit in the Superior Court which is soon to be tried. The plaintiff is Wm. Gill, the playwright, the subject of the suit being an alleged breach of contract concerning the play, "The Seven Ages," and the amount of damages claimed is $5,000. Mr. Gill says he made a contract with Dixey by the terms of which he was to write and Dixey was to pay for the play.

FREYCINET RESIGNS

Associations Bill Defeated in the French Chamber.

DIPLOMACY OF THE POPE.

His Recent Letter Believed to Have Produced the Result.

The Bill Was Said to Be Directed Against Catholics—The Vote Was Three Hundred and Four to Two Hundred and Twelve—Victory Over the Government Hailed With Enthusiasm By All But the Radicals—Leon Say Spoken of as a Possible Successor to M. Freycinet.

PARIS, Feb. 19.—A vote was taken in the Chamber of Deputies last night on the Associations bill, and resulted in its defeat.

M. Freycinet, Premier, at once offered his resignation.

The vote was 304 against the bill to 212 in favor of it. Great excitement prevails. The bill was said to be directed against Catholics.

The government said in the first article that the right of association may be enjoyed without any previous authorization, but the second article begins by enumerating the conditions under which association will be tolerated.

A declaration must be made as to the name and object of the association, its list of members and headquarters, and a full statement must also be forthcoming as to its foreign members or correspondents.

The points, however, which especially affect religious associations are these: Every member of an association shall have the right to withdraw at any time and to demand that his contributions be paid back, and to this right the association shall not have the right to offer any opposition.

The law also enjoins that no real estate shall be owned, except such as is absolutely necessary; that hospitals shall not have a larger fund than is needed for their maintenance, and shall not be used to house the association. Foreigners are further prohibited from acquiring any kind of property, and from receiving gifts and heritages.

For every infraction of the law the offender is to be punished by imprisonment.

Liberty in France still maintains her old reputation, and it is therefore useless to add that the bill was coldly received.

The victory over the government was hailed with enthusiasm by the Catholics and all but the Radicals.

The Pope's recent utterance in favor of the Republic is believed to be largely responsible for the triumph of the Church over its enemies.

The Pope spoke highly of France, and flattered the pride, both military and civil, of the nation.

These utterances were made public just at the time when the government was proceeding to introduce its bill to efface the independence of the religious communities.

They made a profound impression and disarmed all who were not radically hostile to the Church and resolved to degrade it.

The government found too late that a mistake had been made, but resolved to persist, hoping to force the measure through.

The defeat comes with stunning force, and is interpreted as a rebuke for the whole course of the Ministry in clerical matters, from the time that M. Fallieres, as Minister of Public Worship, prosecuted the archbishop of Aix for sentiments that were zealous and perhaps indiscreet, but were certainly not intended as any offence to the State.

M. de Freycinet has held the place of Minister of War and Premier since March 1, 1890. He is about 64 years of age, and has been prominent in public life since 1870.

Leon Lay is looked upon as a possible successor of M. de Freycinet.

HAWAIIAN ELECTIONS.

The Bush-Wilcox Party Defeated—Result Favorable to Annexation.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 19.—Hawaiian advices by steamer Mariposa state that the election, which took place on the 3d instant, resulted in the defeat of the Liberals, or Bush-Wilcox party.

The Conservative, including the Nation Reform and the independent members have a strong majority in both Houses.

The defeated party claimed that the ballots used caused their defeat and talk of a contest.

The result of the election may be considered in a general way as favorable to annexation to the United States, although that was not admittedly an issue.

Mrs. Wheeler's Death.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 19.—Mrs. Grace Munson Wheeler is dead after reaching the age of 99 years, 6 months and four days. Until very recently Mrs. Wheeler was in the best of health and spirits. Mrs. Wheeler's husband, who has been dead for many years, was an American naval officer, and commanded a corvette during the War of 1812. Her father was an officer in the Continental Army, and was in command of Dobb's Ferry when Major Andre, the British spy, was hanged.

A CONCERT UNSURPASSED.

The Second of The Melopoias, Promises to be the Best Ever Given in This City by Any Musical Society.

Those who are fortunate enough to be subscribers to the Melopoias, have in prospect a great musical treat next Tuesday evening. The second private concert of the society to be given then, will be one of the best, if not the best concert ever given in this city. The committee have spared neither time nor expense in securing the very finest talent available to assist the society, and the chorus work of the members and the beautiful effects produced will reflect the greatest credit upon the talented conductor, William R. Chapman, whose skillful and careful training has brought about a result that is little short of perfection.

THE PRESS has already announced the coming of Mme. Lillian Blauvelt, who will repeat on this occasion the Jewel song from Faust, by Gounod, her beautiful rendering of which produced such a sensation at the Seidl concert in Brooklyn a few weeks ago. Signor Antonio Galassi will sing the Toreador song from Carmen. Signor Galassi is too well-known to the music-loving public to need any further introduction, and all must congratulate the committee and members of the society in securing his services. The instrumental part of the programme by the Rubinstein Trio—Otto K. Schill, violin, Adolph Hartdegen, cello and W. Ward Stephens, piano—is sure to please everybody, so THE PRESS predicts a remarkably successful concert in all parts and particulars. Miss Jessie M. Utter and Emile Levy will be the accompanists. The entire programme is as follows:

Base-ball Chat.

McIndoe has signed with Somerville.

The schedule of games published exclusively in THE PRESS Wednesday was adopted by the Jersey Central league last night.

Berriman, whose work of the past year gave such satisfaction, is to be retained as umpire during the season. The other league umpire will be Linn, who umpired last year for Elizabeth. Berriman will open the season at Elizabeth, and Linn at Plainfield.

A Fool Yelled Fire.

The Rev. Mr. Warnick gave a very entertaining stereopticon exhibition in St. Mary's hall, last evening. It was entitled "Round the World in 80 Minutes", and was a great success. But during the affair the rubber connection slipped off the gas attachment, and the loud hissing of the escaping gas was heard. Then some fool shouted "Fire" and there was great excitement among the audience. But no one was hurt and all their fears were subsequently quieted.

—The United Tea and Coffee Growers' association are offering all kinds of sugar at 4½ cents a pound, and the prices on other goods are correspondingly low.

MOBBED IN MILLBURN.

The "Boston Variety Company" from Plainfield Stoned from the Stage.

A histrionic sensation was caused at Millburn last evening by a gang of amateur barn-stormers from Plainfield under the guise of the "Boston Variety Company". The show had been advertised as a choice entertainment, and the opera-house was crowded with society people. The "company" was a queer aggregation. Some of them reached Millburn in one of Coddington's stages; a few others went by coal train. Prominent among the stars were "Prof." Reilly, a local fiddler, "manager" of the "troupe"; Whit Frazee, whose specialty was to be a cornet solo and the Dutch act; John Smith, brother of Charles Smith; Somerson, of Netherwood, John Day, Goff and Sullivan from the boulevard. Day and Sullivan were to give a pugilistic exhibition. Reilly and two darkies from Elizabeth were to run a minstrel scene.

When the performers went on the stage they seemed to be primed for the occasion. Some of them staggered perceptibly, and one of them fell flat and lay there grunting. A musical production was attempted, but the performers were first vehemently hissed by the indignant and disgusted audience and then driven by force off the stage, through a rear door, and down the street. They took refuge in Coddington's stage, which was mobbed. The windows of the stage were smashed in, and the "actors" were assailed with empty bottles, clods of frozen earth, stones, and other missles picked up by the wayside. The stage was finally driven beyond reach of the mob, and the "troupe" reached Plainfield. The cash profits were found to be $26. The "Boston Variety company" is disbanded.

THE CAREY STORY IS N'T SO.

Councilman Marsh Says the Police Board Re-appointed Grant.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I was surprised to hear the rumor up town this evening that the police board had made Mr. Carey captain of police, and astonished to hear myself quoted as the authority.

It is not the case. The board appointed Mr. Grant captain of police. Mr. Carey not being on the force, could not be appointed.

It has been understood all along by the board that Mr. Carey was not a candidate for the office; that he did not desire to go on the force, and would not, owing to the demands of his present business.

The board fully appreciated the fact that Mr. Carey made a most efficient captain of police, but as he had stated that he would not again go on the force his name was not before the board.

I stated to captain Grant the morning after the meeting that the board had made him captain, and meeting another city official I incidentally repeated that fact to him. He, however, understood me to name Mr. Carey, which by a slip of the tongue I may have done. Hence the false rumor and this explanation.

Feb. 18, 1892. F. E. MARSH.

Lost on Poor Alleys.

Plainfield threw away another game in bowling league tournament last night, when the Crescent League players were defeated at Westfield by the following score:

WESTFIELD.		PLAINFIELD.
W. Foster	182	H. VanEmburgh	149
J. M. C. Marsh	134	R. Haven	137
W. G. Howe	129	C. Leggett	120
E. Love	154	C. Lyman	149
A. M. Jackson	164	C. VanWinkle	156
Westfield	94 170 234 208 370 428 530 611 685 763
Plainfield	71 146 115 283 347 428 490 562 650 711

This branch of the tournament will end to-night. Plainfield is at the bottom of the list. The leading two clubs will bowl in the finals with the other sections of the American bowling union until the close of the series.

Leap-Year Sociable.

A pleasant leap-year sociable conducted entirely by the gentler sex was enjoyed by two or three score masculine guests at the home of Miss Bertha Fisher, Jackson avenue, last evening. The event was a most enjoyable one, and reflected great credit on the committee, the Misses Bertha Fisher, Ella Fenner, Lizzie Dunn and Ella Dunn. Dancing began at 9, and with five sets continually on the floor was kept up till past midnight. A novel feature of the sociable was the fact that contrary to the usual order of things the number of men exceeded the number of ladies, and as a result there were many male wall-flowers.

No Hope For Carey.

"If you don't see it in THE PRESS it is n't so", and the Courier furnishes the latest proof of it. The latter said Carey was to be appointed captain of police again; the former said "It must not be"; and councilman Marsh in a communication in another column, assures the people that the board has no such intention.

But there is one assertion in the councilman's letter that you will all laugh over, and which the councilman himself cannot believe. That is, that Carey would not accept the appointment again.

Well, THE PRESS and the people propose that he shall not have the chance.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 20, 1890.

An Electrical Fly Catcher.

A certain storekeeper in Richmond, Ind., with some knowledge of electricity and considerable ingenuity in getting up window attractions, recently constructed an electrical fly catcher that is unique. It consists of a small induction coil, giving about a quarter inch spark, with a couple of cells of battery and a series of fine wires strung on a board, very much as in the musical instrument called the zither. Each alternate wire is connected to a terminal of the coil, and the sliding regulator so adjusted that the spark will not strike across between wires until an unlucky fly alights on the wire, when the projecting body receives a spark and the victim takes a header between the wires and leaves the field clear for the next comer.

A POWER FOR GOOD.

That's Who and What is President McLeod, the Man That Assemblyman Tom Lane Proposes to Investigate—Not a Furnace, Nor Foundry, Nor Poor Man's Hearth Will be Taxed an Additional Penny for Coal.

The member from Summit, whose term in the New Jersey legislature expires next month, has discovered all manner of wickedness and even crime—from robbery to just short of murder—in the recent securing of the Central New Jersey and Lehigh Valley railroads by the Philadelphia & Reading. So Mr. Lane proposes to subpœna all officers concerned before a legislative committee of which he is chairman, and "investigate" the matter. When he gets through he'll know as little as he does now, and the railroads will continue to carry on their business as they think best.

But passing from the ridiculous to the sublime, a word or two will be of interest to all THE PRESS readers concerning President McLeod, the man who planned and carried out the most stupendous railroad deal ever consummated in the world and the most startling financial operation of the age, which will have consequences so momentous and far reaching as to be almost beyond the grasp of the average mind. Not only does it make the Reading railroad the most powerful corporation in the United States and the largest employer of labor on the civilized globe, but it practically constitutes its president, A. A McLeod, the dictator of the anthracite coal trade and the arbiter of the fortunes of the vast interests and industries dependent upon the trade.

It is natural, says the Philadelphia Times of Monday last, that some curiosity should be manifested regarding this remarkable man, and that some anxiety should be felt as to the policy he may be expected to pursue. Those who know Mr. McLeod and those who have closely watched the brilliant and sagacious tactics by means of which he has lifted a bankrupt corporation out of the slough of financial disaster and physical decay, making it a solvent and most powerful company, will have no fear but that he will use his vast authority cautiously, wisely and for the public good.

No apprehension need be felt as to the effect of the new order of things upon the prices of coal. While it is expected that the aggregated net profits of the unified Reading system from this source will be increased $6,000,000, neither furnace, nor foundry, nor poor man's hearth will be taxed a penny to bring apout this result.

* * * * *

The fact is that the old system of marketing coal through an army of sales agents quartered in magnificent offices, levied tribute upon producer and consumer jointly to the extent of from 25 cents to $1 per ton.

Mr. McLeod proposes that this system of fattening middlemen into millionaires shall cease, that the producer and the consumer shall be brought together and that the producer, the carrier and the consumer shall reap the benefit of the saving thus made.

The old system of reckless and ruinous competition has made coal cheaper at Boston and Chicago than within the borders of this State, with the result of subjecting our manufacturers to a formidable and highly injurious rivalry, shutting them out of markets that ought by right to be their own, and forcing the wages of working people in this, the richest State in the Union, to a level with those of the less favored States of the East.

Mr. McLeod proposes to stop this unfair and absurd discrimination against Pennsylvania. The manufacturers of this State will pay no more, and probably less, than they do now for their fuel, while the price of those at distant points will be so adjusted as to pay reasonable profits to the mining and transportation interests, and at the same time give the manufacturers of this coal-producing State the advantage to which their proximity to the source of supply justly entitles them.

* * * * *

It may be true that "competition is the life of trade", but it has proved to be the death of prosperity in the anthracite regions of Pennsylvania. To the old system of alternate strife and truce between competing corporations and the trade fluctuations resulting therefrom, is due the arbitrary suspensions of work and the reduction of wages which have so sorely oppressed the miners and caused such serious losses to the mercantile communities dependent upon their trade.

Mr. McLeod proposes that hereafter prices shall be stable and employment steady at fair wages. He believes that the new order of things will be especially advantageous to those engaged in or in any manner interested in the mining industry.

From a financial point of view, the general wealth of Pennsylvania has been increased millions of dollars by the successful culmination of President McLeod's efforts. The companies included in the new compact are practically owned in Philadelphia and other parts of the State, and the enormous enhancement of the value of their stocks and bonds, with the assured certainty of regular dividends, means increased happiness in thousands of homes.

A Plainfield Woman's Example.

(From The Somerville Unionist-Gazette.)

At the parlor temperance meeting given by the W. C. T. U. Monday evening, Mrs. Tomlinson, president of the W. C. T. U., of Union county, and wife of one of Plainfield's popular physicians, gave a very interesting address in which she told of the progress and advancement of the temperance work and of the efforts put forth by the women who wear the white ribbon to subdue the evil effects of strong drink. She earnestly entreated all to work harder this year than ever before for the overthrow of the liquor traffic. Her noble Christian example and earnest advice cannot but incite in her colaborers here more zeal for the cause.

The Whole State Pleased With Us.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

The Plainfield delegation—says the PRESS of that city—returned from the great demonstration at Trenton last Tuesday "greatly pleased". And well they might. For a city of its size it made the best showing of any city in the State that is not directly contiguous to some race track. Its great moral uprising was more spontaneous and larger in proportion than that of any other inland city. And it has further reason to be greatly pleased in the strong arguments eloquently presented by Craig A. Marsh. Plainfield may be greatly pleased with herself, for the rest of the State is greatly pleased with her.

Union County Farmers Meet.

The yearly institute of the Union County Board of Agriculture was held in Etta Hall, Westfield, yesterday afternoon. Dennis Long, of Union, presided. Addresses were made by C. B. Crane, of Caldwell; Judge F. S. Holcomb, of Mount Airy, Hunterdon county; Dr. Joseph Ward, and Wm. R. Ward, of Lyons Farms; E. Williams, of Montclair; Prof. B. D. Halstead and Prof. E. B. Voorhees of the New Jersey Agricultural College and Experiment Station, New Brunswick, and C. C. McBride, editor of the Elizabeth Journal. Experiences were given by Noah W. Parcell, of Elizabeth; Gideon E. Ludlow, of Cranford; W. B. Woodruff, of Westfield, and John Crane, of Union.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning. The signal perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease, Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50c., to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup and whooping cough at once. Mothers, do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by J. G. Miller, No. 10 East Front street Plainfield, N. J.

Drive them away—the aches, pains, weaknesses and ailments that make woman's life miserable. Some of them may be serious, and of long standing; they'll need time, perhaps, and patience. But all of them can certainly be cured and corrected with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It's a powerful, invigorating tonic and a soothing and strengthening nervine; a legitimate medicine, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and carefully adapted to women's delicate needs. At the two critical periods in a woman's life—the change from girlhood to womanhood, and, later, the "change of life"—it is a perfectly safe and an especially valuable remedial agent that can produce only good results.

For all "female complaints," irregularities, and weaknesses, "Favorite Prescription" is the only remedy so unfailing and effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, the money will be refunded.

The Play That Pleases.

Dramatic Author—I have a new play which I should like you to examine.

Great Actress—Pardon me, but I am so overworked that it would be impossible for me to—

"The scene is laid in Europe—"

"Don't want it."

"At a most picturesque era of medieval times—"

"I have plays enough."

"It is in five acts—"

"Keep it in your pocket."

"Fifteen scenes."

"Won't have it."

"And calls for ninety-five changes of costume."

"I'll take it."—N. Y. Weekly.

She Asked for Information.

The play was one-third over and he was chewing a cardamon seed as the curtain went up on the second act.

"George," she whispered, softly.

"Yes, darling?" he answered, questioningly.

"George," she murmured, "why do they put cardamon seed in whisky and other spirituous and malt liquors?"—Detroit Free Press.

Ruined by Slang.

"I've gone clear back on slang," said Brylius, with emphasis.

"Why?" inquired his friend.

"I was calling on a young woman last evening and chanced to remark 'what you say goes.'"

"And what did she do?"

"She murmured my name very, very softly."—N. Y. Sun.

What Was Necessary.

"Do you think we would be suited to each other?" she said, hesitatingly, before the final acceptance.

"Certainly we would after a little while," he responded, with supreme confidence. "All that is necessary is for you to suit yourself to me and we'll get along beautifully."—Detroit Free Press.

A Dramatic Triumph.

Stayatt Holmes—How was the new play last night?

Fusnite—Big thing. They've got a dime museum in the third act, with real freaks.

"What else is there to the play?"

"Nothing much."

"What did you pay for a seat?"

"Two dollars."—Puck.

The Man Was Fresh, Too.

Customer—Will this meat keep a few days?

New Clerk—Yes, ma'am, it will. We've had it in the shop two weeks now, and it's just as fresh as ever.

The Boss, a second later—Thomas, why did that lady leave the shop so suddenly?—Yankee Blade.

Art Note.

"What's that pencil for?" inquired Mrs. Sharpe of her daughter.

"For penciling eyebrows," responded the damsel.

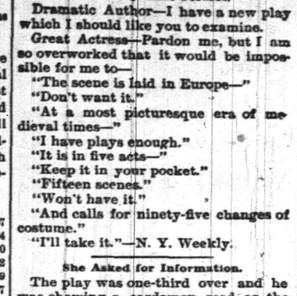
"Well, what do you want to use one for?"

"To draw."

"Draw what?"

"Draw a beau."—Texas Siftings.

THE PATIENT WAITER, ETC.



Tommy (loquitor)—Things are coming my way at last.—Puck.

Where Silence Is Golden.

"That Brainey is the smartest man I ever saw!"

"What's he done now?"

"He's invented a music box that plays 'Comrades' and 'Annie Rooney' till some one drops a nickel in the slot, and that stops it for ten minutes."—Boston News.

Chappie's Effort.

Chappie—I started to ask Ethel last night "When is a door not a door?" The answer is: "When it's ajar." But I got it wrong and asked: "When is a door not ajar."

Johnnie—What did she say?

Chappie—She said: "Shut up!"—N. Y. Herald.

Rather Tired of It.

St. Peter—Let—me—see, miss, where are you from?

New Arrival—I am from Boston.

St. Peter (playfully)—Ah, yes. I have heard of Boston—

New Arrival—Now, see here. If you say one word about beans, I won't go in.—N. Y. Weekly.

A Dress-Reform Wail.

A sufferer from the widespread dress-reform movement makes the following wail:

"Bifurcation" is vexation,
"Suspenders" are as bad;
"Trunks to the knee" discomfort me,
And "bloomers" drive me mad.

Two Boston Friends.

Her Bosom Friend—O what a dear little ring!

Herself (blushingly)—Yes. It's my engagement ring.

Her Bosom Friend (sweetly)—Where did you buy it?—Brooklyn Life.

A Different Relation.

Mother—You should not encourage that young man.

Daughter—Why not, mother?

"He is so ugly to his sister."

"Oh, but I'm not going to be a sister to this one."—Good News.

Fixed.

"My father bought me a gold fish for a dollar," boasted Tommy.

"Ho!" sneered Willie, "I don't believe he's solid—not for a dollar!"—Harper's Young People.

IMMINENT LITIGATION.

Clancarty (the section-man)—That settles it. Oi sue th' tillygraft company ter-morry fer lavin' a missige dhrop aff th' wire.—Judge.

Had Seen Better Days.

Mr. Sellit—Well, Uncle Eph, how are you gettin' along these days?

Uncle Eph—Oh, I'm gettin' along fine. It's a mighty poor day I don't make my two or three dollars.

Mr. Sellit—You must be gettin' rich. 'Spose you pay me that little bill you owe me.

Uncle Eph—Well, you'll have to scuse me to-day, Mr. Sellit. You see, I've been havin' a lot of mighty poor days lately.—Harper's Bazar.

Not the Man She Wanted.

"Has my husband been here?" inquired a woman of the bartender. "He's a tall, red-complexioned man, and wears a slouch hat."

"A man answering that description got a half-pint bottle of whisky about ten minutes ago."

"How big a bottle?"

"Half a pint."

"Some other man," said the woman.—Texas Siftings.

CONVENIENT KITCHEN.

Plans Furnished by an Ohio Housekeeper.

A Place for Everything and Everything in Its Place—Arrangements Which Lessen the Drudgery of Kitchen Work.

Mrs. B. B. Herrick, of Lorain county, O., has sent to the Ohio Farmer a number of diagrams to illustrate her kitchen and house, with the necessary arrangements, and a photograph of the interior. We have had five of the diagrams engraved, which are amply sufficient, we think, to make everything plain. She explains as follows:

Fig. 1 represents the ground floor of the house. K is the kitchen, 12x14. In this are located—I, the bath tub; U, table; S, sink; L, cupboards, the one on the left side of the door into dining-room (N) being a slide cupboard to the cellar. G, back and cellar stairs. D, milkroom and storeroom, 8x8. A, linen closet and pantry, 7x9. The kitchen opens (at the right) into a covered porch, in which is located a sink (S) and a cistern (X). This opens at the right into the woodhouse (C) and carriage shed (G), both together being 18x34 feet.

Going back to the main part of the house—N is the dining-room, 14x16, with a conservatory at the right (B) with glass roof. C, C, C, in the linen room and pantry (A) are cupboards. P, parlor, 15x13½. S, sitting-room, 17x17. T, front stairway. F, bedroom. The top of the engraving, or rear of the house, is to the east; or, in other words, the house faces west.

Fig. 2 is an interior view of the kitchen. A, baking table, under which are—sugar at G, flour at H, meal in the drawer L; G and H are drop leaves. E, shelf for spices, soda, cream tartar and extracts. O, rack for butcher knives, and under the shelf E are nails for iron spoons, etc. The drawers on the left of A are for salves and rags for cut fingers, can openers, wrenches, tack pullers, can rubbers and extra covers, old flannels, etc. The drawers on the right are for knives and forks and spoons for cooking use, dish towels, hand towels, meal. B, sink; the waste pipe carried out under the porch into the sewer pipe drain. N N, cupboards for kettles and cooking basins. X, soap crock. F, shelf for lamps. C C, dish cupboards opening both into dining-room. K, slide cupboard or elevator, from dining-room to cellar. D, shows the way down cellar, with shelves at the left

(not lettered) for boots, shoes and rubbers. M is the outside door onto the south porch. Between K and C is the door into dining-room. T is the bath tub.

Fig. 3 is another interior view from opposite side. C, stove or range. B, the door to cellar stairs. A, door to dining-room. I, the slide cupboard. F, door to milk room. E, four cupboards for tins and baked food.

Fig 4 is a view looking to the east. D, cupboards. G, bath tub. C, hanging clothes bars; above is a mirror and comb case. The bath tub has a cover which lifts back and is held up by a strong hook fastened to the window casing. With the cover down it is used for a wash bench on washdays. It makes a good table to cut out garments. Throw on some laprobes and it is a good lounge. The waste water from the tub is conducted outside by a pipe. As the kitchen is usually warm, and has warm water at hand; it is convenient for bathing in cool weather.

Fig. 5 is the work table, to take the place of the usual table in the kitchen, and occupying no more room. Any farmer of ordinary mechanical capacity can make this table. The top is a shallow wooden sink to be used as a molding board, and when not in use is covered by the hinged leaves, B; when open they are supported by the rackets, A. The drop door, E, H, may all be one, or in two parts. The drawers, etc., have been explained in Fig. 2.

The plan, Fig. 1, is drawn 8 feet to the inch; the plans in Figs. 2, 3 and 4 are 8 feet to the inch; the table, Fig. 5, is 1 foot long and 1 foot 8 inches wide.

DANGERS OF INFLUENZA.

Its Sequels Are of a Peculiarly Low and Depressing Type.

The grippe or influenza itself is not particularly dangerous, according to writer in the London Lancet, but its complications are serious, and its sequels are of a peculiarly low and depressing type. The attack is commonly very sudden. The first symptoms are a chill, nausea, and a feeling of general illness, followed quickly by severe and persistent headache, break-bone pains in the limbs and trunk, fever, and great prostration.

A violent paroxysmal, irrepressible and harsh cough with soreness in the chest, is common. Coryza—running at the nose—may or may not attend it. When the disease is uncomplicated, the worst is over by the third day, and the fever by the fourth or fifth, though the debility may continue for weeks or months.

The most serious complication of the disease is acute bronchitis. This may appear early or late. The breathing becomes rapid and difficult. A spasmodic cough is almost constant. The expectorations are glairy and tenacious. With all this there is the peculiar prostration of the grippe.

A more common complication is pneumonia, of which there are three varieties—croupous, congestive and broncho-pneumonia. Although these complications are dangerous, yet recovery is the rule under prompt and careful treatment.

A third complication of the grippe is connected with the heart. If patients sit up, they become faint. Some die of simple failure of the heart; others are saved from death only by careful attention on the part of the nurse. After the grippe has passed off, a tendency to faintness and neuralgic pains may remain for weeks or months.

Another complication shows itself in a diarrhœa; still another affects the nervous system, and is characterized by pains in the head or elsewhere, or by weakness in certain parts of the body, such as the hands or arms.

As to treatment, the doctor must decide in view of all the symptoms. But the patient should in every case take to his bed. To keep about is exceedingly dangerous, especially as exposing the patient to the above complications.

EXCELLENT MORTAR.

Satisfactory Results Obtained with Decomposed Granite Sand.

Dr. J. Takayama, of Japan, has been investigating the properties of decomposed granite sand as applied to building purposes as a mortar. Large quantities of this decomposed granite are found in Japan, and, when mixed with slacked lime, become as hard as European puzzolana and trass. The finest portion of the sand forms a fine, yellowish powder, in appearance like china clay of good quality, and, when mixed with lime, is hardened like natural volcanic tufa. The percentage of silica varied between 44 and 53. The finer portions were easily dissolved with hydrochloric acid. Dr. Takayama attributes the hardening with lime to the formation of aluminates and silicates of lime. A mixture of 10 parts of slacked lime to 100 parts of sand was found to give, on the whole, the highest tensile strength. Briquettes made with that mixture, after two weeks' exposure to the air, gave a strength of 56·89 pounds per square inch, and by fifteen weeks' exposure the strength was raised to 85·76 pounds per square inch.

The same mixture gave the best results when the test specimens were placed in water during hardening, the tensile strength being 7·54 pounds per square inch after two weeks, and 111·65 pounds per square inch after fifteen weeks. One specimen, however, consisting of 100 parts of slacked lime and 100 parts of sand, had a tensile strength after twelve weeks of 119 pounds per square inch, but the strength declined during the next three weeks. The lime mortar would not stand immersion in salt water, the author attributing the fact to the solvent action of the magnesium salts present in salt water. When the surface of the briquettes was smooth all the mixtures resisted the action of frost except the one containing the smallest amount of lime, i. e., 8·41 lime to 100 sand; but when the surface was roughened by scratching, the 10 to 100 mixture was the only one not acted upon, although frozen and thawed five times.—Scientific American.

A Terrier Line Carrier.

One of the English electric light companies, whose wires are carried in underground conduits, has a novel method of drawing wires through the conduits. A small terrier has been so trained that when a light cord is attached to him he runs through the conduit from one manhole to the next, dragging the cord with him.

An Air-Line for Passengers.

A company has recently been formed in Hamburg for the purpose of putting into practical working shape a novel plan for the transportation of passengers and freight in pneumatic tubes. Each car is to obtain an apparatus filled with compressed air, so that passengers can have an ample supply of pure air as long as they remain boxed up.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

THE best wines are found to be produced from grapes grown upon volcanic soils.

BY a new system, compound sheets of platinum and gold are used to make crucibles for use in industrial chemistry.

AN apparatus for purifying lubricating oils coming from machinery has been patented in Norway whereby the same oil can be used many times at a trifling expense.

A GREAT improvement in machine bearings is made from compressed wood pulp combined with graphite. No lubrication is necessary, and the amount of friction is greatly diminished.

EXPERIMENTS made with oil and various other substances have shown that oil alone gives the greatest heat. It has been adopted for the boilers of the big pumping engines at Brilliant, near Pittsburgh.

THE remarkably beautiful green color of some preserved beans and other vegetables is said to be obtained by boiling the vegetables in a copper vessel while an electric current is passed through it.

A NEW electrical device on the nickel-in-the-slot order has been introduced in the railway cars in England. By placing a penny in the receptacle the light burns for fifteen minutes, and is then extinguished automatically.

OWING to the lack of penetrating power possessed by the electric arc light in thick weather, its use in lighthouses is not recommended. Inventive talent is now being brought to bear in England to ascertain a better composition of the carbons, with a view to supplying the required rays for penetrative effect.

HERETOFORE it has been impossible to get lead to adhere to iron without the aid of tin. This can now be done by the following means: First pickle the plates in a bath to remove the scale, a weak electric current being sent through the bath. Remove the plates to a bath of lime water, and thence to one of fresh water. From this place them in a bath consisting of a neutral solution of zinc and stannic chlorides, thence to a drying chamber heated by steam. When dry place them in a bath of molten lead 98½ per cent. pure.

THE LEAFSTICKER.

One of the Quaintest Representatives of the Frog Family.

One of the most beautiful of all the tree-frogs is the leafsticker of South America, a little animal of hardly the size of our common green tree-frog, with slender body and abruptly shortened head. The color of the upper part of the body is a handsome reddish brown, bordered at each side with a yellowish white band, sometimes of a silvery luster. Beginning at the eye, it extends along the sides and ends in a sharp angle near the hind legs, where, as well as at the eyes, the stripes unite into a triangular spot. The legs are striped on the outer side for their whole length in a similar manner; at the under side they are simply yellowish white. According to measurements made by the prince of Wied, the whole length of this pleasant little creature does not exceed two centimeters. The leafsticker is common in Guayana and Brazil, where it seeks its abode in the crowns of large trees. Of its habits little is known, but, no doubt, they are similar to our tree-frogs. The little animal is especially remarkable on account of its beautiful coloring and the smallness of the body.

EDISON "DONE FOR"

He Was Not Practical Enough for Wall Street

HIS COMPANY GOES TO RIVALS

The Amalgamation Turns it Over to the Thomson-Houston.

Only a Tithe of the the "Wizard of Menlo Park's" Stock Remains to Him—Henry Villard Engineered the Deal—The Scheme Was Carried Out Before Mr. Edison Realized What Was Being Done—He Relied on Friends and Business Associates—The Former Were Speculators, it Seems, and the Latter Were Largely Incompetent.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Thomas A. Edison, the "Wizard," the king of practical electricians, has been "done." The hands of Wall street manipulators are seen everywhere in the act of his undoing.

The calm, clear-headed, big-hearted inventor relied on friends and business associates. The former were speculators; the latter have largely proved incompetent.

The result of the intellectual giant's dependence will be the amalgamation of the Edison General Electric and the Thomson-Houston companies. The reorganization plan was practically agreed on several days ago.

Henry Villard arranged it. Drexel, Morgan & Co., the bankers, who have succeeded in obtaining control of the majority of the stock of the Edison General Electric company, were and are the powers behind the throne.

The coalition as arranged wipes out the Edison influence and transfers the good will of a business capitalized at $15,000,000 to the Thomson-Houston company. The brainiest inventor of the age is asked to play "second fiddle" to Elihu Thomson, the practical man of the absorbing company.

The scheme was planned by Mr. Villard and carried out before Mr. Edison realized what was being done. He imagined that the immense financial interests he had brought into the General company were being properly taken care of by the men he trusted. He never expected to be in a position where he would have to submit to the dictation of Wall street manipulators.

When the details of the amalgamation plan were presented to him he frowned. It did not take him long to realize that he was in a sad minority, and that those who were engineering the scheme were in virtual control of a business that he had spent fifteen years in building up. He was practically driven out of the General Company. Here is the way the situation presented itself to him:

"When the General Edison Electric Company was formed in the latter part of 1889, the Edison Electric Light Company, the Bergmann Company on Avenue B, the Edison Machine Works at Schenectady, N. Y., the Edison Lamp Company at Harrison, N. J., and the Sprague Electric Railway & Motor Company were the elements of organization. I owned a controlling interest in the Light Company and the majority of the stock in Bergmann Company, the Edison Machine Works and the Edison Lamp Company.

"I don't know what those interests were worth, but I do know that the companies that now represent $15,000,000 in capital under the title of the General Electric Company were practically controlled by me. Now there is not, under the old separate organizations, even a suspicion of controlling power in my name."

Mr. Edison's friends declare that he has been taken in by Wall street "promoters."

CURIOU POISONING CASE.

Twenty-eight Persons Seriously Ill from Using Poisoned Soda.

BANGOR, Me., Feb. 20.—A strange case of poisoning is reported from Mount Chase, a town in the norther part of the State.

A family named Rider, who had moved into a house formerly occupied by an old hunter named Jarrett, found therein a box of soda.

Recently the supply of this article in the vicinity became exhausted and the Riders and other families used from the box which the Riders had found.

Twenty-eight persons became seriously ill shortly afterward and one of those has since died. Most of the others are in a fair way to recovery.

It is presumed that some some sort of poison had formerly been kept in the box in which the soda was found.

Interesting Labor Question.

ZANESVILLE, Ohio, Feb. 20.—An interesting question concerning the precedence of labor organizations will be presented to the Trades Council here. The bricklayers of the city have sought the aid of the International Bricklayers Union to enforce a demand made upon the manufacturers, that they shall sell only to those who will sign a contract to employ union bricklayers. The members of the Mayflower Assembly, Knights of Labor, who are largely employed in the brickyards, were opposed to the Bricklayers' demand, on the ground that it curtails the market and throws them out of employment. There is bitterness between the leaders in the two organizations over the matter.

Actor Curtis' Trial.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 20.—The trial of M. B. Curtis, charged with the murder of Officer Grant, has been postponed until next Tuesday. On that day arguments will be presented. District-Attorney Barker will make the opening address. He will be followed by Attorneys Knight and Foote for the defence. Assistant-District Attorney Hinkle will make the closing speech.

DIG AND GET RICH.

Several New Ore Strikes Reported from the West.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 20.—On Verde Creek, in Bandara County, 100 miles norehwest of here, a strike has been made. The ore lies in the rock in such evenly placed lumps that it at first aroused suspicion of salting. The vein extends for two miles. The yield on assay runs 1 6-10 ounces of silver and 1 2-10 ounces of gold to the ton.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 20.—It is announced that the Bossick Mine at Silver Cliff has been sold to New York and San Francisco parties for $1,000,000.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 20.—A special from Cripple Creek says another great strike has been made there. The strike has been made in the Sam Dyer lode on Tenderfoot hill. It is extraordinarily rich. An assay from the face of the vein displayed $109 to the ton. The frequent strikes at this camp are causing much excitement throughout the State, and people are rushing in at the rate of 250 a day.

OURAY, Col., Feb. 20.—The Cutler Creek gold strike appears to be genuine. Men were climbing over the hills and staking claims all night. More than 100 claims have been staked in the last 24 hours. The country is under snow, and it is speculation what the result will be. Many of the boulders when broken open are flecked with gold and some of them run by assay one hundred ounces to the ton.

STILLWATER, Minn., Feb. 20.—Another valuable deposit of iron ore has been discovered near this city. It is understood that St. Paul capitalists have already secured an option on the land on which the find is located.

HEROINE OF CASTLE LORETTO.

The Story of a Brave Woman and What She Did in Mexico.

DETROIT, Feb. 20.—Mrs. Rose Peyton, aged 76, widow of Sergt. Patrick Peyton, formerly of the Second United States Artillery, who has just been buried here, was known to soldiers of the Mexican War as the Heroine of Castle Loretto.

She accompanied her husband to Mexico, and, during the siege of Pueblo, for 26 days regularly carried to him and others of his battery coffee and refreshments.

To do this it was necessary for her to traverse the open space between Castle Loretto, where she lived, to the fortifications of Pueblo, where her husband's company was stationed. This open space was swept by Mexican sharpshooters so effectively that it was called the Death Road. Though Mrs. Peyton many times had her clothing cut by bullets she was never hurt.

GRIFFITHS GETS TWO YEARS.

He Tried to Kill Eisman After Getting Thrashed by His Wife.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Chas. Griffiths, the Englishman who insulted Mrs. William Eisman, so she claims, and who was horsewhipped by her and tried to shoot her husband afterward, has been sentenced to two years in Sing Sing prison by Judge Mills on the charge of trying to kill.

Griffiths and the Eismans were neighbors on Kensico avenue. Their back yards adjoin. Mrs. Eisman said that Griffiths insulted her one afternoon over the back fence. She told her husband and he demanded an apology.

Then Mrs. Griffiths horsewhipped Griffiths while her husband stood by. Afterward Griffiths fired at Eisman, with the intention of killing him. Griffiths was arrested after a sharp chase by one of the town constables.

Senator Finn's Exhibition of Science.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Feb. 20.—Senator Finn knocked down and severely chastised Doorkeeper H. M. Belvel, in the Senate chamber immediately after adjournment. Belvel, in connection with his duties at the Capitol, is also a newspaper correspondent, and in a recent letter referred to Finn as a libertine and blackguard. The affair grew out of a story that Finn visited a Whitechapel dive Saturday night.

Cigarettes Killed Him.

CAMDEN, N. J., Feb. 20.—William Homan, aged 19 years, a prominent young man of this place, died at his home immediately after saying: "Tell the boys that cigarettes killed me. Let them take example and profit by my experience." He had no parents. Since 8 years of age, he has smoked cigarettes incessantly.

Grip Killing Off Cherokees.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., Feb. 20.—The grip is playing havoc with the Cherokees just east of Osage Agency. Within a radius of ten miles of Skiatook twenty-two have died within the last six weeks. In one case an entire family, consisting of father, mother, sister and two children, died.

Mill Badly Damaged.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—The five-story mill at Lehigh avenue and Fourth street, occupied by Horner Brothers Carpet Company, was badly damaged by fire. The loss cannot yet be estimated. The mill employs about 1,000 hands.

MARRIED ANOTHER

Romance of a New Jersey Factory Girl.

WESTLY WEST, A GAY LOTHARIO

He Came East to Wed Miss Henshaw, but Took Miss Gardner Instead.

Complicated Result of an Advertisement Inserted by Young and Pretty Lottie Henshaw in a Chicago Matrimonial Periodical—Young West Came from His Far Western Home to Claim the Advertiser as His Bride, but Forsook Her to Elope With the Daughter of His Boarding Mistress—A Breach of Promise Suit May Follow.

HAMMONTON, N. J., Feb. 20.—Westly West, the young Vanderbilt from the Pacific Coast, who created such a profound sensation in this place last spring by coming on from his South Dakota home in answer to an advertisement in a Chicago matrimonial periodical by Miss Lottie Henshaw, a pretty 19-year-old factory girl, whom he wooed and won, and then suddenly disappeared on the eve of his proposed marriage, has created another sensation here by suddenly turning up and marrying another girl of the name of Miss Laura Gardner.

The story of Miss Henshaw's romance created a great flurry among her associates at the time.

The night her lover was expected to arrive in Hammonton from his Western home, the girls in the great shoe factory where the fortunate Miss Henshaw was employed, took a half holiday and turned out in force to see the gay Lothario, but when the train steamed into the station he was not on board, and all concluded the fair Lottie had been duped. Lottie said nothing and waited.

Soon after her confidence was vindicated by the arrival of young West. He procured board at the home of a family named Gardner, where he remained while arrangements were being perfected for his marriage to Miss Henshaw.

The Gardners, where young West boarded, had a very attractive daughter named Laura, and the gossips soon noticed that the young people were very attentive to each other. Lottie heard of this and demanded an explanation from her lover.

In answer, she received a note from her lover in which he said that he had gone to Philadelphia to have a draft cashed, and that he would return that evening and claim her as his bride. That made the girl's heart light again, but in the evening she was doomed to disappointment, for her lover did not appear to redeem his promise and she has not seen him since.

It has leaked out, however, that Westly West has returned and has now gone away with Miss Gardner.

Miss Henshaw, when seen in regard to the matter, refused to talk. Friends of her family say, however, that a breach of promise suit will be instituted.

The affair has caused a great sensation here and there is no end of gossiping.

THE TREATY POSTPONED.

Brazilian Decree of November Not to Go Into Effect Until May.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The Brazilian consul-general, Senor Macedo, has received by the steamship Vigilancia official advices from the Brazilian Government postponing until May 1 the decree of November 21, 1891, which was to go into effect on January 1, 1892. This decree sets forth the conditions of the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Brazil and the manner in which merchandise is to be exported.

The postponement is due to the strenuous objections made by American exporters, who allege that the Brazilian Government requires too much information from exporters.

The decree requires that an exporter shall formulate in three blanks the list of the articles to be shipped to Brazilian ports, faithfully containing names, marks, numbers, weight, kind, quality, quantity, origin and value of the merchandise, as well as the destination, and shall take it to the Brazilian consulate for legalization; and regarding articles of which Brazil is the principal, or one of the principal consumers, the consul must verify most scrupulously the real cost of the production, and add thereto the inherent expenses and profits.

The chief objection raised by exporters is the declaration of the forwarder or owner of the merchandise. This declaration calls for the name of the forwarder, the date of purchase, the factory, warehouse, store or office where the goods were bought, the declaration of the price per quantity, local value and quality.

Ten Per Cent. Reduction.

READING, Pa., Feb. 20.—Cofrode & Saylor has notified their employes at the Reading Rolling mill of a 10 per cent. reduction in wages. The order affects nearly all departments. The firm employs about 650 hands.

DRIFTING OUT TO SEA.

The Steamer Sir Walter Raleigh and Her Crew in Great Danger.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—A tug has arrived at Crookhaven, bringing a report of an accident that threatens to have serious consequences. The British steamer Sir Walter Raleigh, Capt. Smith, from Philadelphia for Falmouth or Plymouth, arrived in Bantry Bay, on the southwest coast of Ireland, with her shaft broken in two places. The tug was engaged to convey her to a port where she could repair the damage. Before they had proceeded far a heavy gale sprang up. The steamship plunged heavily, and finally the hawser parted. Efforts to get another line aboard the steamship were fruitless.

It was decided that the tug must seek shelter. The last seen of the Sir Walter Raleigh she was drifting seaward rapidly. Her officers and crew are aboard of her, and it is hoped that, with the assistance of her sails, she will be able to ride out the gale. Her spread of canvas is limited, however. She is a schooner-rigged vessel of 1,994 tons burden, and her sails are more useful in steadying her in a blow than in propelling her.

With the screw dragging behind she would be able to make very little progress and in the gale prevailing when she parted from the tug she could not spread all her canvas.

The steamer is owned by T. B. Triplett & Co. It is believed that seagoing tugs will immediately be sent in search of her. Before her arrival in Bantry Bay the Sir Walter Raleigh was long overdue, and her owners had paid the underwriter forty guineas extra premium on her.

A BONAPARTE PRINCE INCOG.

Living Quietly on an Immense Hacienda in Bolivia.

ORURO, Bolivia Feb. 20.—M. Fexon, attache of the French Legation at La Plaza, spent several days in this city on his return from Santa Cruz, where he went recently in quest of information as to one M. Fure, a Prince of the house of Bonaparte, who suddenly disappeared from Paris several months ago, went to Constantinople, and was afterward reported as living incognito in this republic.

He found the Prince living quietly on an immense hacienda in the vicinity of Chiquitos, with a beautiful Circassian girl, said to be the wife of one of the Sultan's favorite Ministers of State, who eloped from the Turkish capital by night with the gay French Prince.

M. Fure told M. Pexon that nothing could induce him to abandon his present life and return to the bosom of his friends and family in the Old World.

TOUCHING APPEAL.

Mrs. Daniels Requests Her Runaway Husband to Return.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—A touching appeal has reached police headquarters from Washington. It was from the despairing wife of Edward Daniels, who, she wrote, deserted his home at 631 street, N. W., in that city three weeks ago on Friday and has not since given any signs of life.

His wife and child are almost crazy, the little girl is very ill and keeps calling all the time for her papa, writes the poor woman.

She thinks he is somewhere on Long Island, working for one Charlie Cotton, a painter.

His picture, which was enclosed, shows him to be stalwart six-footer. The police are of the opinion that if Edward Daniels has a spark of manhood left in his big body he will immediately make tracks for Washington.

Manager Towner Missing.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 20.—Col. O. M. Towner, manager of the Northwestern Farm Land company, of Chicago, is missing. His company was engaged in the colonization of German farmers on North Dakota lands to raise barley for malt. He was last seen in this city Jan. 29, when he said he was going to Chicago. Nothing being heard from him telegrams were sent to Chicago but no trace of him has been secured. He had about $500 with him. There are two theories, foul play and flight for fear of exposure of some dark spot in his life. His accounts, so far as known, are all straight.

The Orenburg Colony Collapses.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 20.—The German colony in the province of Orenburg is in a condition of utter collapse. Owing to the famine and the typhus the colonists are unable to dig for much less to build houses, and they have huddled together after the fashion of the half-savage races among whom the undertook to form a settlement. The typhus attacked the colony with peculiar virulence. The death rate among them has been much higher than among the Kirghees, and other natives of the region.

A Restaurant is Not an Inn.

DES MOINES, Ia., Feb. 20.—The Hyde-Hopewell case, involving the civil rights of a negro, has been settled for the defendant on the ground that Hopewell had a right to refuse to serve Hyde in his restaurant, and that the fact of the latter being a colored man did not enter into the case. In other words, the restaurant business is a private one like a grocery or dry goods store, and differs from an inn, and the proprietor may sell or not to any one who enters his door.

THE CABINET'S FALL

President Carnot Accepts the Ministers' Resignations.

A MOST REMARKABLE SCENE.

The French Chamber of Deputies in a State of Wild Excitement.

The Followers of the Old Regime Throw Aside Their Ancient Dignity and Embrace and Even Kiss Each Other—Minister Falliéres' Colleagues Attribute the Crisis to His Attitude Toward the Clergy—Clemenceau, Who is Quick to Turn Others Out of Office but Never Takes Office Himself, Seizes the Opportunity—The Demand for Urgency Placed the Premier in a Difficult Position.

PARIS, Feb. 20.—President Carnot has accepted the resignation of the Ministers. He had a long conference with M. de Freycinet, at which the Premier told him that his action would not be recalled and that the course of the Chamber left no choice but dishonor or resignation.

M. Falliéres, the Minister of Public Worship, is looked upon with coldness by his colleagues as the primary cause of the crisis by his aggressive attitude toward the clergy. The supporters of the government join in condemning his policy as having rendered the catastrophe inevitable.

After the defeat of the Ministry there was a remarkable scene in the Chamber. At first the majority were as thunderstruck as the minority.

They had hardly expected to overthrow the Ministry by such an extraordinary vote. The followers of the old regime, who have sat in calm hauteur day after day, watching the onward sweep of the current beyond their control, suddenly awoke to a sense of the result.

They threw aside dignity and began to embrace and even to kiss each other. Nobles from remote parts of France, where loyalty to the Church and the royal house is born in the people, danced about like dervishes in their delight at the defeat of the Ministry.

The minority was first dumbfounded and then frantic and answered the shouts of joy with yells and execrations. The prudence of the Ministry in promptly retiring, without theatricals, prevented serious disorder.

The crisis came so suddenly and with so little cause that it has had little or no disturbing effect as yet upon the public. There is some excitement, but it is confined to political circles. The prevailing opinion is that there will be a dissolution of the Chamber unless the Ministry which has just resigned is patched up.

M. Clemenceau, leader of the Radicals, had a hand in the crisis, as he had in nearly all crises of the kind in many years. He is quick to turn others out of office, but never takes office himself. In the present case M. de Freycinet had no intention of passing the Associations bill, which was designed merely to frighten the Bishops and please the Radicals. The demand for urgency placed the Premier in a difficult position. If he accepted the motion it would be equivalent to a direct attack on the Church, and would bring down upon the Government the hostility of the Right, while to refuse urgency would betray insincerity on the part of the Government.

UPSET A LANTERN.

Tragic Breaking Up of a Unionist Meeting at Kingscross.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—A lantern show held by a club of Unionists at Kingscross was broken up in a tragic way.

A lad who was present at the celebration upset a paraffine lantern. The burning paraffine set fire to the floor and caused a frightful panic.

Grown up people screamed and the two hundred children rushed about in a fright, made all the more desperate by the example of their elders.

In the rush for escape on the staircase, twenty were injured, five of whom may die. The door of exit had been closed and locked, and this added to the horror of the occasion. Fortunately the conflagration did not spread.

HUDSON DEAD.

The Aged Brockton Fuster Succumbs at Last.

BROCKTON, Mass., Feb. 20.—Charles E. Hudson, who has for forty-three days refused to partake of any food whatever, is dead.

A number of persons have been in constant attendance at the old man's bedside and they assert positively that not a morsel of food has crossed his lips in the time given.

At long intervals he would moisten his lips with water. His mind was perfectly clear and he understood that he was taking his life by refusing to eat.

Mr. Hudson was 63 years old and was at one time a prominent business man.

Afflicted With Hydrophobia.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Feb. 20.—Frank Hippenstal, aged 45, of Centre Valley, is afflicted with hydrophobia caused by the bite of a mad dog two weeks ago. He raves, barks, yelps and goes into intermittent spasms during which he goes through the most frightful contortions. Doctors say he cannot recover, and that he is gradually sinking.

Every-Day Economy.

One rounded teaspoonful of Cleveland's Superior Baking Powder does better work than a heaping teaspoonful of any other. Cleveland's is wholesome, leavens best and leavens most.

SUGGESTS A COMPROMISE.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage on Sunday at the World's Fair.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, speaking on the question of Sunday at the World's Fair, said:

"I am interested in that because of my desire for the happiness of the working people. There must be no clash between the Church and the World's Fair. The proper solution is to have every workshop, factory and store closed promptly every Saturday at noon during the entire exposition. Give the working classes half a holiday every week during that time.

"Then on Sunday let the great preachers who will be here from all parts of the world hold services in all the World's Fair buildings which will admit of it. Your regular churches and all your down town halls will be crowded at that time, and there will be an abundance of people to fill the improvised churches on the exposition ground."

CYCLONE IN PORTUGAL.

The Damage Amounts to Not Less Than 5,000,000 Francs.

LISBON, Feb. 20.—A fearful cyclone has spread destruction in South Portugal.

A cruiser lying in the Tagus dragged anchor and merchant vessels were swept before the storm. The customs sheds in this city were wrecked, and telegraph wires everywhere prostrated.

The damage was not less than five millions of francs. To the terror caused by the cyclone was added an earthquake in the province of Algrave, which did much damage to property and caused a panic among the people.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 20.—A few days ago six conductors were dismissed from the service of the St. Paul City Railway Company on the charge that they were in a conspiracy with conductors of connecting lines to turn in transfers wrongfully prepared in lieu of cash fares collected. The discharged men have now brought slander suits aggregating $30,000 against the company.

Thiers Drops to Third.

There is little change in the record of the Crescent League individual championship tournament since yesterday. Last night the bowlers were all at the C. Y. M. L.'s alleys, and the five games that were rolled in the afternoon were the only championship contests of the day. Thiers won two but lost two, so he dropped from 750 to 700 and Schultz rose in consequence to second place. The scores were:

JERSEY CENTRAL CONDUCTORS.

No. 8—William Sopers—The Unknown.

A night or two since two gentlemen hurriedly boarded the train leaving New York at 8 p. m., at Fanwood. Not having time to purchase tickets, one of them—who was a stranger to the other—tendered the conductor a duplex ticket in payment of fare.

"Since the reorganization, or rather combine, of the coal roads, we are not allowed to receive duplex tickets or to handle them"—said the latter. Whereupon the other man said, "Well, I will assist you, stranger, if you have no change. As I have just twenty cents and am also going to Plainfield, that will pay for both, will it not, Mr. Conductor, or would you prefer to change a bill and return two duplex tickets?

William smiled and shook his head
And agitated his cranium,
"I've eyes to see and a nose to smell
And I think"—said he—"that I can tell
A cabbage from a geranium."
"The Port Reading is not in it"—added he, and took the twenty cents.

The donator turned and asked the forward brakeman, sitting immediately behind, the name of the conductor. This was his reply: "I don't know as this is a 'pick-up' crew, and our orders are to not be supposed to remember conductors names, as in the office they are numbered the same as Italians on the track."

Looking Out for the Poor.

North Plainfield township does not intend that its poor shall suffer. Last year its appropriation was only $1,200, and was inadequate to meet the demands of a hard winter. To relieve all needy applicants the township had to run in debt. An increase of $300 in the proposed appropriation was gladly voted for last night.

WINDING UP A BUSY YEAR.

North Plainfield Officials Present a Review of the Twelvemonths' Work.

The North Plainfield borough council held an adjourned meeting last night for the reception of annual reports. Councilman Sebring alone was absent. The street committee reported in detail the work of macadamization and other substantial road improvement during the year. It expressed the hope that the citizens would be liberal in subscribing for improvements during the coming year, and urged promptness in payment of such subscriptions. A number of subscriptions of the past year had not yet been paid. The committee further urged much-needed improvement in the matter of sidewalks. The committee on licenses and marshals praised marshal Thomas Rutledge and his ten assistants "specials" for their diligence and faithfulness in maintaining good order and otherwise looking after the interests of the borough. Otherwise the reports mainly related to routine matters. They all showed North Plainfield to be a most progressive and thriving borough. The reports were ordered printed in suitable form and in sufficient quantity to supply each taxpayer with a copy. The session of the council lasted an hour. After adjournment some of the councilmen met for friendly chat in Spencer's grocery, where a warm and painfully exciting personal argument took place between two leading borough officials. Blows were avoided.

The Favorite of the Fair Sex.

"The Thing To Do" if you want a good all round magazine is to subscribe for Peterson's. It will only need a glance through the March number to convince every woman of this. Peterson's is the newest old magazine extant, and is nowadays one of the handsomest as well as one of the very best. "Posed For Her Picture", is the portrait of a child so lovely that she will win every heart. "A Windy Day", is a striking contrast in subject though equally attractive in its way. The celebrated French astronomer Camille Flammarion contributes a brilliant paper called "News From Other Worlds". "Something About Aprons" is a useful and entertaining article. There are two excellent serials and among the short stories "Paying Her Debts" by E.C. Creighton is noticeably good and admirably illustrated. "A Chapter on Clocks" is a charming paper, and the illustrations of quaint time-pieces most interesting Fashion and household departments are alike full and complete. Terms $2 a year. Address Peterson's Magazine, 306 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Mayor Saunders or Mayor Bonny!

"When Greek meets Greek then comes the tug of war" is aptly illustrated in the impending contest in North Plainfield borough. The Democrats have nominated for mayor, in the person of William L. Saunders, a candidate who is far surer of election than any other that party has ever put up in that Republican stronghold. He is a good man, and eminently deserving of the ballot of every honest voter; and if elected will make a most efficient officer and will leave an honorable record and a shining example for his successors. But school trustee Bonny, the Republican candidate, is also a good and deserving man, and is perhaps as fully and quite as justly popular among borough residents as is Mr. Saunders. 'Twill be a nip-and-tuck campaign, and one of the most interesting elections in the borough's history; and may the best man win!

Less Macadam and More Fire Water.

The proposed appropriation of $1,500 for borough purposes for the coming year in North Plainfield is an increase of $500 last year's appropriation. The increase is made necessary by the expenses of the new and complete fire-hydrant service. To prevent increase of taxes $500 is lopped off the road appropriation. The borough people believe in judicious economy in street matters where by that economy they may secure adequate protection against fire.

Send in Your Suggestions on Sewerage.

The committee on the sewerage of the city, is very desirous of receiving suggestions on the subject from any persons, and these can be given—preferably in writing and as promptly as possible—to either of the committee:

L. W. Serrell, 109 West Front street.
George H. Frost, 119 Broadway.
H. B. Newhall, 20 East Seventh street.
R. K. Case, 30 West Eighth street.
Alex. Gilbert, Mayor's office.

Narrow Escape from Horse's Hoofs.

While Percy Abbott, a 10-year-old boy of Dunellen, was riding along the sidewalk on his tricycle, he collided with a stepping stone in front of Hetfield's butcher shop and was thrown with the machine into the gutter in front of a spirited horse tied there. The animal became frightened and for a moment it was feared the boy would be trampled to death. Several persons ran to the rescue and found the boy very much frightened but not seriously injured.

Those Plainfield "Actors".

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Concerning your report of the doings of the "Boston Variety Troupe", the treasurer of the company, Wally Heideloff, wishes me to state that the profits were $6 instead of $26. Also, John Burke and Sam Tunison wish me to state that they took part in the performance. PERFORMER

It is asserted that Booth and Salvini keep their voices clear by the use of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

NEW TOWN ON THE JERSEY CENTRAL.

It Will Be Called Garwood, and Will Lie Between Westfield and Cranford.

An important meeting of the surveyors of the highways of Westfield was held Wednesday night, when a part of South avenue was vacated and moved 100 feet farther south. Application for the change of location had been made by the Garwood Land and Improvement company, and as there was no opposition to the change on the part of citizens, but little discussion was had. As originally laid out, South avenue extended along the line of the track of the Central Railroad company of New Jersey, between Westfield and Cranford, 200 feet to the southward, and as the ground between it and the tracks was not large enough to suit the purposes of the Improvement company the change was made at its suggestion. The distance between the two towns is two miles, and Westfield has control of one-half of it.

J. Rogers Maxwell is treasurer of the company, and the Central railroad has decided to build a new station on the ground of the company, to be called Garwood, and work will be begun upon it as soon as possible. The Improvement company is not interested in manufactures itself, but has secured two new manufactories which will be built on that part of its property nearest Westfield. One is for the manufacture of steel carwheels, and the other for electrical appliances, and the joint pay-roll will be $5,000 a week. Houses near the factories will be built for the employes, and it is expected that within a few years a large community will be contained in the new town of Garwood.

Although Westfield gave the company about all it asked for, on the ground that it was necessary in order to bring large manufacturing interests to the place, Cranford has declined to change the direction of the roads. The Cranford board will, however, go out of office next month, and it is expected that new men will be elected who will favor the change.

Reduced Rates and Enlarged Privileges for Clergymen on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Pennsylvania railroad company announces that from this date on tickets will be sold to ministers of the gospel holding proper clerical orders, at half rates. This arrangement will apply to all tickets sold on the Pennsylvania railroad lines east of Pittsburg and Erie as well as to the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, so that a clergyman may not only be able to secure a ticket at half fare between any stations east of Pittsburg and Erie, but may enjoy the same privilege in the purchase of a ticket to Cleveland, Chicago, Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, or intermediate points.

This concession in the interest of so deserving a class is fresh evidence of the liberality of the Pennsylvania railroad, and cannot fail to impress itself upon the appreciation of those whom it is designed to benefit.

Mr. Goff Was Not There.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In an article in your last evening's issue entitled "Mobbed in Millburn, The Boston Variety Company from Plainfield Stoned from the Stage", appeared the name "Goff" among others from the Boulevard as participating in the performance, and as I am the only "Goff" that there is in Plainfield the article must have intended to mean me. I desire to state that I was in no way connected with the company and was not in Millburn on the night mentioned, but was at home in my place of business. JOHN J. GOFF.

Feb. 20, 1892.

It Was n't This Sullivan.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I saw in your valuable paper of the 20th inst., an account where you mention my name. I would like you to contradict the same as I know nothing of such a place and was home attending business. You will confer a great favor on me by having it contradicted in your paper to-night.

JOSEPH T. SULLIVAN.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED.

Persons with weak lungs—those who are constantly catching cold—should wear ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER over the chest, and another between the shoulder blades during cold weather. Curiosities About Bees.

It is estimated that bees, in order to collect one pound of honey, must visit and extract all the nectar contained in 62,000 heads of clover of the average size. This herculean task (for the bees) would necessitate 5,750,000 trips to and from the hive. Wax is a substance secreted by the bee and is analogous to the fat of the higher animals. The wax of a species of bee common in Patagonia, Terra del Fuego and other parts of southern South America and the adjacent islands is a dark blue in color and is said to be more poisonous than arsenic. A hive of 5,000 bees will produce about fifty pounds of honey annually, and will multiply about tenfold in five years. According to latest statistics the total number of hives of bees in the United States and Europe is 7,424,000 and the annual product of honey 183,000,000 pounds.

TO CUT sheet brass chemically the following method meets with great success: Make a strong solution of bichloride of mercury in alcohol. With a quill pen, draw a line across the brass where it is to be cut. Let it dry on, and, with the same pen, draw over this line with nitric acid. The brass may then be broken across like glass cut with a diamond.

AN electric device for clearing a track of obstructions is among the newest ideas. It consists of a triangular steel folding frame, over which a net is stretched. This is placed on the front of a locomotive, and can be opened at will, catching the obstruction upon it. An additional arrangement is a scoop to drop on the track. The recent tests were very satisfactory.

A DEVICE has been patented in England by which all kinds of wood can be cut into veneers or boards. The logs are cut into suitable lengths, steamed in a close box through which a current of electricity is sent, and finally placed in a lathe, where they are rotated against a knife. The thin sheets are afterward nipped at the edges, and can be used to make barrels, pails, etc., from one stave.

A Perpetual Motion Machine.

It is generally known among engineers that a novel motor is running at the patent office in Washington and has been for many years, and to some minds seems to fulfill the conditions of perpetual motion. The inventor made this claim, but it is hardly correct. Perpetual motion is said to exist in a machine that "when once started will continue to run until worn out." This machine operates by the power given out in the different expansion of metals under varying conditions, and is so small and carefully constructed that if there was absolutely no change in temperature of the room it would run when once started thirty-eight days before stopping. If it was possible to put it in some place for this length of time, as the center of the earth, where the temperature would be constant, it would stop, so does not fulfill the condition of perpetual motion; but that cannot be done where the machine now is, so it has run for a great many years without stopping, and probably will continue to run until it wears out.

Colorless Varnish.

Colorless varnish for use on fine labels or other prints, as well as for whitewood and other spotless articles, is made as follows: Dissolve two and one-half ounces of bleached shellac in one pint of rectified alcohol; to this add five ounces of animal boneblack, which should first be heated, and then boil the mixture for about five minutes. Filter a small quantity of this through filtering paper, and, if not fully colorless, add more boneblack and boil again. When this has been done, run the mixture through silk and through filtering paper. When cool it is ready for use. It should be applied with care and uniformity.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR.

Porfirio Diaz, President of the Republic of Mexico.

The Ablest Statesman of Central and South America—What He Has Accomplished During a Very Eventful Public Career.

The president of Mexico is quite well known in this country. For many years past Gen. Porfirio Diaz has been the foremost citizen of Mexico. His popularity at home and the fame he enjoys abroad have made his name familiar in the United States as the regenerator ("regenerador") of a country which by its wonderful natural resources is entitled to a high place among the family of nations.

Anyone acquainted with the condition of Mexico fifteen years ago and with the present state of affairs cannot but acknowledge the great progress achieved by Mexico during the intervening years and give credit to President Diaz, above all others, for the establishment and maintenance of that peace and order which has enabled the country to reach its present state of prosperity. Gen. Diaz, says the New York Tribune, is regarded by his countrymen as the best president that Mexico has ever had. When, in 1887, he assumed the government for the first time, the country was bankrupt; mining and agriculture were almost paralyzed; revolutions and disorders jeopardizing the lives and property of peaceful citizens were of frequent occurrence; in a word, all was chaos and confusion. He started by applying energetic remedies to all these evils, punishing the promoters of revolutions wherever they appeared, and in a few years succeeded in completely crushing the lawless spirit in Mexico. Once this accomplished he turned his attention to the economical and commercial interests of his country.

The career of President Diaz is remarkable. At the age of eighteen, after securing a common-school education, he began the study of law, but when almost ready to be admitted to the bar, enlisted in the national guard of Oaxaca, and went to the front to oppose the tyrannical government of the dictator, Santa Anna. From the beginning his military record was spotless. To this he added a series of very lucky and successful victories against the enemies of the liberty and integrity of his country. During the war with France, which led to the crowning of Maximilian of Austria as emperor of Mexico, he distinguished himself and became one of the leading generals of the republican army and the most respected by the soldiers of Napoleon III.

When the republic was restored he retired to private life in his country residence of "La Noria," near the city of Oaxaca, refusing all the honors which the government of Juarez was anxious to confer upon him. Nevertheless, during his retirement his name was twice brought before the Mexican people as a presidential candidate, but was defeated both times by Juarez and by Lerdo de Tejada. In 1877 the people, who longed to reward the man who had done more than anybody else to crush the empire of Maximilian, elected Gen. Diaz president by a big majority; but after some juggling of votes he was deprived of the trust conferred on him by the people, and Lerdo de Tejada was declared reelected by the partisan Mexican congress then assembled. This led to a popular revolution, which, proving successful, placed Gen. Diaz in the presidential chair. Up to that time he was known as a successful soldier. Nobody dreamed that he should develop into a statesman of the modern type. Such proved to be the case. The energy and executive ability which he displayed during his first presidential term reflect much credit upon him as a statesman and a patriot.

In 1880 he retired to private life to give way to his successor, Gen. Manuel Gonzales. He did not remain a private citizen very long, as a year after he left the presidency, his native state of Oaxaca unanimously elected him governor, which office he held until called again by the people to serve a second presidential term, from '84 to '88. The constitution of Mexico prohibited the immediate reelection to the presidency, but the Mexican congress in 1887, thinking the continuance of President Diaz in power almost a necessity, repealed that clause, and permitted him to hold a second consecutive term. This action of the Mexican congress met with the full approval of the people, because the question of retaining Gen. Diaz and the distinguished men whom he had called to serve as his cabinet was of vital importance to the whole country for its continued peace and prosperity.

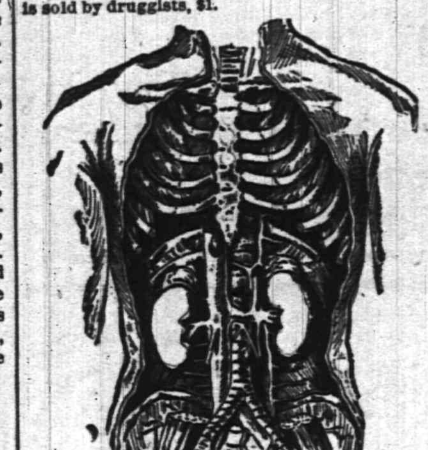
OUR KIDNEYS IN SPRING.

All Ought to Know These Facts.

SECTION OF KIDNEY.

Our kidneys act like the drains under cities, to collect and carry away waste or poisonous materials from the body. The nerves which control them often become weakened, irritated, diseased. Then the function is imperfectly performed, uric acid and other poisonous substances are retained, causing pain and weakness in back, high colored excretion, with sediment, constant desire to void, headache, coated tongue, bad taste, thirst, biliousness, cold feet, poor circulation, extreme nervousness and weak and tired feelings. The Grip has left thousands with weak and diseased kidneys, which should not be neglected. These conditions are especially dangerous and must be cured now, "or alarming kidney and liver disease will surely follow." The Spring is the worst time for kidney complaints. Everybody who has the slightest touch of kidney disease should, especially in the Spring, take Dr. Greene's Nervura, which not only perfectly regulates the kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels, but gives strength and vitality to blood and nerves. This pure, vegetable, harmless remedy is sold by druggists, $1.



WHERE YOUR KIDNEYS ARE.

"For several years I have been suffering from a complication of malaria, kidney and liver complaints and dyspepsia in its worst form.

I began taking Dr. Greene's Nervura. I have used six bottles, and now feel entirely relieved of all my former complaints, and do cheerfully recommend it to anyone who may be afflicted with any of the above troubles.

Call or write him about the case, or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter fully explaining the disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free. 22td ttas

HOW TO FILE A SAW.

A Job Requiring Considerable Care and Some Experience.

Every person should have a crosscut saw and a rip saw and should know how to file both. He will need a three cornered file and a couple of straight-edged boards, two or three inches wide and about the length of the saw, between which to clamp the saw in position firmly while being sharpened. The principle of sawing is the same as cutting. In ripping the teeth act like a series of chisels and should conform to a chisel shape as nearly as is consistent with the proper strength at the base of the tooth. The shape shown in Fig. 1 is about a correct representation of what the teeth of an ordinary rip saw for farmers' use should be. The teeth of rip saws are filed straight across the blade from every way, thus giving an entirely level and straight front to the tooth, as shown in the cut.

The filing of crosscut saws is more difficult than rip saws, at least to the amateur, as they are filed at an angle both horizontally and perpendicularly, and the set, or pitch, of the tooth must be governed by the hardness of the wood to be sawed. The softer the wood the steeper the forward pitch of the tooth may be. In Fig. 2 is shown the strongest form of tooth comparable with execution. In this form the sides and base of the tooth are equally long. This gives the base of the tooth the strength to resist the pressure of the hardest woods. The hardness of the wood has also to do with the size of the teeth, as the harder the wood the smaller the teeth must be in the same style of saw. For ordinary purposes in a hand saw a slightly forward pitch, from that of Fig. 2, is preferable, as it is capable of greater execution while giving the base of the tooth the strength necessary for ordinary purposes (see Fig. 3). The set of the tooth may be given fairly well, by a careful hand, by tapping each tooth with a hammer and punch as it lies flat on the end of a hard wood block, but it is best administered by one of the many good saw sets in use. The width of the set is governed by the softness or sponginess of the wood. Elastic wood such as willow requires a very wide set. Give in no instance more set than is required to make the saw run easily, as all beyond this demands extra and useless effort, besides wasting the timber.—Farm and Home.

MAD WITH JEALOUSY

Awful Deed of a Drunken New York Bartender.

SHOT TWO WOMEN AND HIMSELF

They Are in a Critical Condition, While He Died Instantly.

The Victims His Wife and a Servant—After They Were Wounded They Jumped from Windows to Escape His Murderous Weapon—He Had Several Times Before Attempted to Murder His Wife, but on Each Occasion She Had Wrested His Revolver from Him.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—A ghastly tragedy was enacted last evening in the five-story tenement house at No. 107 Allen street. Henry Stevens, rendered insane by jealousy, attempted to kill his entire household, and succeeded in dangerously wounding his wife and the servant girl, and then put an end to his own life. The weapon he used to commit the deed was a heavy bulldog revolver. Two of the bullets were fired at his wife, two at the servant girl, and the fifth and last was sent through his own brain.

The suicide was a bartender.

When Stevens returned from work last night it was plain to be seen that he had been drinking.

The Stevens family occupied the first apartment on the second floor, consisting of three rooms. His wife, his daughter Lillie, aged five years, his father-in-law and the servant were in the kitchen when he arrived. Shortly afterward the housekeeper, Mrs. Schmidt, who lives in the rear tenement on the second floor, heard Stevens and his wife quarreling. A few minutes later five pistol shots rang out in quick succession. Then the two women, covered with blood, were seen by people on the street to rush to one of the front windows, climb out on the fire-escape and plunge headlong to the sidewalk.

Mrs. Stevens was caught by a man who was passing at the time, and was carried in a fainting condition to the Eldridge street station. Miss Smith fell on the sidewalk and was carried to a drug store nearby. Both were afterward removed to Gouveneur Hospital.

Immediately after the shooting the neighbors entered the Stevens' apartments. One of the first to enter was Detective Mooney of the Eldridge station. He found Stevens' little daughter sitting in the kitchen crying.

"Papa just chased mamma in there," she said, pointing to the front room, "and shot her."

Detective Mooney pushed open the door and found Stevens lying dead across the bed, with a revolver clutched in his right hand. Blood was pouring from his right ear. The furniture of the room was overturned, the window curtains pulled from their fastenings and the mirror of the dressing case shattered by one of the bullets.

In the rear bedroom, the door of which was locked, Detective Mooney found Mrs. Stevens' father. He was too frightened to tell much about the occurrences that led up the shooting. He simply knew that Stevens had come home in a quarrelsome mood and had threatened to kill everyone in the house, at the same time drawing a revolver from his pocket.

The two women ran into the front room while he went in the rear bedroom, locked the door and crawled under the bed. The old man and the little girl were taken to the house of his other daughter at No. 2145 Second avenue.

At Gouverneur Hospital the physicians last night said that the two women were in a very critical condition. Mrs. Stevens was shot in the right shoulder and in the neck, the latter bullet narrowly missing the jugular vein. The servant was wounded in the mouth and the left arm.

To a reporter Mrs. Stevens said that her husband had always been jealous of her without any cause, and had frequently threatened to kill her. He had drawn a revolver to shoot her four times before, but in every instance she had succeeded in wrestling the weapon away from him.

Novelty in the Divorce Line.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 23.—A novelty in the divorce line has developed in this city. Mrs. Crow Eagle, a full blooded Indian woman, applied through counsel for a divorce from her husband, Crow Eagle, on the ground of infidelity. Crow Eagle is a Cheyenne River Indian who recently enlisted in the army at Fort Sully. The company of which he is a member was finally transferred to Fort Meade and Crow left his squaw behind. Since he has been at Fort Meade he has become enamored of another squaw and is now living with her. Mrs. Eagle heard of this and her suit for divorce is a result.

Burned the Body in the Stove.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 23.—The chief of police received information of a very sensational murder in Laretto, a village in Odjala County, inhabited almost exclusively by Roman Catholics. A traveling peddler sang an Orange song in the village hotel barroom a few nights ago, which so enraged the crowd present that they set upon the man and beat him to death. Then, sobered by their murderous deed, they shut up the house and spent the rest of the night in cutting up the body and burning it in the stove.

THE MONEY PLEDGED.

Meeting at Hartford to Raise Funds for Connecticut's Exhibit.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 23.—A meeting was held in the Representatives' chamber to consider means of raising funds to represent the State of Connecticut at the Columbian Exhibition.

The chamber was well filled, and the assemblage was called to order by Gov. Bulkeley. Ex-Gov. Waller was made permanent chairman.

A resolution was offered by Gov. Bulkeley, on behalf of the Hartford Board of Trade, asking for the appointment of a committee of sixteen, two from each county, and from the two political parties, to be known as the Connecticut World's Fair Board of Managers. The members are to receive no salary, but a secretary, an executive commissioner and other assistants may be appointed with compensation.

The resolution also calls for the appointment of a board of sixteen lady managers and a like number of alternates.

It also calls for the sum of $50,000 in subscriptions, with the understanding that the Legislature will reimburse all subscribers. After a little arguing the resolutions were adopted.

The taking of subscriptions began immediately, and in a short time the entire $50,000 was pledged.

BRANDT A MILLIONAIRE.

He Found a Cave in a Colorado Mountain That Rivals Aladdin's.

CREED, Col., Feb. 23.—Prospector Henry Brandt is a happy and a very wealthy man. As he was working over Batchelor Mountain, he stumbled upon a find which raised him in a moment from comparative poverty to opulence.

His find was a cavern, the roof of which, vaulted and hanging with stalactites, showed croppings of pure silver ore running $10,000 to the ton. This chamber is 50 feet wide and 200 feet long, and contains enough ore on the surface to make Brandt a millionaire.

Besides the silver, the cavern contains utensils, skeletons and remains, evidently those of cliff dwellers, but the antiquarian discovery is lost in interest in the phenomenal silver find.

Brandt reported the find here and the people went wild. Hundreds left for the Cliff Dweller Claim, as it is called, at once. Brandt was offered $100,000 cash for the claim by a syndicate of California capitalists, but he refused it.

He says the Russian nobility should part with some of their wealth and the Czar with his cannon if there is no other way to alleviate the sufferings of the poor peasants in their country.

Grasped a Live Wire.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Feb. 23.—George Pike, a lineman of the Pittsfield Electric company, came in contact with a live primary wire while working on a pole. He grasped a wire carrying 1,000 volts, and, unable to let go, writhed in agony on the pole, the smoke rising from his hands. His fellow-workmen were unable to release him until the current was turned off. His hands were badly burned, and the shock had rendered him unconscious.

NEW YORK FOR HILL

Delegates So Instructed by the Albany Convention.

SOLID DELEGATION TO CHICAGO.

Not One Cleveland Man Selected to Go to the National Convention.

Senator Hill Brought to the Hall and Delivered a Speech, Which Was Greeted by Vigorous Applause—The Objectors to the Early Convention Appear Before the State Committee, Enter Their Protest, Which Was Referred, Hold a Meeting, and Decide to Hold a Convention at Syracuse on May 31.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 23.—After Gen. Daniel E. Sickles had taken his seat as Chairman of the Democratic State convention yesterday afternoon, he spoke as follows:

I thank you for the honor you confer in choosing me to preside over your deliberations. The Democracy of New York and of the Nation approach the Presidential campaign of 1892 with a deep sense of the responsibility imposed upon us by the signal victories of '90 and '91. We cannot fail to see the manifest purpose of the people of this country to dismiss the Republican party from any further control of the Federal Government. The policy of our adversaries having found its disastrous culmination in the McKinley tariff, and in the Force bill and in the unmeasured extravagance of the last Republican Congress, they will appeal in vain for the support of an indignant constituency.

In our State the legislative department of the government has been restored to the control of the Democratic party after a long struggle, unexampled in our historical history.

Under the intrepid and masterly leadership of Gov. Hill, constantly supported by a majority of the people, and sustained in the last conflict by our highest judicial tribunal, the voice of the majority is once more potential in the capitol of our State.

The State of New York has often had the good fortune to be honored by the choice of one of its citizens as the champion of the National Democracy. If we shall again be invited by our comrades in other States to put forward a candidate for the chief magistracy of the Nation, we are prepared to set their suffrages for a statesman whose record already places him in the group made illustrious by the names of Van Buren, Wright, Marcy, Seymour and Tilden. We shall present the name of a gallant leader whose banner is inscribed with many victories, and under whom the Democracy of New York never has been and never will be defeated; a leader who was elected to the Senate of the United States without the expenditure of a dollar; a leader we love because the enemies of the Democratic party hate and fear him; a leader in whom the veteran soldiers of New York have found a steadfast friend; a leader whose success is always the triumph of his party; a leader whose election to the Presidency of the United States would give to the whole people an administration guided and directed in all of its measures by the principles, the policy and the traditions of Jefferson and Jackson.

The list of delegates and electors was then submitted. The 178 men selected include the Governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, and Comptroller.

Delegates-at-Large—Roswell P. Flower, Edward Murphy, jr., Daniel E. Sickles, Henry W. Slocum.

Alternates—Manton Marble, John Bigelow, Sydney Webster, and Alfred C. Chapin.

The delegates selected were instructed for David B. Hill for President under the unit rule.

A committee was then appointed to bring Senator Hill to the convention hall.

When he appeared he was greeted by uproarious applause, which continued for several minutes. He delivered a speech from manuscript which was frequently interrupted by cheers from the assembly.

Not one of the delegates chosen is a Cleveland man.

When the State Committee met before the convention was called to order the cards of W. E. Cruse, E. Ellery Anderson, R. G. Monroe and James Byrne were handed in. The delegation was received and the protest heretofore published was given to the Committee and read by the clerk.

After the reading Mr. Cockran asked Mr. Anderson if it was not true that the protest was prepared before the Convention had been called or the date set, and if it was not true that they met at Mr. Anderson's office for that purpose.

Mr. Anderson replied, "The committee met on the Saturday night prior to the 29th of January when the State committee met to decide the convention date. There was a rumor that the convention was to be held early."

Thomas F. Grady said, "I believe that it is true that this committee met before any date was announced and they decided to protest against the convention either as too early or too late. Then I also believe that it is true that this committee simply were opposed to candidates and not alone to the date of the convention. There is no good faith in this movement, it being simply antagonistic and nothing else."

Mr. Cockran moved that the question be referred to the committee, together with the papers. Adopted.

Mr. Andegon then said:

"We are very much obliged gentlemen for the hearing accorded us, and bid you good morning."

Mayor Grace was heard to say:

"I have not mentioned Mr. Hill in my interviews on protest because I have nothing to say against him. It is not the man, but the early convention that I deprecate."

The objectors afterward held a convention, and after passing resolutions denouncing the early convention, voted to hold a State convention at Syracuse on May 31.

PITCHED BATTLE.

A Sheriff's Posse and Alabama Desperadoes Exchange Shots.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 23.—In Blount County a band of regulators ordered Mary McMurray and her daughter, bad characters, to leave the county, at the same time sending letters written in blood to several prominent citizens suspected of being intimate with the women, threatening to burn their dwellings and kill them unless they left the county also.

William Farrington's barn and stables were burned, as was also the house of the McMurray women, who narrowly escaped.

Sheriff Morris started after the regulators, who were led by Bob McMurray, a desperado, and drove them into a cave, where a pitched battle took place between the sheriff's posse and outlaws.

Two of the latter were wounded, but all got away. Lynching is threatened if caught.

FRIGHTFUL STORY.

One Negro Lynched, Another's Fate Unknown, and Another Being Tracked.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 23.—A frightful story has been brought to this city.

In the vicinity of Modoc, S. C., on the Port Royal railroad, a white woman, whose name is not given, gave birth to a mulatto child. The neighbors were indignant, and, feeling disgraced, the community demanded of her the name of the father of the child.

The woman gave the name of three negroes, and many men were soon on their track.

One of them is known to have been lynched, another is said to have been taken into custody and his fate is unknown, and the other is at large and has signified his intention of dying with his boots on.

The community is terribly aroused. Nothing more than the bare statement as given above can be obtained.

Thompson was taken to the hospital where he lies in a dangerous condition and is liable to die. Bennet was arrested.

Thompson has made an ante mortem statement in the deaf mute language.

SHE WAITED IN VAIN

Mysterious Disappearance of a Bridegroom.

NO CLEW TO HIS WHEREABOUTS.

Rumors of Kidnapping and Murder by an Infatuated Woman Current.

Said That the Woman Had Threatened to Kill Him if He Married Her Rival—English Society People Agitated Over the Mystery—Rewards Offered for Information That Will Lead to His Discovery.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—The details of a case which is surrounded with much mystery, and which has caused considerable comment, have been received in this city from Ilminster, a town of Somerset County, on the Ile, about ten miles from Taunton.

It appears that Mr. W. R. Liddesdale, a prominent banker, and who was a leader in the business and social circles of the town, disappeared from Ilminster during the first part of January last.

Mr. Liddesdale had become engaged to an estimable lady and all the preparations had been completed for the wedding and invitations to the ceremony had been sent to the large number of friends. It promised to be one of the social events of the season in the town.

But on the eve of the day set for the marriage the expectant bride, the relatives of the couple and their host of friends were thrown into a state of consternation when the fact was made known that Mr. Liddesdale had suddenly left the place without giving the least intimation to any one that he was going away or any clew which would give an inkling to his whereabouts.

The fiancee of the banker had at first refused to believe that she had been deserted at the last hour by the man to whom she had given her heart, but when the time set for the wedding had come and gone without her lover appearing, she was at last forced to admit the cruel fact that she had been deserted.

When some days had passed without any word from the missing man, it began to be whispered about that probably he had not been true to the trusts of his clients, and that his secret departure from the town was occasioned by the misappropriation of funds intrusted to his care and his inability to face the charges which would be brought against him. This rumor was soon proven to be without foundation, however, as a thorough investigation was made of Mr. Liddesdale's books and papers, and it was found that all his accounts were correct.

Some light was finally thrown on the mystery when a number of letters were discovered which upon perusal were found to have been sent to Mr. Liddesdale by an American woman residing in the Westminster building and who, it was ascertained, has been an intimate of the banker. It was seen from these letters that the woman had been thoroughly infatuated with Mr. Liddesdale and that when she heard of his intended marriage with the Ilminster lady she had become infuriated and had determined that he should not give her up for another.

She upbraided him for casting her off, and threatened that she would never permit him to marry he rival; that rather than allow him to carry out his design of wedding the other woman she would kill him.

The family and solicitors of Mr. Liddesdale, when the contents of these threatening letters were learned, came to the conclusion that the missing man was either dead or had been kidnapped at the instigation of the woman whose bitter animosity he had aroused, and so confident are they in this belief that they have now issued an advertisement offering a large reward for information as to Mr. Liddesdale's whereabouts if living or a certificate of his death.

The American woman mentioned in the case owns a yacht, and it is supposed that she lured Liddesdale aboard it and is keeping him there.

The club is rapidly gaining new members, and expects to improve its grounds and erect a larger clubhouse in the near future. Among the members are a large number of crack shots of the Middlesex Gun club.

—The reception held at the home of the Westfield Athletic club last evening was attended by a large number of the members. It was ladies' night. Bowling was indulged in until 9, when dancing became the order. John A. Brunner was master of ceremonies, and music was furnished by an excellent orchestra under the leadership of Andrew G. Carpenter of this city.

—At a recent meeting of one of Plainfield's most fashionable young people's social clubs the company were entertained in a novel and commendable manner. the young men spending the evening in trimming dainty hats, while the girls constructed neckties, prizes being offered for the most artistic creations. If this line of procedure were followed out, there is no limit to its possibilities, and it is earnestly hoped that the public may soon hear that young men have learned all the mysteries of the dressmaking art, and that the dear girls have become past-mistresses in the building of trousers and dress-shirts and silk socks and—well, as has been said, there is no limit to the possibilities.

RUBBER BOOTS SAVED HIS LIFE.

But His Horse Wore Metal Shoes, and Was Killed by the Electric Current.

The Plainfield Gas and Electric Light company has on its hands the settlement of another claim for damages for the death of a horse. During Saturday night one of the company's poles on Putnam avenue fell, and the electric light wires were carried with it to the ground. Before daybreak Sunday morning milkman Joseph Duffy of Netherwood was driving into town to serve his customers. Usually milkman William Thoms of Short Hills reaches Plainfield ahead of him, but this time Thoms was just behind. Duffy saw the obstruction in the road, and got out of the wagon to lead his horse around the pole. The fact that he had rubber boots on his feet saved him from possibly a fatal shock in crossing the wires, but his horse no sooner stepped on the wires than it dropped stone dead to the ground. The bridle had slipped from Duffy's grasp, and he was about to stoop over to take hold of the horse when Thoms warned him against the danger. As it was, he got a slight shock from his garments brushing against the animal. Duffy remained on guard to warn others, until linemen with rubber gloves cleared away the fallen wires. Duffy will demand damages of the company, who were forced to pay John Chandler in full for the loss of a trotting horse which was killed by their wires on Crescent avenue two years ago.

The cause of the fall of the pole is attributed to the combined strain of the wires and the rottenness of the pole at the base.

THE COMPANY SETTLES.

One Hundred Dollars Paid to Milkman Duffy for the Loss of His Horse.

Representatives of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light company to-day had milkman Duffy present his claim for the value of the horse which was killed by their wires, and promptly paid him a check for $100, the full amount asked.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Moore, have a little daughter, Clara, age 10 days.

Miss Eva Clark, of Westerly, R. I., is visiting Miss Florence Titsworth of Madison avenue.

Henry Craft, formerly of Plainfield but now of New York, spent yesterday with friends in town.

John Dunshee, of Hoboken, formerly of Plainfield, was with Plainfield friends in town yesterday.

Miss Scudder, one of the favorite teachers at the Franklin school, spent yesterday at her Elmira home.

During the absence of Robert Gorton, Sunday, from the choir of the First Presbyterian church, William Holmes very efficiently filled his place.

William C. Smith of this city was elected a vice-president of the Second New Jersey Cavalry Association, at their annual reunion, at Trenton, yesterday.

Have you secured your seats for the Damrosch concert at Music Hall, March 8? They are for sale at the Central pharmacy, Front street and Park avenue.

The Rev. A. V. V. Raymond paid a visit to Trinity Reformed Sunday-school, Sunday afternoon, and spoke eloquent words of congratulation and encouragement to teachers and scholars.

Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, daughter of Mrs. D. Ogden Wotherspoon, of this city, will give a second informal tea next Thursday afternoon at her home 6 West 22d street, New York city.

The sad news has been received here of the death of the brother of Mrs. William Sandford, a young western farmer in the prime of life and the height of prosperity. He was the son of Joel Randolph.

Frank W. Rogers made glad the hearts of a number of his friends yesterday, by presenting them with delicious oranges grown in his grove near Jacksonville, Fla. He only regrets he did not have enough to go around.

Harry Campbell arrived at his home in this city from Crescent City, Fla., Sunday evening, on the Clyde steamship "Iroquois". Mr. Campbell has been very successful the past season in growing oranges on his fine plantation at that point, a large amount of the luscious fruit being disposed of in Plainfield in boxes labelled Kelly & Campbell.

Frederick W. Clark, whose death at his home in Netherwood was announced in THE PRESS of Saturday, was the first American Consul at Sydney, New South Wales. He was appointed by President Pierce. He was the pioneer shipper of American products to Australia and New Zealand, and was a great traveler. He circled the globe six times and crossed the Atlantic thirty times. A wife and two daughters survive him. One of the daughters is the wife of Dorsey W. Hyde, son of the millionaire banker, Charles Hyde.

Miss Helen Hay Downing and William Percival DeWitt, a nephew of the late Isaac Randolph of this city and a cousin of Mrs. Alex Gilbert, will be married on Tuesday afternoon, March 1. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. J. Wesley Brown at St. Thomas's church, New York city, at 4 o'clock. The chancel will be filled with palms and massed roses. The bride's wedding gown will be of the richest white satin with draperies of point lace and many diamond ornaments. A reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Downing, 960 Fifth avenue. The bride is said to be worth a half-million of dollars.

THE LEADERS STILL LEAD.

Eighteen Games in the Bowling Tournament Make Little Change in the Order of Things.

Since the last issue of THE PRESS there were eighteen more contests rolled among the Crescent League members entered in the handicap tournament for the club championship. The results, however, merely clinched VanEmburgh's grip as a sure winner, and dropped Schultz from second place to fourth. The scores were:

A Clamor from Sandford Avenue.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Can you inform me in what direction the duties of the street commissioner of this city lie? From actual evidence existing on this avenue, the title of "omissioner" rather than "commissioner" would seem better adapted to his office. Ever since this street was opened, the sidewalk in front of No. 16 has remained unpaved; in snowy times the ladies of our household must plow through the fall; when it melts or when it rains, a morass of mud lies there, requiring considerable knowledge of tight-rope walking to keep the curb, or else a disdain of mud and slush. These facts were presented to Mr. Meeker in a petition from those concerned, some time ago; he has done nothing. Will you please ask him to "get a move on"? T. W. KING,
20 Sandford avenue.

Another Big Enterprise in Plainfield.

Yesterday morning a gang of 100 men started to build a siding 600 feet long north of the railroad tracks below Grant avenue station; and before 6 o'clock in the evening it was finished.

This extraordinary piece of work on a holiday was necessitated by the fact that 45 car loads of ice had arrived, and 30 more were on their way from Lake Hopatcong for Thomas Brady, yet he had no place to put it. He will now pile it up and build a house around it that will be big enough to hold a lot more to come. Later he will add a coal yard to his plant.

Stop Jumping at Conclusions.

A week ago the Courier greatly agitated a handful of readers in the city by the statement that Carey was to be reappointed captain of police. A few days afterwards the Courier disturbed a handful of readers in the borough by the statement that the usual election they had prepared for was postponed a month.

If our esteemed nighbor does n't stop jumping at conclusions, both handfuls of readers will stop buying it.

A Word of the T's.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—"The Chronothanatoletron" is the subject of a great deal of inquiry at present. Will the "T's" kindly pronounce it and explain its meaning? INQUIRER.

[THE PRESS has already explained that the word is a coined one and means Time and Death Annihilator. Chro-no-than-a-tol e-tron is the pronounciation, with the accent on the "o" in "tol" as in doll.]

Burglars at Fanwood.

Burglars ransacked the residence of Frank D. Warren at Fanwood, opposite the station, Sunday night and stole a quantity of silver-ware and Mrs. Warren's pocket-book. They were frightened away from another house by a dog. The burglars also operated in Westfield between 12 and 1 midnight.

BY THE WAY.

—Tom Muir's polo team defeated Fred Firstbrook's team yesterday by the score of 11 to 6.

—The Plainfield common council will meet to-night to consider the liquor-license question.

—The police deserve credit for attempting to break up the disorderly gang who infest the North avenue station Sunday nights. Several arrests have been made, and fines inflicted.

—The Salvation Army have at last been successful in their efforts to lease the late Elkwood saloon as their future headquarters. They also rent a number of rooms above to live in.

—The Chautauqua circle of the Congregational church meets in the church parlors this evening. An especially interesting programme appropriate to Washington's memory has been prepared. The ladies will appear in Lady Martha attire. All interested are invited.

—A team of horses drawing a carriage occupied by two women and a child took fright at a coal train at the Park avenue bridge this afternoon and in prancing about broke the wagon pole. They were got under control in time to prevent the threatened serious runaway.

NO CHANGE IN ELECTION DATES.

It Was Only the Courier's Latest Bull, and the City and Borough Will Vote as Usual in March and December.

Notwithstanding a very different and diffuse statement in the Plainfield Courier of Friday last, the elections in North Plainfield will continue to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in each March, and the Plainfield city election, as heretofore, in December.

Consequently our neighbors over the brook will vote for mayor and councilmen on March 8, and the readers of THE PRESS will reelect Mayor Gilbert or his successor on December 8—the city clerk's paper to the contrary howsoever.

If you don't see it in THE PRESS, it is n't so!

Years ago this paper had its hands and columns full setting the News right until people stopped reading or believing it. Now the same task concerning that paper's successor, has devolved upon us. Only a day or two since the city clerk's Courier announced the intended reappointment of the second-hand furniture man, Carey, as captain of police. But THE PRESS said, "No!" and THE PRESS was right in spite of the strenuous efforts of the disgraced and disgraceful policeman's friends among whom seems to be included—we regret to say—councilman Marsh.

Friday the Courier published a newly enacted law of the State—with prologue, explanatory notes and even an interview with Governor Abbett concerning it—to the effect that all elections hereafter in any township, borough, city or municipality of the State, should be held on the second Tuesday in April next following the date now fixed by law. The Courier gave this law in full and stated that the coming North Plainfield election would be held, in consequence, on April 12, and that the mayor of this city and the councilmen whose terms next expired would remain in office 14 months yet before their successors should be chosen.

If this was so, it would have been in THE PRESS two weeks ago, because the law that the Courier has discovered but can't read straight, was passed February 10. It does provide for elections in municipalities to be held on the second Tuesday in April, but only—as it states in its enacting clause, and over and over again in each and every section—in counties of the first class. As the Courier seems to be sorely in need of lot of information about its own State, THE PRESS will impart it a little right here. Counties of the first class are those having a pupulation of over 150,000, and consist only of the counties of Hudson and Essex which embrace the cities of Jersey City and Newark with their populations of 163,003 and 181,830 respectively. This Union county in which the Courier is living—and growing and improving in every day, in spite of its mistakes, we are pleased to see—is but a second class county with merely 72,467 people; while Somerset, in which is North Plainfield borough, has even less inhabitants and is rated as third class with a population of 28,311.

Therefore the law that changes certain municipal elections in this State to the second Tuesday in April, affects this city and the borough over the brook, no more than it affects the date of the Judgment Day.

A Day With the W. C. T. U.

[CONTRIBUTED.]

A very earnest gospel temperance meeting was held at the W. C. T. U. rooms Sunday. The Rev. Mr. Ferrald [than whom there is no more stanch and fearless speaker, writer and worker in Plainfield] gave a stirring though brief temperance address, which was followed by one from Mrs. Fernald full of emphasis and earnestness and explanatory of active work done by the W. C. T. U. committees the past few weeks. Miss Yates, Frederick Moon and Mr. Edsall were fervent in prayer and exhortation; and Mrs. Kimball of the Children's Home told a pathetic story of one darkened home in Plainfield as the sad result of indulgence in the drink poison. Mr. Dunham and members of his choir assisted in the music, and Miss Ida Dunham and Miss Maggie Shepard sang very impressively "Every Day" and "Throw Out the Life Line". Temperance literature was distributed, and all present must have been spiritually benefited.

Plainfield's Champion Marksmen.

Eight clubs were represented at the initial shoot of the New Jersey Trap Shooters' league, held on the grounds of the Woodside Gun club in Belleville yesterday. The team of the Independent Gun club of Plainfield carried off the honors of the day and won the trophy emblematical of the bluerock championship of the State, with a record of 109 breaks out of a possible 125.. The team winning the trophy the greatest number of times during the series will retain it. Each team was composed of five men, and each man shot at twenty-five blue rocks at unknown angles, five traps, rapid-firing system, under American Shooting association rules. The score of the Plainfield shooters was: T. Keller, 20; Neaf Apgar, 24; E. D. Miller, 21; Thomas Brantingham, 24, and Dan Terry, 20. Total, 109.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 20, 1890.
Having been a sufferer for sometime past with biliousness, &c., I was recommended to use Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills. I did so, and am pleased to find that they are as recommended, a cure for those ailments. I therefore subscribe myself cheerfully in recommending them to any who may suffer with those complaints.—E. B. NAAR, News Editor True American.

ORGANIZE A LAW AND ORDER LEAGUE!

That's What THE PRESS Would Propose for Plainfield in Indorsement of ex-Mayor Randolph's and Dr. Rodman's Suggestions.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—A most important suggestion seems to be that made by ex-Mayor Randolph in his speech at Music Hall, last Sunday afternoon, to the effect that for the proper protection of the people something more was needed than an annual spurt of indignation on account of some proposed iniquitous legislation. Anyone who watches the signs of the times and sees the bills presented to the Legislature for the purpose of legalizing gambling, pool-selling, book-making, and for State regulation of vice; anyone who knows the practice of young clerks, who take their luncheon hour to visit pool-rooms and speculate with their own or their employers' money on races; anyone who has read Dr. Parkhurst's denunciation of the tactics prevalent in New York city, must be convinced that it is high time for the sober, honest and industrious people of this land to organize for the protection of society's best interests.

Year after year the workers of iniquity have become bolder in their demands and more unblushing in their proclamations, as witness the bills before the New Jersey Legislature, granting enlarged privileges to race-track gamblers, to which it is hoped the recent demonstration of popular indignation has given a check; and those before the Legislature of New York removing almost every restriction which wisdom and experience have for years put upon the saloon business, reducing the fees for licenses, exempting from police inspection, removing restriction as to hours, allowing sales all night or 163 out of the 168 hours of the week. Some good people have been rejoicing that the Louisiana lottery had received what seemed to be its deathblow, but it now turns out to be only a removal of headquarters to Mexico, whence it is proposed to operate agencies, European and American. Coming nearer home, the aspect of affairs in our own city is not such as to afford as much satisfaction as might be desired, to those who believe that good morals, truth and honesty and right dealing are the foundation of good politics.

Is it not time for our people to arouse themselves and take some measures to guard our homes against these and other monstrous evils that threaten their ruin? "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty". What do your readers think?

E. M. RODMAN.

A RIVAL TO OLD "ONE-HORN".

Firemen of Perth Amboy and Tottenville at War Over an Iron Triangle.

Perth Amboy in this State, and Tottenville on Staten Island, are virtually in a state of arms, at war over an old bit of iron. The iron was formerly a tire on a locomotive driving-wheel. It was bent in the form of a huge triangle, and from 1884 to 1887 was used as a fire-alarm by Lincoln Hose company, No. 1, of Perth Amboy. When the city bought a fire bell the triangle was officially donated to the Tottenville fire department, but before it could pass through the red tape of official action it was stolen by the Tottenville firemen. Thus a peaceful gift was suddenly transformed into a cause of war. Petitions were signed, urging the council to get the triangle back at all hazards. Lawyers were hired, demands made, threats indulged in; and excitement ran high, but the Tottenville firemen would n't give up the trophy. For four years they held it, but about two weeks ago they too got a fire bell and stored the old triangle in their engine house. Perth Amboy firemen hired a tug, removed the engine house doors, stole the triangle, and hoisted it up a tall building where it was thought the Tottenvillians could n't climb. But they did climb, and dropped the triangle out of the attic window and carried it off and sunk it in Staten Island Sound, with a white birch stake to mark the place. Somebody pulled up the birch stake, and now it may be difficult to locate the precious relic. Meantime warrants and counter-warrants are being issued, and before long the triangle war may become as important a matter of history as did the famous old "one-horn" cannon at Plainfield.

Notice to King's Daughters.

The executive committee of the Relief association desire to become better acquainted with the workings of the other benevolent agencies of Plainfield, and to compare notes with them as to cases treated and methods employed. To this end they cordially invite and urge each of the various circles of King's Daughters to send representatives to any of the regular meetings of the committee, which are held at the Relief rooms every Thursday morning at 10. The discussion and comparison of work cannot fail, we think, to be beneficial to both societies.

If your lungs are sore, chest, or back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by J. G. Miller, No. 10 East Front street, Plainfield N.J.

ELECTRIC LIGHT DEFECTS.

Leaky Wires and Rotten Poles Not Wanted in Plainfield.

The trouble with the electric lighting system of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light company seems to be a lack of efficient inspection. The recent exposure of the deficiencies in the street lighting service has developed the fact that much of the company's current has been in the habit of leaking from the wires to the earth through the shade trees, leaving only a weak force to enter the lamps. It seems singular that such gross defects should be perfectly familiar, from mere observation, to telegraph and telephone linemen, and that the electric light company whose men have to work on the circuits should be utterly oblivious to the fact. And if such a state of affairs is sufficient to arouse public indignation with what sentiment will the people receive the disclosure that rotting poles are not at once replaced with others but are permitted to stand until they fall of their own weakness and cause destruction of animal life and property and endanger human existence? Is not such carelessness criminal? And is not that corporation deserving of harsh censure which permits its wires to leak and its poles to tumble in the streets through the false economy of its managers and its own neglect? The place for electric wires is under ground, and if the electric light company can't provide a safer overhead service it is time the city made it bury its wires in thoroughly-insulated cables.

Notes of the Boys' Club.

The average attendance each evening at the Boys' club rooms last week was 74, the largest being 85, and the smallest 60. The number of visitors was 6.

All members should bear in mind the entertainment to be given them next Saturday evening at the Bicycle club rooms. The boys will assemble at their club rooms and march over in a body to the house. Every member should be present to enjoy the evening.

Notwithstanding the attractions last evening, a large number of boys enjoyed the two hours at the rooms, playing games and reading books. The number present was nearly two hundred.

DICKEY CLUB DOINGS.

Harvard's Sophomore Society Must Behave Itself.

Some of the Silly Pranks Which Have Disgusted the Public and the Overseers of the University—How Neophytes Are Treated.

The D. K. E., or "Dickey" club, is the only Greek letter society at Harvard which amounts to much for any large body of men. There are other Greek letter societies which have high social standing, but these have so few members that they do not exercise any considerable amount of influence. The Dickey is a sophomore society, and the men are chosen in batches of ten. Towards the end of each college year the sophomore members of the society elect the first ten from the next class; for instance, next spring the members from '94 will choose the first ten from '95, while the latter men are still freshmen.

DICKEY BRAND OF CIGARETTES.

Then, with the beginning of the next year, these men are the nucleus of the society; they elect the next ten, these twenty choose the next ten, and so on until the list of sixty is filled. The number is raised a little from year to year, but there are ordinarily sixty members. Everything depends upon the number of swell and wealthy men in the class.

The most trying days for the neophyte is when he is said by his fellow students to be running for the Dickey; his trials last for nearly a week, and no task is too difficult, no situation too embarrassing to be suggested by the older members of the society. The things to be done by those chosen on the first tens are much more difficult than for those who come on later.

The baseball and football games at Harvard offer the best opportunities for displaying the neophytes in the best possible way, and many a young man has been compelled to parade up and down in front of the crowded stands where his sister or best girl is seated, when he would prefer to sink out of sight altogether.

S. M. Brice, '93, the son of Senator Brice, of Ohio, himself a prominent graduate member of the D. K. E., was one of the first ten from his class. As an initiation measure he was dressed up in a short-sleeved blazer, silk hat, boxing gloves, etc., and told to walk in front of the grand-stand seats. On his breast he wore a placard, which said: "I am Brice." During the intermission of the football game Brice passed his time in trying to walk the tight rope before the highly amused audience.

The Sears twins, Phil and Herbert, of the class of '89, when they were initiated were dressed up as grooms and put on the back seat of a dog cart, which was driven in town. They conducted themselves with due decorum, jumped down from the seat, touched their hats to the well-known society woman in the cart, held the horses, and did what any well-educated groom would do. A little later the same men were tied together and sent up Beacon street, Boston, dragging behind them a pair of toy dogs.

George H. Norman, '89, was a leading society man while he was in college. When he went on the Dickey he was dressed in knee-breeches and sent through the Cambridge streets and the college yard, while he shouted in loud tones: "I am Rollo, the Danish idiot."

J. B. Eustis, Jr., another '93 man, and the son of the ex-senator from Louisiana, was told to hold a banana in his mouth and march at the head of a German street band to Beck hall, the swell Harvard dormitory, where he conducted several popular selections, using a lighted cigarette as a baton.

The crucial test of the whole initiation and the thing which has aroused all the discussion is the burning. In recent years the candidate has been told to bare his arm, and he is branded six times with a lighted cigarette or cigar.

Many a prominent Harvard man has these six scars on his arms, and the baseball, football and crew men proudly expose them. They are regarded as marks of honor.

A Curious Funeral Ceremony.

It is said that when Alaric, the conqueror of Rome, died "a river was turned aside to make a place in its bed for his grave, and when he was buried the water was again let into its former channel, and the prisoners who had helped to bury him were killed so that no one might find out where the conqueror of Rome was buried." The river thus turned was the Busento, and the place near Cosento, Italy. See Gibbon's "Roman Empire," volume 3, page 58.

ABOUT SPIRIT SLATES.

An Amusing and Easy Experiment in Prestidigitation.

Two ordinary wooden framed slates are presented to the spectators, and examined in succession by them. A small piece of chalk is introduced between the two slates, which are then united by a rubber band and held aloft in the prestidigitator's right hand.

Then, in the general silence, says La Nature, is heard the scratching of the chalk, which is writing between the two slates the answer to a question asked by one of the spectators—the name of a card thought of, or the number of spots obtained by throwing two dice. The rubber band having been removed and the slates separated, one of them is seen to be covered with writing.

This prodigy, which at first sight seems to be so mysterious, is very easily realized.

The writing was done in advance; but upon the written side of the slate A there had been placed a thin sheet of black cardboard which hid the characters written with chalk. The two sides of this slate thus appeared absolutely clean.

The slate B is first given out for examination, and, after it has been returned to him, the operator says: "Do you want to examine the other one also?" And then, without any haste, he makes a pass analogous to that employed in shuffling cards. The slate A being held by the thumb and forefinger of the left hand and the slate B between the fore and middle finger of the right hand (Fig. 1), the two hands are brought together. But at the moment at which the slates are superposed, the thumb and forefinger of the right hand grasp the slate A, while at the same time the fore and middle finger of the left hand take the slate B. Then the two hands separate anew, and the slate that has already been examined, instead of the second one, is put into the hands of the spectator. This shifting, done with deliberation, is entirely invisible.

During the second examination the slate A is laid flat upon a table, the written face turned upward and covered with black cardboard. The slate having been sufficiently examined, and been returned to the operator, the latter lays it upon the first, and both are then surrounded by the rubber band.

It is then that the operator holds up the slates with the left hand, of which one sees but the thumb, while upon the posterior face of the second slate the nail of his middle finger makes a sound, resembling that produced by chalk when written with. When the operator judges that this little comedy has lasted quite long enough, he lays the two slates horizontally upon his table, taking care, this time, that the non-prepared slate shall be beneath (Fig. 2). It is upon it that then rests the black cardboard, and the other slate, on being raised, shows the characters that it bears, and that are stated to have been written by an invisible spirit that slipped in between the two slates.

Our readers will not ask us how we manage to know in advance what should be written upon the slate. It is useless to say that deceit is allowable in prestidigitation; loaded dice always turn up the same number, and nothing is easier than to know the name of the card that a spectator will draw from a pack composed of thirty-two similar cards, if one if not skillful enough to cause him to take the forced card.

Rather Stale Bread.

Mrs. Slimdiet—The boarders are coming in. Cut the bread, Matilda.

Miss Slimdiet—Ma, I saw in a society paper to-day that bread should be broken, not cut.

Mrs. Slimdiet—That's the style now, eh? Very well. Where's the ax?—Chicago Ledger.

Will Be Popular.

Snodgrass—If aerial navigation is ever a success, balloon lines will be the most fashionable means of transportation.

Snively—How do you know?

Snodgrass — Because balloons are swell affairs.—Detroit Free Press.

A Smashing Machine.

Hicks—We've got something new at our house—a machine to wash dishes.

Wicks—And how does it work?

Hicks—Beautifully. It breaks on an average of five dishes a day. Fact; you would hardly know it from a hired girl.—Boston Transcript.

Life-Long Devotion Assured.

Mrs. Social—And so Miss Flirtie is engaged to your son. Do you think she will be true to him?

Wise Dame—Oh, she'll be true to him as long as other women admire him, and I guess he'll be handsome all his life.—Demorest's Monthly.

About the Size of It.

Gossipby—Good morning, Crosman; what makes you look so glum?

Crosman—Nothing much, only I have a check suit on my hands.

Gossipby—A misfit?

Crosman — Very near it—breach of promise.—Judge.

DIED AT THE GAME

While Playing Chess Matthew Wilson Drops Lifeless.

STRICKEN WITH APOPLEXY.

He Was a Portrait Painter of Great Distinction and Celebrity.

Among Those Whose Portraits He Had Painted Were Presidents William Henry Harrison and Lincoln and Other Celebrated Men—The Body Will be Taken from Brooklyn to Philadelphia, Where the Funeral Will Take Place To-morrow.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 24.—Matthew Wilson, the celebrated portrait painter, died of apoplexy last evening at the Brooklyn Chess Club. He was not a member of the club, but was an expert at the royal pastime, and had just defeated J. J. Spowers in an exciting game that had been watched with interest by many members in the club's quarters. The last move in the game had scarcely been made when he rose from the table, placed his hand to his heart and fell backward into the arms of William Duval, the treasurer of the club.

Ambulance Surgeon Meyer was called, but Mr. Wilson died before his arrival. The body was removed to 128 Willow street. The funeral will take place to-morrow in Philadelphia.

Matthew Wilson was 77 years of age, and had been a noted portrait painter. He was born in England, and was the nephew of the late Lord Mayor of London, Samuel Wilson.

He came to America when young and soon distinguished himself as a portrait painter. Among some of the celebrated men who sat to him and whose portraits are now historical works were Presidents William Henry Harrison, President Abraham Lincoln, Albert Gallatin, Attorney-General Brewster and Governor Fairbanks, of Vermont.

The portrait of Mr. Lincoln was finished just two weeks before the President's death. Mr. Wilson also executed a full length portrait of Martha Washington, ordered for the White House.

Mr. Wilson lived in Brooklyn years ago, and later removed to Philadelphia. He had a summer residence at Lake George. He was visiting in Brooklyn with his wife and son when death overtook him. While in Brooklyn he stayed at 128 Willow street. He leaves a widow and six children—for sons and two daughters.

BAKED TO DEATH.

Michigan Charcoal Burners Thrust a Woman Into an Oven.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 24.—On pay-day at a charcoal camp twenty miles from Emerson, a small town on the upper peninsula, the men celebrated the occasion by getting drunk. They were visited by a woman named Lou Bennett, who lived with another woman of like character about two miles from the camp, and having a grievance against her they decided to discipline her.

They seized the woman, bound her hand and foot and thrust her into one of the coal ovens, which was known to be filled, but which the men did not know had been kindled. Their action was discovered by the camp boss shortly afterwards, but the woman was dead before he succeeded in getting her out. Her entire body was browned by the intense heat and was dry as a piece of leather.

The body was buried near her shanty and the sheriff was informed of the crime.

Renounces Civilization.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 24.—Joaquin Miller, the Poet of the Sierras, has cut his flowing locks and has renounced civilization and authorship. It is said that he has secured a hermitage in the mountains back of San Diego, to which he intends to retire. The recent conviction of his son Harry for stage robbery, during which the poet's neglect of his offspring widely circulated, and the subsequent comments of the press, are said to have caused him to renounce the world.

Secretary Foster Off for Europe.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Secretary of the Treasury Foster sailed for Europe on the North German Lloyd steamer Spree. A large party of government officials and personal friends were on the pier to wish the Secretary bon voyage. As the Spree passed Governor's Island a salute of seventeen guns was fired and the national flags were displayed. The Secretary is accompanied by Dr. G. B. Hamilton and W. F. Machennan.

To Surrender Drake-Ford.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—An order has been issued from the State Department to the United States marshal for the Southern District of New York for the surrender of William F. Drake-Ford to the British authorities. Drake-Ford is at present in custody in New York charged with embezzlement committed in England.

England and the New Khedive.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—A Vienna despatch to the "Daily News" says that Lord Salisbury has advised the Khedive not to appear before the Sultan until a firman has been granted, fully and irrevocably confirming the Khedive in his office. The "News" adds that the Egyptian cabinet supports the attitude of Lord Salisbury.

REV. MARTIN HEARD FROM.

The Chatham, Ont., Clergyman Writes from Minneapolis.

CHATHAM, Ont., Feb. 24.—Rev. N. H. Martin, who disappeared recently after engaging himself to marry three ladies, members of his congregation, has written a letter from Minneapolis. In the letter he says:

"I was in the hands of a gang who were wreaking me and to whom I helplessly yielded. They bled me right and left; they persecuted me until life was a burden and I grew crazy of their persistent attacks on me. No human being with a heart in his breast and moral consciousness could tamely have stood it. There was no peace or comfort for me and last it came to be a question of suicide or flight, and I choose the latter."

Martin's household effects will be sold by the bailiff.

E. M. CHAMBERLAIN DEAD.

The Noted Labor Reformer and Temperance Advocate Passes Away.

BOSTON, Feb. 24.—E. M. Chamberlain, a noted labor reformer, woman suffragist and temperance advocate, and who was associated with Garrison and Phillips in the anti-slavery movement, is dead of grip at his home in Cambridge.

The deceased comes of a wealthy family, but was disinherited by his father on account of his political opinions.

At one time he was proprietor and editor of the "Echo," a journal devoted to the consideration of radical and economic questions.

In the early days of the Greenback movement he was nominated for Governor by the Greenback and Labor Reform parties.

Indianapolis Street Car Trouble.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 24.—The street car tie-up remains unchanged. But one attempt was made to run cars and while the car was surrounded by strikers President Frenzel telephoned for the police. Superintendent Colbert replied that he could give no assistance. The attempt was therefore abandoned and the car was left to the strikers who ran it back to the stable. Petitions bearing 10,000 signatures demanding President Frenzel's removal will go forward to the Chicago directors of the company. The company has applied for an injunction to restrain interference with the running of the cars.

For False Imprisonment.

SALEM, Ohio, Feb. 24.—James Canfield, the father of William Canfield, who was recently imprisoned on the charge of wrecking a train at East Palestine, Ohio, on August 3, has sued the Pinkton Detective Agency, of Pittsburg, and the Pennsylvania Railroad company for false arrest of his son. Mr. Canfield makes some startling allegations against the methods adopted by the detective agency in working up a case against his son.

Sure Dr. Crawford Has Committed Suicide.

NYACK, N. Y., Feb. 24.—It is now considered certain that Dr. Crawford has committed suicide by drowning. One of his shoes has been found a short distance from the river, two miles below Haverstraw. A careful search will be made for his body.

Continuing the Investigation.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—At the investigation regarding the burning of the steamer Abyssinia at Liverpool, several witnesses admitted that there had been smoking going on in the cotton compartment while the cotton crop was being stowed.

PERRY AS A LAWYER

He Examines the Witnesses Against Him.

BROUGHT INTO COURT AT LYONS

Charged With Trivial Offences So that He May be Held for Greater.

An Immense Crowd Followed the Express Robber to the Court in Order to Get a Glimpse of His Features, but He Kept His Face Covered With a Handkerchief—Express Messenger McInerney Recovering.

LYONS, N. Y., Feb. 24.—Perry, the noted American Express train robber, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Fries yesterday.

Deputy Sheriff Collins, who made the arrest after a terrible struggle with the desperado, left the jail with the prisoner chained to his right arm, and proceeded directly to Justice Fries' office, followed by a crowd of villagers anxious to get a look at the famous outlaw.

Perry held a handkerchief before his face during the trip, and the crowd were greatly disappointed on account of seeing nothing more than his eyes and forehead.

The idea in giving Perry a hearing was for the purpose of holding him on minor charges until Express Messenger Daniel McInerny will have recovered sufficiently to appear against him on the more serious charges of burglarizing an American Express car and assaulting and shooting the messenger of said car with intent to commit murder.

When Justice Fries' office was reached the street was jammed with spectators, and the deputy and his prisoner experienced great difficulty in reaching the office. Sentinels were placed on guard at the door to keep the mob back.

Perry stated that he did not want counsel, and the hearing was commenced with the reading of the complaint of the Central Hudson officials against the prisoner for discharging firearms and damaging one of the company's locomotives, to which Perry pleaded not guilty and waived examination. Attorney Dumwell acted the prisoner to examine witnesses and his request was granted.

Alexander McGillvary was the first witness examined. He stated that he was Sunday last the engineer in charge of Engine No. 511.

He told how Perry outgued them off from the engine at the point of a revolver and swore that the prisoner was the same man who stole the engine.

Michael J. Keone stated that he is employed by the American Express company at the transfer station of this village, and that on the morning in question he attempted to take hold of Perry near the waiting room door, but was repulsed at the point of a revolver.

He afterward took part in the chase. He positively identified Perry as the man who pointed the revolver at him.

Judge Carver held the prisoner in $3,000 bail. It is reported that he will be held for trial in this county for the attempted express railroad robbery and also for assaulting Messenger McInerney with intent to kill.

McInerney Recovering.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 24.—Daniel T. McInerney, the express messenger who was shot, is in a fair way of recovery, the wound in his thigh being the only serious one.

BASEBALL ASSIGNMENTS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—N. E. Young, secretary of the League, has sent out the following bulletin:

Contracts for 1892: With Brooklyn—John M. Ward, William Jones, Daniel Brouthers and C. P. Bailey; with Cincinnati—E. D. Burke; with St. Louis—John T. O'Brien.

William McGill has been assigned to the list of the Cincinnati club by the committee.

A special schedule meeting of the National League and American Association will be held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, on March 1.

Col. Rogers has called a meeting of the National Agreement Committee for the same day and place.

Sold Arsenic for Cooking Soda.

BANGOR, Me., Feb. 24.—Prof. Robinson of Bowdoin College has examined the box of "cooking soda," by the use of which some 28 persons were poisoned at Mount Chase last week, and declares that the substance is pure arsenic. The stuff was sold by a widow named Jarrett. She thought it was soda, but it now appears her husband, who died recently, used it for preserving poles.

Resumed the Investigation.

MONTREAL, Feb. 24.—The investigation of the scandals connected with the late Quebec Government has been resumed by the Royal Commission.

KILLED HIMSELF FOR A MAN.

Sensational Suicide of a Baltimore Doctor in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 24.—Dr. Charles T. Breedlove, of Baltimore, Md., committed suicide in his room at Hurst's Hotel at 5 o'clock in the morning, by firing a bullet from a 32 calibre revolver into his brain.

In the same room, and not ten feet from Dr. Breedlove, stood Isaac Judson, teacher in the High School of St. Louis, the man for whose love he committed the terrible deed. Breedlove reached this city last Monday, and was to leave during the day in company with Mr. Judson, but missed the train.

Judson returned to Breedlove's room and found a letter lying on the dressing table addressed to himself. He was in the act of reading it when he was startled by the report of a revolver and, looking up, saw Breedlove falling to the floor with the smoking revolver clutched in his right hand. He died almost instantly.

The letter, which was addressed to Judson, reveals a peculiar case of unnatural love between men. It is endearing in tone and suggestive in character, and refers to sinful actions on the part of the suicide and Judson.

He speaks of his love as being beyond his control, and says he finds it impossible to live without Judson, and rather than be separated from him he ends his life.

Breedlove was a practicing physician in Baltimore, and his parents live at Fort Smith, Ark.

At the instance of friends the body was removed from the morgue and will be shipped to Fort Smith for burial.

A locket suspended from the suicide's neck contained a picture of Mr. Judson.

A HUSBAND'S SACRIFICE.

Homer R. Baldwin Will Give His Skin to Save His Wife's Life.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Homer R. Baldwin, whose wife was frightfully injured in the New York Central Railroad collision at Hastings on Christmas Eve, is about to undergo a painful operation that his wife may be relieved from the agony she suffers.

Before the accident Mrs. Baldwin was a youthful and handsome woman, but now she lies in the Getty House at Yonkers crippled and frightfully disfigured. Her left arm has been amputated just above the wrist; the bones of the right hand protrude through the flesh; both ears are gone and her head, from the eyes to the base of the skull, is raw and blistered. Her right hand will have to be amputated, and it is probable that another operation will have to be performed on her left arm.

Mrs. Baldwin, by a miracle, saved her sight, but an operation will have to be performed to restore her eyelids to a proper condition. On her head the hair for a space of several inches in circumference has been burned away, and the skull, scorched and chalky in appearance, is laid bare to the sight.

The upper layer of bone is dead and will have to be scraped away, and on the inner layer a new integument will be grafted.

The skin for this purpose will be taken from Mr. Baldwin's arms. Dr. Schopen, who has attended Mrs. Baldwin since the accident, will perform the operation.

The only nervousness that Mr. Baldwin feels about the operation is that his wife will not survive. If she does it will be due to his bravery and love.

Terrorized by Italians.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The little village of Avendale, N. J., four miles from Newark, on the Newark branch of the Erie Railroad, is being terrorized by Italians. Scarcely a night passes that some depredation is not committed, and brutal fights are frequent. The Italians are employed in the brownstone quarries of Avondale. It has become dangerous for persons to be out of their houses after nightfall. As the township officials have taken no action toward bringing the Italians under subjugation, the citizens propose to form a law and order society and try to suppress the evil.

Dr. Parkhurst Before the Grand Jury.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Dr. Parkhurst who, in a recent address, charged the city officials with neglecting their official duties in the matter of suppressing crime, etc., has been before the grand jury, having been subpœnaed by the district attorney. What the reverend gentleman told the grand jury is a matter of surmise, as the session of that body was secret. It is believed, however, that he modified materially some of the accusations made against the mayor, district attorney and police officials.

To Increase Salaries of Life Savers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Mr. Dickerson, of Kentucky, has introduced in the House a resolution from the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, urging that Congress pass a measure for the increase of salary to the members of the life saving station crews of the United States.

Harry Altman Missing.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 24.—Harry Altman, manager of the St. Louis branch of the United Life Insurance Company, of New York, has been missing since last Thursday. As yet no examination of his books has been made, and it is not known whether he is short in his accounts or not.

New Jersey's Fair Appropriation.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 24.—The lower branch of the Legislature has passed the bill appropriating $50,000 more for the State's exhibit at the World's Fair. There was no debate. This makes $70,000 in all for the New Jersey exhibit.

For a Portrait of Mrs. Madison.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Mr. Voorhees has offered a resolution in the Senate appropriating $5,000 for the purchase of a portrait of the wife of President Madison, to be placed in the White House.

Congressman Moses, of Georgia, Varies the Monotony of the Session.

"If It Is a Crime to Be a Democrat, Then You Can Take Me Out and Hang Me Now"—A Cyclone of Groans and Hisses Followed This Outburst—The Episode Made Manifest the Final Determination of the People's Party to Form a Third Party and Nominate an Independent Presidential Candidate.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 24.—"If it is a crime to be a Democrat, then you can take me out and hang me now." Thus, with quivering frame, distended eyes, uplifted arm and clinched fist, Congressman Charles T. Moses, of the Fourth Georgia District, hurled defiance at the delegates to the Industrial Conference. A cyclone of groans and hisses followed.

"Hang me now," repeated Moses, in a voice that penetrated the din, and again there was a chorus of groans, in the midst of which, shaking with passion and excitement, the Georgia Congressman sank back into his seat.

In this exciting episode was made manifest the final determination of the delegates to declare in favor of the third party and an independent Presidential ticket. Moses reached the city at the head of four delegates from the Farmers' Alliance of his State, who had been designated to act by the State executive committee of the party. C. C. Post, the Alliance advocate, had preceded him with the same number of delegates, who had been chosen by the different districts.

Moses was avowedly in favor of framing a declaration of principles and submitting them for approval to the Democratic National Convention, opposing a third party ticket on the ground that it might result in the delivery of some of the Southern States to the Republicans. Post is an out and out third partyite.

The committee on credentials gave a night and half a day to the contested delegation, and finally decided to seat three of the Post and two of the Moses delegates. It was on this proposition that the fight occurred.

Outside of this episode the day was practically wasted. All that has so far been accomplished in twenty-one hours could have been done by a well-regulated assemblage in one hour. Business was continually interrupted with songs and storytelling.

There were twenty-two organizations represented by the 700 delegates when they gathered. Colonel L. L. Polk was made permanent chairman, after having once refused the gavel, and greeted with cries of "Our next President!"

Miss Frances Willard was literally carried to the platform and given a royal reception. John W. Hayes was elected permanent secretary. Warwick, of Virginia, a delegate from the Colored Men's Alliance, was elected assistant-secretary, but not without a good deal of opposition from Georgia and Alabama delegates, notwithstanding the conference had already informally declared in favor of no color line.

It took nearly two hours for the delegates to get together and appoint their representatives on the various committees, and when the list came to be read it was found that nearly a third of the entire convention had been made committeemen.

During the afternoon session, Wilkins, of Ohio, submitted a resolution demanding the passage of the bill for free and unlimited coinage of silver. Willits of Georgia, amid great cheering, said nine-tenths of the great industrial and agricultural classes were in favor of free and unlimited coinage of silver, and insisted that the proper place for such a demand was in the platform.

In the end the resolution went on the table, and after Sen. Weaver's son had done a whistling and banjo act, and Mrs. Nicholls, of Chicago had rendered a song that told how the gold and silver in the cellars of the White House was going to be cleared out when the people got to Washington, the convention adjourned until to-morrow morning.

The list of liquor-license applications disposed of by the Plainfield common council last night is as follows:

RETAIL LICENSE.

Charles Smith,	Lee & Scott,
Fred. Caspar,	Joseph T. Sullivan,
James Connealy,	Michael F. Watson.

Jacob Blimm,	John E. Beerbower,
John J. Goff,	Henry F. Windom.

WHOLESALE LICENSE GRANTED.

Frank Linke.

REFERRED BACK FOR CORRECTION.

Wallace V. Miller, James H. Force.

The lobby of the council chamber was thronged with men interested in the fate of the license applications. Most of these were of the license element. Within the chamber were a few such anti-license men as the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and the Rev. Cornelius Schenck, but the power of the temperance people was concentrated in the mass of petitions presented protesting against all license in general and in particular against the granting of any new applications, against the relicensing of those who had been convicted of violating the license laws, and against licensing proposed saloons in the neighborhood of the factories.

The city clerk was an hour or more reading the protests. They were from various of the religious bodies of the city, including the First Baptist, Park Avenue Baptist, First Presbyterian, Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, Trinity Reformed, Congregational and Unitarian churches, and Hope chapel, from the pastors of the city, and from other residents and citizens. Many prominent names were on the lists, which footed up a total of 946 signers.

An especially urgent appeal was from Mrs. N. E. Kimball, president of the Children's Home association, who was aptly referred to by councilman See in calling special attention to her petition as one who was eminently qualified through her work among the sufferers from strong drink to speak of the destitution and depravity caused by the rum curse. Mrs. Kimball was particularly opposed to opening a "fancy grocery" saloon on Park avenue where temptation would be thrown in the way of the wheelmen making their headquarters near by.

Councilman Marsh commented in a strong speech on the merits of the petition. He forcibly announced his determination to vote against all applications for license, and urged on his fellow-councilmen that no worse thing could be done to a manufacturing district than to establish a saloon in its midst. He was also outspoken against those who had been convicted of violations of the law. Such offenders—he said—had gone into their illicit business with their eyes open, after having agreed over their own signatures to the forfeiture of their licenses in case they were detected in illegal selling. Their violations had been deliberate; the only way to enforce the law was to enforce its penalties. Therefore he advocated the refusal of the applications of guilty ones seeking renewal.

Councilman Frazee was of the opinion that with the adoption of the new liquor ordinance all applications should be granted, so that everyone could start afresh. Then if anyone were detected in illegal work he for one would promptly vote for revocation of the offender's license.

Against the 946 protestants were arrayed 184 petitioners whose especial prayer was that Lee & Scott might be granted license. These petitioners were mostly fellow-workmen of the applicants.

After duly considering the protests and petitions that had been referred to them, the license committee reported back to the council the seventeen license applications. All of them were reported correct in form and in compliance with the ordinance, except that of James H. Force to keep a hotel at 7 North avenue and that of Wallace V. Miller to keep a wholesale place at 65 Park avenue. The committee said that these two petitions did not altogether comply with the ordinance, and they were unanimously referred back to the committee for correction.

Against the following applications councilmen Case and Marsh alone voted no, and the applications were granted by the vote of 8 to 2, councilman Ackerman being absent: John Rafferty, saloon, 29 Park avenue; Charles Smith, saloon, 2 and 4 West Front street; Fred Caspar, hotel with liquor privileges, 24 and 26 East Front street. For the hotel license alone, without bar, the vote for Caspar was unanimous.

The application of Charles Bock to keep a saloon at 15 and 17 East Second street, was rejected by a tie vote:

Aye—Councilmen Bird, Erickson, Frazee, Gallup, Weber—5.

No—Councilmen Case, Ginna, Johnston, Marsh, See—5.

For the application of James Connealy to keep a saloon at 34 Park avenue and that of Edward P. Thorn, saloon, 17 Park avenue, all voted aye except councilmen Case, Marsh and Weber, 7 to 3.

William H. Lee and Arthur Scott, who asked for a hotel and liquor license at Muhlenberg place and South Second street, had their hotel application granted, without bar privileges.

For hotel—Councilmen Bird, Erickson, Frazee, Gallup, Johnston, Weber—6.

Against hotel—Councilmen Case, Ginna, Marsh and See—4.

To grant liquor-selling privileges in the hotel councilman Frazee alone voted aye, against 9 noes. Councilman Case entered a most emphatic protest, as president of the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, against the licensing of this place.

The application of Jacob Blimm to keep a hotel, with bar privileges, at 17 and 19 Somerset street, was granted. For the hotel license all voted. Councilmen Case, Ginna and Marsh voted against the bar, 7 to 3.

John J. Goff barely squeezed through his application to keep a hotel at 54 West Third street. For the hotel part of the license all voted aye except councilman Erickson. For the liquor privileges the vote stood 6 to 4, councilmen Case, Erickson, Ginna and Marsh voting no. Another no would have lost the license.

Joseph T. Sullivan wanted a saloon at 66 West Third street. Councilmen Bird, Case, Erickson, Ginna, Marsh and See voted against him, and his application was denied, 4 to 6.

When Michael F. Watson's application to keep a saloon on Grant avenue near South Second street came up councilmen Erickson moved that it be not granted. Everybody voted not to grant except councilman Frazee, 1 to 9.

The application of James J. Day to keep a saloon at 97 West Third street was similarly treated, and defeated 1 to 9.

John E. Beerbower's application to keep a hotel, with liquor privileges, at the corner of Second street and Park avenue, was read, together with an earnest if ungrammatical letter from Jeanette Peterson, wife of one of the signers to the petition. Mrs. Peterson said that her husband Lewis was not a freeholder, but that she herself owned the property he claimed to own. Her prohibition friends—she said—had helped her to accumulate the property, and it did n't look very nice for her husband to sign such a petition in the name of her estate. Councilman Weber reported that John Goodwin, another of the signers, had expressed a desire to withdraw his name from the list. In view of these two difficulties, it was proposed to table the application. The motion to table was defeated by the vote of 3 to 7, councilmen Frazee, Gallup and Johnston alone voting aye. The petition for a hotel license was then granted unanimously, but on motion of councilman Erickson the petition for liquor-selling privileges was denied, on account of recent conviction for illegal selling, all voting no except councilman Frazee.

Henry F. Windom, at present bartender for John Schorb, but who has just leased the premises from the recently-convicted illegal seller, was denied by the vote of 8 to 2 his petition to continue the hotel with bar, at 11 East Front. Councilmen Frazee and Johnston were the only ones voting for him on either count.

Frank Linke's wholesale license at 43 West Front street was renewed by the vote of 7 to 3, councilmen Case, Ginna and Marsh voting no.

Members of the police force who were present at the meeting expressed to a PRESS reporter the opinion that it was not the best policy in the world to grant hotel privileges to an applicant whose liquor-license application was to be refused. "If they have the hotel"—the police said—"they'll sell anyhow, and it only makes more spying for us to do."

Wetumpka Knights of Honor Have a Night of Pleasure.

It was a very enjoyable leap year promenade concert and dance that was held in Wetumpka hall, last evening. It was under the auspices of Wetumpka Commandery, No. 34, Knights of Honor, and 250 were present. Music by Prof. Guttman's orchestra led the dancers.

The entertainment committee consisted of Sir Knight John H. VanMiddlesworth, chairman, and Sir Knights Frank P. Haffner, Alvah W. TenEyck, William N. Dunham, David K. Sutphen.

Other officers of the evening who worked faithfully and successfully for the pleasure of all, were: Floor commander—Sir Knight, John Fellows; assistant floor commander—Sir Knight, Louis I. VanAlystine; associate commanders—Sir Knights Charles E. Bunk, Louis H. Brown and John Y. Barrett; reception committee—Sir Knight, J. C. Pierson, jr., chairman, and Sir Knights C. J. Feytel, C. Dickinson, Guillermo Thorn and H. L. Neimeyer.

Local Legislators After Those of the State.

Councilman Frazee is on the lookout for the city's interests. He presented to the common council last night a copy of the bill now pending in the Legislature taking away the right of property owners to prevent a street railway from passing their property without their consent, and with it offered a resolution expressing in emphatic terms the disapproval of the Plainfield common council, representing the community at large, of such a bill. The matter was referred to the committee on laws and ordinances.

CONDUCTOR CHAPMAN'S CHORUS

And Some of the Grandest Soloists in the Country, Make Famous the Second Private Subscription Concert of the Melopoia.

There never sang in this city sweeter and grander voices than those of Mme. Blauvelt and Signor Galassi; there is never heard in any place a chorus of finer shading and delightful effects than the Melopoia under William R. Chapman. All that and more as creditable, is the reason the second private subscription concert in the Casino of the Union County Country club last evening, was such an unqualified and unexcelled success and was so thoroughly pleasurable to every individual in the crowded auditorium.

The concerts of the Melopoia come high to the subscribers, but they have the costliest and best of talent so the price is never considered. Galassi, last evening, was accorded a perfect ovation. His rendition of the song of the Toreador from Carmen, was received with rapturous applause and given a recall. At the close of his singing of Wagner's "Evening Star", from Tannhauser, cheers rose above even the fierce applause. He was compelled to repeat it whereupon Emile Levy, the accompanist, secured an opportunity to retrieve himself as, at first, Galassi's good natured and laudable attempt to sing the whole opera found Mr. Levy without sufficient notes.

Modest, charming, sweet-voiced Mme. Lillian Blauvelt, also achieved a complete success. Her style is the "bravura", and she sings most dramatically with high notes notably and unusually pure and ringing. A gem of the evening in the way of good composition, was Mr. Chapman's Sanctus. Mme. Blauvelt sang the incidental solo and it was all well-rendered though a would-have-been effective rest was marred by a careless or worthless singer among the bases.

Adolph Hartdegen's 'cello solos were, of course, perfect and pleasing beyond words to express, and the work of the Rubinstein trio was unblemished and far beyond like performances of any instrumental trios that have ever favored this city—the playing of the pianist, W. Ward Stephens, who is not a stranger here, being worthy of special mention.

Of the singing of the chorus, there cannot be said a syllable too much of praise. Brahms's "Lullaby" was bewitchingly effective; Alfred Allen's glee of the "Piper's Son" was particularly bright and received an encore; "Wynken, Blynken and Nod", by Ethelbert Nevin, was remarkably taking; and "Under Blossoming Branches", with an incidental solo by Elmer E. Runyon, was greatly appreciated. The evening's closing number from Elijah, "Thanks be to God", was well sung but needed orchestral accompaniment to bring out the impressive features that are its glory.

HYMENEAL.

Snow—Beal.

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Garthwaite Reynolds Beal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Beal of Netherwood, to William Gage Snow, son of Mrs. George Snow of Boston, took place in the pretty little Church of Our Saviour at Netherwood at 7 last evening. The wedding was a very charming one. The form used was Episcopalian, and the officiating clergyman was the Rev. Stephen P. Simpson, rector of the church.

The bride entered the church on her father's arm, preceded by her maid of honor and the four ushers. Her natural grace and attractiveness were heightened by her rich wedding costume of white silk and chiffon, with pearl pendant and other ornaments. She carried a white-bound prayer-book.

The maid of honor, Miss Agnes Winifred Chamberlain of Elizabeth, wore a costume of pale-blue faille, with demi-train. Her favor was a blue-and-white enamel pin, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The best man was Thad Beal, a cousin of the bride, and the ushers were Reynolds Beal, another cousin, James C. Sharp, Warren S. Burt and Albert T. Hinrichs, all of whom wore favors of moonstones set in gold pins.

The church was daintily decorated with potted plants, palms and white flowers. After the ceremony a house reception was held, limited to the immediate family. The invited guests at the wedding included many society people from New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Plainfield, Netherwood and Newark.

The wedding journey of the happy young people will be to the South. Their future home is at Watertown, a suburb of Boston.

Mr. Rutan Denies He's Crazy.

To THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I desire to contradict the eroneous statement recently published in the paper which stated that I had been sent to the Morristown asylum. It was stated most unauthoritively and is only another specimen of the manner at which they jump at conclusions. THEO. RUTAN.

Heavy License Fees for Traveling Merchants.

Since corporation counsel Marsh had reported in response to the council's query that the city could not exempt its taxpaying auctioneers from paying a license fee that was charged against itinerant auctioneers coming to town, the common council last night adopted the ordinance fixing the license fee on all auctioneers at $25 a year. The ordinance was said to be approved by all the resident auctioneers, who think they see in it protection against traveling cheap-Johns. Councilmen Case and Frazee voted against the ordinance, which was adopted on second reading and ordered engrossed and advertised preparatory to third reading.

An ordinance to license hawkers and peddlers was unanimously adopted on second reading and ordered engrossed and advertised. It was introduced on the behalf of the local merchants, and fixes a special tax of $10 on foot peddlers, $15 on handcart hawkers, and $25 on those using a horse and wagon to peddle their goods, in addition to a regular license fee of $5.

Pope Stopped Nevins and Now the Law Stops Pope.

The bill published in THE PRESS in full a few weeks ago, giving street railway companies who have franchises the right to put up poles and string wires for the trolley system no matter how many obstructionists object, passed the house of legislature at Trenton, yesterday, by an almost unanimous vote.

The purpose of the bill is to offset the recent decision of the Supreme court in which it was held that local governing bodies had no power to authorize the planting of poles or the stringing of wires in the public streets. It applies to the road President Nevins of the Plainfield company was about to construct when stopped by Mr. Pope.

They Were Licensed Under the 12 O'clock Ordinance.

Captain Grant of the police force notified the proprietors of all saloons and barrooms to-day that according to the recently enacted city ordinance they must close this evening and hereafter at 11 o'clock. But the opinion of THE PRESS is that the ordinance does n't require anything of the sort on the part of those Captain Grant has notified.

Read the section of the new ordinance that covers the point. It says:

Sec. 13. No person or persons licensed under this ordinance, shall between the hours of 11 at night and 6 in the morning, sell or offer, etc.

Those at present engaged in the business of selling liquor in this city, were not licensed under that ordinance.

A Story of the Sea.

Capt. George D. Morrison will give a popular talk about "The Sea", at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-morrow evening. A voyage from New York to Java and the Phillipine Islands will be described. The admission will be free, and all men are invited. A very fine miniature ship will be on exhibition during the evening.

The talk given under the auspices of the Young Men's Auxiliary of the association last evening was especially adaptad to boys, and was heartily appreciated by them.

Here's a Hustler!

Thomas Brady who is constructing a big ice and coal plant in this city, as told of exclusively in THE PRESS of yesterday, is a hustler the like of which Plainfield has not seen in years and has very much needed.

He has 100 car loads of Lake Hopatcong ice already here and 100 more will arrive to-day. All hands will work all night unloading it so that the empty cars can go back to-morrow morning.

THE children's health must not be neglected. Cold in the head causes catarrh. Ely's Cream Balm cures at once. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into the nostrils. The worst cases yielding to it. Price 50c.

ONE of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and, much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm, and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

Pastor Warnick Surprised.

The Rev. F. G. Warnick, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, was agreeably "surprised" last evening by receiving a call from about one hundred of his parishioners at his residence on Liberty street, who showered upon him innumerable gifts and congratulations. The Rev. William A. Alexander, pastor of Bethel chapel, with Mrs. Alexander, were among the party. This was their first appearance among the Mt. Olive congregation, who most cordially received them. The "surprisers" met at the residence of Mrs. William Doyle, 72 West Fourth street, and proceeded from thence to the residence of the pastor. An adjournment was subsequently made to the church edifice, where chocolate and cake in abundance were served. The whole affair was under the supervision of Mrs. William Mayhew, who deserves praise for the success of the affair.

A Brakeman Saves a Life.

The presence of mind of the rear brakeman on Phil Backer's train, saved the life of little Jimmie Moore, Monday night. The train, which leaves New York at 11:30 p. m., arrived at Fanwood on time. Hardly had it stopped when a mixed train drawn by engine 413 moving in the same direction, came speeding down the grade. Little Jimmie had alighted from the passenger train and was about to cross the freight track, when quick as a flash and with no thought of his own danger, the rear brakeman of the passenger train sprang forward, seized the boy and jumped back on the train.

This is additional evidence of the fact that the traveling public are absolutely safe in the hands of conductor Backer and his crew.

Shall the Firemen Elect the Chief.

A resolution presented by Mr. Frazee and unanimously adopted by the common council last evening refers to the committee on fire and buildings the question of future elections of chief and assistant engineers. The committee is instructed to consider the advisability of having these officials chosen in future by vote of the fire department members. At present the mayor appoints.

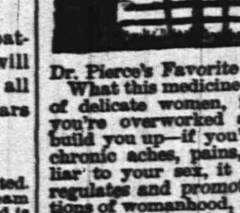
Sunday Holidays for Policemen.

For years the Plainfield policemen have been in the habit of working 7 days a week and 365 days a year. Now councilman Marsh arises as the champion of Sunday rest. He thinks that each policeman ought to have at least one Sunday off duty each month. The other councilmen agreed with him when he suggested the thing and unanimously recommended that the police board arrange the matter.

Another Fire-Alarm Box Wanted.

The residents of the Scott Press Works neighborhood have petitioned the common council for a fire-alarm box at Franklin Place and East Fifth street, as the box in the Scott works is a private one whose use for fires outside the works is said to have been forbidden. The matter has been referred to the committee on fire and buildings.

—A devotional meeting will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms to-morrow afternoon at 3:30.



Well, instead of sick and suffering; healthy and vigorous, instead of worn-out and weak; bright eyes, clear skin, rosy cheeks — you wouldn't think it was the same woman, and it's all due to the use of a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

What this medicine has done for thousands of delicate women, it will do for you. If you're overworked and debilitated, it will build you up—if you're borne down with the chronic aches, pains, and weaknesses peculiar to your sex, it relieves and cures. It regulates and promotes all the proper functions of womanhood, invigorates the system, purifies the blood, improves digestion, and restores health, flesh, and strength.

For all the painful irregularities and diseases of women—periodical pains, prolapsus and other displacements, bearing-down sensations, and "female complaints" and weaknesses, it's the only remedy so effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

SUMMER RESORT FOR THE Y. M. C. A.

A Home by the Sea Presented to Them by a New Jersey Land Company.

The Young Men's Christian Associations of the State of New Jersey are in luck. A number of New Jersey capitalists have banded themselves together, organized a stock company, and purchased a large tract of land just north of Asbury Park, fronting on picturesque Deal Lake. Of this tract a plot of ten acres has been presented to the State Young Men's Christian Associations, and it has been accepted by the State committee. The company also propose to erect for them a large building, to be used as a training school, similar to the institution conducted by Mr. Moody at Northfield, Mass. This will be fitted out with a fully equipped gymnasium and bowling alley and will be utilized as a sort of general assembly of the State associations.

The company will also set apart a portion of the grounds for camping purposes and will make a bicycle track and a base-ball field. The grounds will be handsomely arranged and graded, and all the expense will be borne by the company.

This will be made a most desirable resort during the summer months for the young men connected with the associations. The sale of liquor and similar objectionable things will be restricted, and the place will be conducted in a manner befitting the purposes for which it is established. During the summer season young men can fold up their tents and hie themselves to this garden of pleasure, stage out their stamping grounds, and for weeks and months if desired, recreate at a nominal cost, enjoying, besides those pastimes already mentioned, delightful boating, fishing, bathing, etc. As soon as the weather permits, preparations for clearing and grading the tract will be begun and the building erected.

I have found out a gift for my fair. It is not a ring of gold, nor flowers for her hair, nor pearls for her white neck, but Salvation Oil for her sore throat. She's a singing bird.

EARLY FASHIONS.

They Are Seen Already in the Shop Windows.

The Newest Styles in Ginghams—Stripes Are to Be Worn in Everything—Winter Hats Will Not Be Soon Discarded.

[COPYRIGHT, 1892.]

Have you seen the early spring fashions? They are displayed already in the shop windows, and they are seen in all the stores as you walk up and down Broadway or any of the large shopping thoroughfares.

With frost in the ground and with occasional falls of snow and wintry winds blowing, one is treated to a sight of some of the prettiest spring goods that could possibly be imagined.

It is very much like looking in a hothouse window to stand upon a wintry sidewalk and to gaze through the panes at the sateens, the challies, the muslins and the cambrics which are now being displayed so lavishly everywhere. It is as if one were permitted to take a glimpse of rare exotics growing luxuriously under the panes of glass, while the poor looker-on stands out in the cold and admires the rare blooms.

Almost everything you see is in stripes. And such very pretty stripes! They are broad and some of them are exquisitely shaded, beginning at the lighter shades and going all the way down to the deeper tones—all in the same stripe. Others are of a color contrasting with the groundwork of the material and making such harmony that it is as good as gazing upon an oil painting just to look upon them.

Real artists must have been at work designing such lovely things, and now that they have finished their work and are perhaps gazing upon it from the shop windows along with the other passers-by, they must surely be pleased with their work, and they cannot help being delighted with the notes of admiration which fall from the lips of the fair ones who stop to make a choice of the pretty materials.

A lovely pink gingham has stripes which are at least three inches broad. The stripes shade from almost white to the deepest pink. A beautiful green gingham has pink stripes. The green is rather deep in tone and the pink is fair, as if some delicate pink blossoms had sprung from out a bed of moss.

A soft gray background has broad stripes of black and steel color. The stripes are each an inch wide and are placed both together, and then there is a broad band of the plain, soft, delicate gray.

These striped goods are best left untrimmed with any other than their own pretty patterns, and the plainer they are made the more becoming they are. Bias bands, ruffles and tucks seldom look well upon striped goods, and the material should be put together in a fashionable way and then left unadorned unless one chooses to trim it with lace and ribbons.

Striped goods are not economical to make up. The stripes must be nicely matched in the waist, and this often causes the material to be cut to poor advantage. But then the goods are so pretty that one can afford to waste an extra yard in the cutting. For those who are afflicted with too much avoirdupois there can nearly always be found the plain goods of the same shade as the ground work of the materials, and this will do for a waist which may then have lapels, collar and cuffs of the other.

If you are a bargain hunter, you are taking great delight now in the reductions in the winter goods. A counterfull of woolen material of a very good quality was ticketed with a card which read: "Reduced to five cents a yard."

The material was, of course, thin and perhaps a trifle on the order of what the old ladies call "sleezy," but it was as good as that which sells for 25 cents a yard in the fall of the year, and such goods will make up into very pretty morning gowns for the house, and will also, if judiciously treated, do duty as picnic and excursion dresses.

Furs have come down at least 10 per cent. on the fall prices, and very often one can get a real bargain at almost half price. It is the time, too, to buy underwear. Beautiful woolen undergarments that sold for $2 in the fall are now marked down to $1.25, and so on through the whole catalogue of wearing apparel. Dry-goods men do not care to carry over stock from one year to another, and they have not the facilities for storing away great quantities of furs and woolen goods where they will be out of reach of the corrupting qualities of dust and moth.

By all means, do your next winter's buying now if you can afford it, for you save at least a third on the grand total.

Bargains in Christmas presents, too (but speak it softly), are to be found, and if you care to take time very much by the forelock you can get Jimmy a new book, Kittie a doll, Aunt Susie a workbasket and Uncle Tom a smoking jacket at a bargain.

Bonbonnieres, sweetmeat boxes and all sorts of little fancy things can be picked up for a song of sixpence.

But maybe you are not a bargain hunter, and if so you do not care anything at all about buying things just because they are cheap in the hope that they will "come in good some time."

Winter hats are to be worn way into the lap of spring—so we are told, but do not believe it, unless you are willing to set the style yourself by wearing your fur toque when the spring sunshine is pouring down upon your head.

It is all very well to talk about wearing the season's fashions until late in the year. But it is an entirely different thing to do so. People are very fond of novelties and they are anxious to change from the old to the new. They like to get out of the winter into the spring, and then they are anxious to change to midsummer styles. In the summer they long for the becoming furs which designate the fall and autumn fashions, and then the same old story begins again, and people are the same all the world over.

The newest styles of hair dressing are a little less elaborate than they were in the winter, and they are so easy to do at home that the hairdressers are quite discouraged.

A woman with a proper regard for her "crowning glory" waves her hair all over the front and sides of her head. Then she braids it from the middle, back of her head, and, tying a pretty fresh ribbon around the braid, she doubles it up in under until it hugs the back of her head and neck. Then she sticks several daggers, arrows and several other kinds of fancy pins through it, and then, arranging her bang becomingly, she sticks in two or three more fancy pins near the top of her head and sallies forth from her dressing room, happy in the thought that she has done her own hairdressing right up in the latest style and that she hasn't had to pay a hairdresser.

How do the hairdressers like it? They do not like it at all. They say that it is too bad, and they are piling up false hair upon the heads of the fancy figures in their windows, hoping to incite the fair passers-by to come in and have their hair dressed likewise.

"It cost me only $7," said a woman, patting lovingly and admiringly a long white eiderdown cloak which she was wearing.

"Then you must have had made it yourself," remarked a friend.

"Yes, I bought a pattern which told me how much goods to get. Then I laid the goods and cut out the cloak in the simplest possible way. I lined it with white satin, trimmed it with this shaggy, white fur, and, as you see, I have a cloak which is very pretty and which cost, as I said, only $7."

Two very neat house dresses were shown me last week just before they were sent home. They were for two young women who were in the habit of giving afternoon chocolates instead of afternoon teas. One of these dresses was a combination of deep red velvet and old rose satin. It was made in very simple style and could not escape being admired, for the two shades harmonized so exquisitely. The other was of two shades of green. The waist was braided, and straps came over the shoulders as if they were suspenders. The skirt was plain, with a deep band of dark green velvet around the bottom of it.

Last summer there was at Lenox a daring society woman who wore real suspenders with a little silk shirt and a plain skirt. It was a very bold thing to do, because suspenders are the most essentially mannish things in a man's wardrobe.

The woman was pretty, and so carried off the suspenders nicely. They were exactly like a man's and were fitted out with little clasps and button holes and all that sort of thing in precisely the same way that a man wears his.

The afternoon gown had suspenders, but they were womanly suspenders, so to speak, and did not make the wearer look mannish.

A Marshal's Retort.

The marshal de Bassompierre was employed by Henry IV. on several embassies. He once told the king that when he went as ambassador to Spain he rode into Madrid on the most beautiful mule he had ever seen, which had been sent by the Spanish monarch for his special use.

"Ha, ha, what a comical sight," laughed out the boisterous king; "an ass upon a mule!"

"Yes, sire," said Bassompierre, coolly, "I represented your majesty."—All the Year Round.

Wise Beyond Her Years.

Flossie is six years old. "Mamma," she asked one day, "if I get married will I have to have a husband like pa?"

"Yes," replied the mother, with an amused smile.

"And if I don't get married will I have to be an old maid like Aunt Jane?"

"Yes."

"Mamma"—after a pause—"it's a tough world for us women, ain't it?"—Demorest's Monthly.

An Inducement.

Ruralistic Customer—How does it look on me?

Dealer (in hollow whisper)—Mein frent, haf you an enemy?

Ruralistic Customer (amused)—You bet I have, that Si Perkins—

Dealer (in still more hollow whisper)—You schoost puy dot clodings, unt vear it so your enemy vill see it, unt he vos of envy die right off.—Life.

How About the Cabbage Crop?

Smith—There is one very strange thing about you.

Brown—What is it?

"You are a wholesale cigar manufacturer, and yet you never take the slightest interest in the tobacco crop."

"As a cigar manufacturer, what have I got to do with the tobacco crop?"—Texas Siftings.

An Even Thing.

De Smythe (at the boarding-house table)—I ordered dinner an hour ago and no sign of it yet. I wonder what time it will be when I have swallowed it?

Bjones (old boarder)—Not so very late. You see, you make up for the length of the wait by the shortness of the eat.—Judge.

Strictly Business.

Operatic Manager—I can't afford to pay you over seventeen dollars a week and expenses, and you must permit me to announce you as receiving one thousand dollars a night.

Madame Highnote—Make it twenty, and you may announce me at two thousand dollars a night.—Puck.

ALARMING STATE OF AFFAIRS.

The Scissors—Now what's the matter with you that you're looking so alarmed?

The Pincushion—Do you know, I've swallowed a pin!—St. Nicholas.

A Mean Trick.

"I can't pay this bill, doctor. It's exorbitant. I'm no better than I was, either."

"That's because you didn't take my advice."

"Ah—well—of course if I didn't take it I don't owe you for it. Thanks. Good morning."—Life.

Wasn't Appreciated.

"Shall we marry, darling, or shall we not?" was the short and witty line an ardent lover dispatched to the idol of his heart.

But where the strangeness of the matter comes in, the girl replied: "I shall not! You can do as you please."—Chicago Ledger.

Made a Note of It.

Smith—Have you forgotten that twenty-five dollars I loaned you, Brown?

Brown—No indeed; I've made a note of it.

Smith—Well, if you cannot give me the cash I'll take the note.—Texas Siftings.

True Consolation.

How sweet the uses of philosophy!
By which one is assured, in times adverse,
That howsoever wretched things may be,
There'll doubtless come a time when they'll be worse.
—Harper's Bazar.

A Dizzy Bonnet.

Husband—Twenty-five dollars for the trimmings on a bonnet!

Wife—Yes, and only very plain trimmings at that.

Husband—Plain? Why, I could get a beautiful case of delirium trimmins for twenty-five dollars!—Texas Siftings.

The Real Reason.

"How on earth can Hardy stand the strain of nursing that old uncle of his as he does? He must have wonderful will power, mustn't he?"

"His uncle has that."—Life.

Improved Her Opportunities.

"You have no idea what fools men are!"

"O, yes—indeed I have! You don't suppose I've been to a select boarding-school for nothing, do you?"—Life.

Dubious.

"I think I'll let my beard grow for a week," said Chappie.

"Do you think it will?" asked Ethel.—Judge.

Strange They Differ!

In the tastes of Chicago and Boston
A mighty wide gulf intervenes;
Though one of them furnishes pork,
The other one furnishes beans.

THE MITCHELL TRIAL

Miss Lillie Johnson on the Stand at Memphis.

OTHER WITNESSES TESTIFY.

Letter from Miss Mitchell to Freda Ward Put in Evidence.

The Intended Elopement of the Two Girls—Miss Johnson Testifies that She Was Friendly to All Parties—She Says She Did Not Witness the Cutting—Alice Refused to Wipe the Blood from Her Face and Hands Because it Was Her Loved Freda's.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 25.—The Criminal Court room was jammed to hear the continuation of the testimony in the Mitchell-Johnson-Ward case. Miss Johnson was quite ill when taken back to jail. Yesterday she had recovered, and during the session assumed her usual manner.

G. W. Lyles testified that he saw Miss Mitchell jump into the buggy after killing Miss Ward and grab the reins, and then heard some one in the buggy say, "Drive fast." Could not tell which one of the girls used the language.

Miss Catharine Parnell testified she was with the Misses Ward at the time of the killing and cried out: "Don't let her kill my friend!" She also identified and read a letter from Miss Freda Ward to Allie Mitchell as follows:

DEAR ALLIE—I love you now and always will; but I have been forbidden not to speak to you, and I have to obey. You say I am as much to blame as you are. If I have done you any harm, or caused you any trouble, I humbly beg your forgiveness. Please don't let any one know I wrote this. No one knows about that last summer business except our family; that is unless you have told some one. We go back to Gold Dust this evening.

The escapade referred to was the intended elopement of deceased and Allie Mitchell last summer.

J. W. Williams testified he saw Allie Mitchell get out of the buggy and run down the hill. He heard the scuffle and ran down, meeting Miss Mitchell as she came back over the hill. He saw her jump into the buggy and drive off rapidly, and heard her say, "I have done it."

Miss Johnson, in her own behalf, testified to being friendly to all parties; that it had been her custom for a long time to go driving with Allie Mitchell; that on the day of the homicide Allie came by and called to her to go driving; that she went with her; that when they observed the Ward girls on the street Allie drove after them; that she said to Allie, "Let's not follow them, as they will think we want to speak to them."

"Allie said: 'I will follow them to the postoffice.' We were getting out of the buggy at the Custom House when the Ward girls passed us going down to the boat. Allie said she must see Freda once more and followed them, I thought, to kiss her goodby. I followed after with my little 6-year-old nephew with me. I did not see the cutting, and when she came running back up the hill I saw blood on her and said: 'What has happened to you?' I thought she was cut. She jumped in the buggy before I did, and I said to her: 'Drive straight home and tell your mother what you have done.' She asked me if there was blood on her face. I said: 'Yes, wipe it off.' She said: 'No, it is Freda's blood; let it alone. I love her so.'"

WILL BE BLACKLISTED.

Miners Incur the Employers' Displeasure by Demanding Back Wages.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 25.—The miners at Elk Hill Colliery refused to accept part payment of January wages, and demanded the amounts due them up to February 15.

The company refused their demand and told the men to remove their tools from the mine, after which they would receive their pay and then be blacklisted to other coal companies.

Nearly fifty men come under the order and they will lay their case before the United Mine Workers' Association to which they are attached.

Claims Conspiracy Against His Invention.

BOSTON, Feb. 25.—In the Fifth Session of the Superior Court Nathaniel Hill, of Lowell, has brought suit against the Tremont and Suffolk mills for $50,000 damages. The plaintiff alleges that defendant and other mill companies of Lowell have conspired to obtain possession of a plan invented by him for the main driving wheel for mills, the use of which does away with gears and toothed wheels. The defendant says the plaintiff's allegations are absurd, and that no such combination of mill-owners exists.

Used the Mails for Fraud.

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 25.—W. H. Field who constitutes the "Durham Manufacturing Company, of Durham, Me.," is under arrest for using the mails for fraudulent purposes. He advertised to teach people to do gold plating, offering to pay them $18 a week when proficient. He received a deposit as a guarantee of good faith, but failed to carry out his agreements.

PERRY WILL BE CHAINED.

It is Thought That the Man Who Identified Him Was Not His Father.

LYONS, N. Y., Feb. 25.—Oliver Curtis Perry, the train robber, was yesterday held for the grand jury in $3,000 bail. A commercial traveler from Stillwater, Minn., says he has recognized in Perry a vicious prisoner who was in the Stillwater Penitentiary two years ago, and who escoped in woman's clothing.

Perry has been plotting to escape from the jail. He was seen to pass a paper to his father through his cell door and the old man was searched by the jailer. The paper was found to contain an accurate diagram of the jail and the size of a key wanted, under which was written: "Make wooden key about this size." Mr. Perry was given to understand that he can hereafter converse with his son only in the presence of an armed guard and at a distance from the cell door.

Some believe that the man who is passing as Perry's father is not his parent, but an accomplice. A satchel belonging to the desperado was taken from the father in Syracuse. It was found to contain a kit of fine tools, a bottle of alcohol in which was a human ear that the robber alleges that he cut from the head of a negro in Arizona, and two bars of gold, evidently battered jewelry.

Perry will be chained to the floor of the jail. The Wayne county authorities never had a prisoner who gave them so much uneasiness as this desperado from the wild West.

DROUGHT IN ARIZONA.

Great Losses on the Cattle Ranges—Hardly Any Rain for a Year.

BENSON, Ari., Feb. 25.—The people of this region are anxiously watching the weather. The failure of rain for the next three weeks will be a serious blow to the cattle interests in Arizona.

The past year has been very dry up to within the last three weeks. Practically no rain has fallen for nearly a year, and the losses of cattle throughout the Territory are already larger than for seven years.

Joseph Land, cattle inspector for the Benson and Pantano districts, estimates the losses along the San Pedro above Benson at twelve per cent., and on the lower San Pedro fifty per cent. up to the present time.

New grasses have been started by recent showers, and if the rain falls during the next three weeks to aid it, all will be well. If not, the grasses will die and probably very few cows and calves on the ranges will survive the summer. Steers are hardier and will not suffer so much.

ALLIANCE PLATFORM.

Money of the Capitalists to be Restored to the People.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 25.—The platform formulated at the Industrial Conference demands a currency founded on government credit, together with a sub-treasury scheme.

Free coinage of silver and a circulating medium of not less than $50 per capita forms another plank.

A graduated income tax to keep the money in the hands of the people.

The prohibition of alien ownership of land and a government postal savings bank.

The forfeiture of excess lands held by railroads and other corporations.

The federal ownership of railways.

The making up of differences to soldiers during the war of what they received and the price of gold at that time.

M. Rouvier Fails.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—M. Rouvier has informed President Carnot that he has failed in efforts to form a Cabinet. The President has taken no further step, but will, it is believed, endeavor to stimulate M. Rouvier to farther effort. The prolongation of the crisis is causing serious anxiety in business circles, and apprehension as to the future. President Carnot is most anxious to end the suspense, and, it is said, has hardly slept or rested for three days and nights.

Warrant for a Postmaster's Arrest.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 25.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Postmaster N. N. Lampson of Southington, Conn., on the charge of opening a letter addressed to Napoleon Lucas, the Connecticut agent of the Cincinnati Safe & Lock Company on Nov. 13. Mr. Lampson admitted opening the letter, but claims that it was accidental.

Carlisle Indian School.

CARLISLE, Pa., Feb. 25.—The thirteenth anniversary of the establishment of the Carlisle Indian Industrial School is being celebrated at the institution in the presence of a large number of visitors interested in the social improvement of the Indian race. This is the fourth graduating class.

A Monument to Lowell Proposed.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The "Times" publishes a letter from Leslie Stephen, M. A., the well-known author and journalist who, in the communication referred to, proposes that a sum be raised for the purpose of erecting a monument, in London or elsewhere, to the late James Russell Lowell.

THIRTEEN ARE DEAD

Terrible Accident in Cleckenham, England.

TWELVE SERIOUSLY INJURED.

An Enormous Chimney Falls and Crushes Mills Like Eggshells

All the Dead and Injured Have Been Removed—Shrieks of Women and Shouts of Men Heard Above the Din of the Falling Mass—Many of the People Prisoners in the Demolished Mills and Had to be Rescued by Means of Ladders and Fire Escapes—A Pathetic Incident.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The immense chimney of Thornton's mills, located at Cleckenham, Yorkshire, fell yesterday. The chimney was 180 feet high, and almost completely demolished the mills.

Thirteen persons were killed outright and twelve were seriously injured.

The dead and injured have all been removed from the ruins.

The survivors say that they heard a terrible, rumbling sound, which seemed to come from the chimney. The great stack quivered and swayed, and then toppled over from the top, at first almost keeping the chimney form and then bursting into an avalanche of brick and mortar and dust, which fell with terrific force upon the mills.

All the employes heard the warning sound, and although they did not know what was the matter, they stopped work immediately, and many made a rush for the exits.

Then came the vast mass of material, crushing the mills like an eggshell, and everything was hidden by the cloud of dust that arose, dense and suffocating, from where the chimney and factory had stood.

The shrieks of women and cries of men could be heard by those who rushed to the scene, and here and there some wounded person made an appearance, with halting step seeking to escape from the scene of the fatality.

Women dashed forth with dishevelled hair, some of them white and silent, others uttering cries of terror and of pain.

A strong man, with arm helpless and broken, crawled forth. "There are two score buried there," he cried. "Dig quickly, if you wish to save any of them." Then he rose and started for home.

The rescuers went to work with a will.

It was found, as the cloud of dust cleared away, that portions of the mills remained standing, but that the occupants could not escape except by the windows, other means of exit having been cut off.

Ladders and fire-escapes were raised and the employes were helped to the ground.

It was dangerous work, for the patches of wall seemed to reel and shake and threatened every moment to fall beneath the weight of the rescuers and rescued.

One poor widow woman stood at a window, while her little children, four in number, and not one of them over eight years of age, were in the crowd below, looking up at their mother and crying as if their hearts would break. She was safely carried down.

Apparently miraculous was the experience of the men who had been at work repairing the chimney. Only a few minutes before the disaster they desisted from work for lack of material and left the chimney just before the catastrophe.

An investigation is to be held as to the cause of the accident. It is thought that the foundation of the chimney was not sufficiently strong, and the structure gradually settled out of plumb, until the fall was inevitable.

It is also said that misgivings as to the security of the chimney have been entertained for some time, but that no steps had been taken to look out for the safety of the employes.

IMITATED THE SCHNEIDERS.

The Kaiser is Anxious That the Two Murderers Should be Convicted.

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—The Kaiser has taken personal notice of the horrible developments at Madgeburg, and has ordered the Minister of Justice to use the utmost diligence in ferreting out the crimes charged to Fitz Erbe and the woman Dorothy Buntrock.

It is now said that the pair were led into their practice of enticing and murdering servant girls by the first revelations of the crimes of Schneider and his wife near Vienna.

Erbe and Buntrock followed the same course as the Schneiders, the woman enticing the girls to a lonely spot in the woods by the promise of taking them to a good situation and Erbe then strangled the victims, whose clothing and money were seized by the wretches. It does not appear that Erbe abused the bodies as Schneider did.

The woman having confessed, the conviction and execution of the pair is certain. Two victims are known, Emma Kasten and Dora Klages. It is believed that there were other victims.

THE REAL REASON.

Why Lady Blandford Applied for Increased Alimony.

PRESENT DUCHESS IS JEALOUS.

Society and the Queen on the Side of the Former Duchess of Marlborough.

Only Through Great Pressure Was the Duke's Present Wife Permitted to be Presented to the Queen on Her Marriage—Not Welcome at the Home of the Prince of Wales, Who Has a Good Memory for Any Slight Put Upon Him.

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The real reason for the dispute about the Marquis of Blandford's allowance from the Duke of Marlborough, his father, in which the latter was victorious, lies in the jealousy which has always existed between Lady Blandford, the Duke's former wife, and the Duchess of Marlborough nee Mrs. Hamersley.

Lady Blandford is persona grata with the Queen, and society was also on her side when she divorced her husband, although unwillingly, after writing most pathetic letters offering to condone everything for her children's sake.

Since then she has openly regretted that she did not suffer in silence, for the children's position naturally is affected by the divorce. But on the other hand the Duchess of Marlborough was never cordially received, and only through great pressure the Queen allowed her to be presented on her marriage.

Nor are they welcomed at Marlborough House, for the Prince of Wales has a fierce memory for any slight to himself or any one he favors. He has never forgiven the Duke for loving Lady Aylesford, a friend of his, who is now alone and almost starving in Paris. He stated openly that it is entirely the Duchess' fault that the Duke no longer pays Lord Blandford's allowance nor his college expenses, for Lady Blandford always sat like Mordecai at the gates, spoiling all her pleasure in her high position and her great estates.

Lady Blandford has one daughter already out and another comes out this season. She is enabled to keep up her position through the liberality of the Duke of Abercorn and other relatives.

The Bells offered Mr. Russell's goods for sale to different people.

The Bells are giants and are desperate men. The police are confident that the explanation of many crimes that have mystified Dutchess County for years will follow the arrest of the Bells.

The officer had requisition papers and the prisoners have been brought to Poughkeepsie.

He Wants the Marshal to Shinney on His Own Side.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—And taxpayers of North Plainfield.

In consistency with the fact that such an official is required, had, and maintained by the citizens of the borough of North Plainfield, and that while on duty he should always be found within its precincts, I deem it not amiss to draw your attention to the fact that on Saturday night, Feb. 20, about 10, marshal Rutledge was seen, and known to be, in Union county, and had it not been for a little occurrence in Somerset county (of no particular importance as it so happened) to which his attention was drawn, it cannot be conjectured how long he would have remained there. Such occurrences have been noticed as not being infrequent, and it especially should not be so on Saturday night.

JAMES A. EMMONS.

Whose Horse Is This?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—For the past few days a white horse, old and lame, has been seen in different parts of the city wandering about. It seems to have been turned out to die by its heartless owner, forgetful of its past faithful services. On Tuesday it was cared for by a family on West Second street who notified officer Lynch, and captain Grant then had it taken to Seguine's stables in the hope of apprehending and punishing the cruel owner. It is to be hoped that the people in this city will take more interest in supporting the society whose duty it is to protect God's helpless dumb creatures.

The Law That Will Permit the Building of Its Electric Railroad, Will be Signed by the Governor at Once.

Assembly bill 192, already published in full in THE PRESS, and which passed the house the other day almost unanimously, has now passed the senate and delivered safely into the hands of the Governor who will probably sign it to-day or to-morrow. It authorizes boards of aldermen or common councils of all cities to give authority, by ordinance passed by a two-thirds vote, for the erection of poles for wires for electric cars, and covers cases where such authority has been already given.

The passage of this act clears away all objection legally to the building of the proposed electric road in this city.

TO REINSTATE PASTOR DILL.

His Former Parishioners Want Him Again in Stirling, and If They Can't Get Him Back in the Church They'll Put Him in the School-House.

A petition to the Presbytery of Morris and Orange, asking that the Rev. Arthur Cushing Dill be installed again as pastor of the Stirling church, is being circulated among the people of Stirling and Millington. It has been signed by many persons whose intention is to bring him back as schoolmaster if not as pastor. Every member of the church of which Mr. Dill was pastor until charges of improper conduct were brought against him last summer, with the exception of five families, signed the petition Tuesday, so it was said by constable James Havey, who read the names.

The five families which are excepted are the Torreys, the head of the family, Herbert Grey Torrey, having been, it is said, at the bottom of all of Mr. Dill's recent troubles, and who is charged with being the leader of the White Caps; the Coopers, who turned against Mr. Dill because of a story that the little parson had made deacon Cooper crazy; the Bebouts, who were brought from Methodism to Calvinism by Mr. Dill; the Moffits, two of whom, Fred and Frank, have been among the bitterest opposers of Mr. Dill, and the Bowmans, at whose house Miss Anna Wolf, the school teacher towards whom Mr. Dill was particularly friendly, boarded when the trouble began. These families are said to be the only ones in Stirling or Millington who are opposed to the young preacher.

The petition has been in charge of John Hunter, one of Mr. Dill's warmest supporters, and he spent all day Tuesday going from house to house obtaining signatures. It is intended to present the petition to the Presbytery to-day at its meeting in Morristown. At this meeting the members of the Presbytery will listen to the summing up in the case against Mr. Dill, in which the Presbytery has been engaged in taking testimony behind closed doors for several months.

Lyman Takes Third Place and Thiers Increases His Percentage.

Rogers, Thiers, Haynes, Emerson, Lyman, Brett, Hawkins and Woodruff were the bowlers in last night's contests for the Crescent League individual championship. Lyman won three games, and Thiers and Hawkins one each. The others all lost.

The Tournament committee has decided that as few games are bowled as scheduled, it will be best to allow contestants to bowl games whenever they can find it most convenient from this date until March 20. This plan is adopted in the hope that at least ten games will be rolled every day. Contestants can thus save much annoyance to themselves and to the committee.

Beginning on March 20, all unplayed games will be scheduled and no excuse (except illness) will be received. The rule will then be enforced that all games not rolled as scheduled will positively be forfeited.

The results of last night's games, were as follows. The tie on the first game was won by Lyman. On the roll off he got 18 and Haynes 10.

THE SCORE:

—The Swedish class in English branches will meet at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening.

Look over these symptoms: headache, obstruction of nose, discharges falling into throat — sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody, putrid and offensive; eyes weak, ringing in ears, deafness; offensive breath; smell and taste impaired, and general debility. You won't have all of them at once; probably only a few of them; but they mean Catarrh.

And the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy mean to cure it, if you'll let them, no matter how bad or how long standing.

If they can't, they'll pay you $500 in cash. They mean that, too, just as it's printed.

They offer you the money,—or a certain cure, if you'll take their medicine. But if they weren't certain of the cure, they'd never offer you the money.

DO NOT BE DECEIVED.

Persons with weak lungs—those who are constantly catching cold—should wear ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER over the chest, and another between the shoulder blades during cold weather. Remember they always strengthen and never weaken the part to which they are applied. Do not be deceived by imagining any other plaster like them—they are not —may look it, but looks deceive. Insist always on having ALLCOCK'S, the only reliable plaster ever produced.

"THE LETTER KILLETH."

Our Supreme Need the Life-Giving Energy of the Holy Spirit.

The pulpit of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was occupied last Sunday, morning and evening, by the Rev. Dr. A. V. V. Raymond of Albany, formerly pastor of Trinity Reformed church of this city. In the morning he preached from the text:

In him was life, and the life was the light of men."—St. John 1: 4.

Part of his sermon was as follows:

To say that "in him was life" is more than merely to assert the wisdom of Christ's words or the reality of his deeds. Life is more than any of its expressions, more than the sum of all its expressions, whether we see it in the plant, the animal, in man or in the Lord Jesus Christ, simply because the life is capable always of new expressions. So the power of Christ was found—is found—not merely in what he said nor yet in what he did but in himself as the incarnate life of God. The same words might have been spoken by others, as, indeed, they have been since, without anything like the quickening quality he gave them.

There is a clear distinction between truth and the spirit of truth. The truth is the seed in its integrity; the spirit of truth is that inherent something which makes it alive. Without the quickening of this vitality the seed itself is useless. In its highest appreciation this marks the distinction between the visible Christ and the invisible spirit. In the days of his flesh it was not the mere sound of his voice, it was not the mere words that he uttered that gave him power with men; but the spirit which vitalized his speech. It was not the mere touch of his human hand that all might see that carried healing, but the spirit which gave vitality to that touch. As a man he was filled with the Holy Ghost, and not until he was in the hour of his baptism did he become the Saviour of the world. And to-day the distinction is no less clear. The historic Christ, by which we mean the man made known to our human intelligence in the gospel story—the historic Christ is not the light of life, but the spiritual Christ, the Christ made known to us by the Holy Ghost. Apart from the power of the spirit of God there is no life in the historic Christ which makes Him the light of men. Men may be perfectly familiar with the historic Christ and yet not be saved by Christ. "The letter killeth; the spirit giveth life".

Because of this Christ promised the Holy Ghost. Because of this the disciples with their intimate knowledge of the historic Christ, with their familiarity with the great facts of His life, death, and resurrection, were commanded to tarry until they were filled with the spirit. There was no power in their knowledge until it was quickened by the spirit of truth. This is the profoundest teaching of the gospel, my brother. It meets us to-day in this crisis of history with tremendous meaning. We are throwing all our energies to-day into a strife about words, seeking to formulate doctrines and laws of conduct as though these were to save the world. But our supreme need is the life-giving energy of the Holy Spirit; not a satisfactory doctrine of the Holy Ghost, but the Spirit Himself.

First, let us look at Christ in His relation to the scriptures. He quoted Moses and the prophets but he did it not to settle the question of authenticity—we do not say that his quotations have no bearing upon that vexed problem—but he touched words for higher and holier ends. To Him they were the body of truth, and His purpose was to bring forth the light inhering in them. His touch glorified the words with spiritual meaning and with spiritual power. The moment this latent life was quickened it broke forth from the shell of the lustreless meaning of the words themselves. Only thus could the life bring forth fruit, or to take the figure suggested by John's words, the words are the candlestick full of light, and Christ's touch was the spark which made them flame forth into life. To all whose eyes were not holden, those words were all glorified with a meaning not seen before—a higher and holier meaning. Thus the divine life in Him glorified the scriptures. We talk about the inspiration of the Bible. What do we mean by it but that God has breathed into the Bible his own quickening energy, His own life? And how is it possible to prove this save as that life is manifest? What thought of God lies buried here? What light giving truth for the soul is hidden here? This is the supreme question before every scripture narrative and every scripture text—not merely what does each say on its surface, but what spiritual and eternal truth lies hidden beneath the surface, and so Christ used the scripture, glorifying it by making it luminous with spiritual meaning, and so does the Holy Ghost always magnify the word.

The life of God is in us, only as through our use of the Bible we give light to men. In the presence of the darkness of this world, the ignorance of God and divine things, I plead for this use of God's word. What matters it if men discover, or think they discover here and there a scratch upon the lamp—here and there a literal defect, an historical inconsistency, does that affect the life-giving power of the life within?

In closing he said: I have but one purpose, namely, to show our need of something more than Biblical scholarship, scientific knowledge, humanitarian impulses and intelligent methods of service. More and more as the years pass and my own experience deepens, the conviction strengthens in my soul that our supreme need is the indwelling power o the Holy Ghost, a distinct inflow of the divine life which will vitalize the truth as we use it, and vitalize our human faculties as we exercise them. The imperative call of God therefore to our own souls is that we should first of all humble ourselves before him and rid ourselves of our feeling of pride and of selfishness that His life may flow through us, and the life that was in Christ being in us we too shall be the light of men. For this baptism from above we wait and we pray.

JERSEY LEGISLATORS PERPLEXED.

They Wanted to Attack the Reading Combine, but Don't Know How.

There is doubt at present as to what the action of the New Jersey Legislature will be in the matter of the Reading railroad deal. The investigating committee appointed last week cannot find anything to investigate, and cannot, therefore, make a report. It is stated by good authority that no existing laws have been violated, but the Attorney-General and the committee are still searching the statute books for laws bearing on the subject. The Central railroad has announced its intention to send the committee a copy of the lease and agreement of the deal. J. D. Beekman, chairman of the committee on railroads and canals, offered a report in the House of Assembly the other night, in which he says that the committee has sent for copies of the contract and leases between the railroads. The Attorney-General will be unable to advise intelligently until he has inspected the leases and agreements.

For a Visit South, the Princess Anne's the Place.

Now that the Lenten season approaches and the claims of society are for the nonce set aside, people begin to cast about for some quiet resting-place, and long for some delightful haven of a winter resort. It is just at this season that Virginia Beach is at the height of its loveliness. This queen spot of nature is situated in Princess Anne county, Va., eighteen miles due east of Norfolk, and thirty miles from Old Point Comfort, and forms a part of the most beautful beach on the Atlantic Ocean. The temperature at Virginia Beach is always warm and balmy in the fiercest winter months, for the primeval pine forests shut off the icy blasts from the north, and the Gulf stream trends shoreward and tempers the breezes from the sea.

Within easy access to the famous Princess Anne Hotel at the Beach are the famous duck shooting grounds of Broad Bay, and game is abundant in the forests skirting the stretches of meadows. The region has been rightly named the sportsman's paradise, and the surf and still-water bathing are unsurpassed. Other amusements include crabbing, bowling, billiards, tennis, horseback riding and charming drives. Rowing, sailing and fishing may be enjoyed on the lake, bay and ocean. Lynnhaven bay, an adjacent body of water, is famous for its delicious oysters.

The Princess Anne Hotel is a most magnificent hostelry, and is complete and superb in all its appointments. The cuisine is above reproach. Everything needful is provided for the comfort and convenience of the guests. There are accommodations for four hundred. It has electric lights and bells, spacious entertainment rooms, a billiard room, tennis courts, children's play rooms, private and public parlors for adults, hot and cold sea-water baths, elevator, and all other features of a first-class hotel. The pavilion near the hotel is two hundred and fifty feet long and one hundred feet wide, and affords delightful and ample opportunity for out-door exercises, games and sports.

The hotel is eminently popular both as a winter and as a summer resort. In winter, glass-inclosed balconies and verandas, sunny rooms and open wood fires aid in ministering to the comfort of guests. The hotel has perfect drainage and all modern sanitary appliances. It is accessible by all steamboats, steamships and railroads terminating at Norfolk. Trains run hourly between Norfolk and the Beach, where proprietor S. E. Crittenden of the hotel may be relied on to secure to all visitors a most glorious time. Drop him a line asking for pamphlet, and ascertain further about this famous hotel and its genial host.

A Good Time at the Buckle House Warming.

Ex-Councilman Buckle of North Plainfield has just completed for himself and family a lovely, new home on Westervelt avenue, and he had a house warming there, last night. There were about 100 present and a grand good time was experienced by them all. Mrs. Buckle and the Misses Buckle were untiring in their efforts to accomplish the gratification of every wish. The supper was bountiful and the music, by Guttman, kept the young folks dancing all night, while the old folks like ex-Councilmen Emmons and Vetterlein, and Messrs. Woolston and Chandler, enjoyed the festive game of whist, etc.

This Company Goes to Church Every Sunday.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—W. T. Heflin's spectacular production of the old, old play, "Ten Nights in a Bar Room", which is to be played in Music Hall this evening, is in every sense of the word worthy of the most liberal patronage. While the story is very old, Mr. Heflin by aid of scenic effects, capable people and knowledge of where and how to advertise, has succeeded in making "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" a great success. The play in itself is a story of the evils of intemperance and its consequences, and exerts a moral influence that is surprising.

Mr. Heflin as a manager is not to be excelled—the very clever idea of compelling his people to attend church upon each and every Sunday, being entirely orinal. At each performance he gives every lady patron a combination photograph of himself and his company The company which he has gathered around him is entirely capable. The work of Edward N. Hoyt as Joe Morgan is most admirable. In the third act, when, in a fit of delirium, Joe Morgan falls to the floor, the onlookers are held as if spell-bound at Mr. Hoyt's realistic acting, but it is only for an instant as before the curtain falls the applause fairly raised the roof. J. E. Parker as Simon Slade portrays the landlord of the Sickle and the Sheaf in a lifelike manner. In the last act his makeup is something to be wondered at. He is a perfect picture as to what depth the demon rum can bring a man.

Miss Frankie St. John is a most versatile soubrette, being both sparkling and witty. Her skirt dancing specialty places her on a par with the only Carmencita. She has the true imported Spanish wriggle, and is a most limber-jointed young woman. Laurence Russell, who revised the production, gives a clever impersonation of the Yankee farm hand, and is greeted with roars of applause upon every entrance. The other members of the company while being fairly good, do not shine resplendent. The Revellers quartette sing some tuneful plantation melodies, and the landlord's son exhibits his mellow voice in the topical song, "I guess I'll turn over the page." And he does. Mr. Heflin played to a packed house in Somerville last Monday evening, the audience being of a more than ordinary good class of people and everyone went away pleased, and it is only in justice to Mr. Heflin that I say these few words of commendation.

EGE NOT GUILTY.

The Evidence Against Him Not Sufficient for Conviction.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25—The trial of Charles R. Ege, a bookkeeper of the defunct Keystone National Bank, charged with having made false statements to Bank Examiner Drew when the latter was making his examination in October, 1889, and misleading Drew as to the condition of the bank's assets and liabilities has concluded, the jury rendering a verdict of not guilty under instruction of Judge Butler who considered the evidence against Ege insufficient to warrant a conviction.

Similar charges against Clerks Lawrence and Maguire were also abandoned, verdicts of not guilty were rendered and the three accused men were released from custody.

Murderer Levo Put in Irons.

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 25.—Joseph Levo, who murdered Miss Ida Kipp a few months ago, was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. About midnight Levo was notified by two guards at the jail to get up and dress for his removal to the penitentiary. When outside of his cell he said he would not be taken dead or alive, and made a dash for liberty, but was overtaken, and after a desperate struggle with the jail officers he was overpowered and put in irons. The guards then proceeded with their prisoner to Columbus.

Of Course He Had.

An invalid uptown was walking out with his wife the other day when a man met them and very effusively shook his hand.

"Ah, how do you do? How do you do? How is your health now?" exclaimed the man.

"None of your business," snapped the invalid, and jerking his hand away he hurried off with his wife.

"My dear," she said, reprovingly, when he had slowed down so she could speak, "why were you so rude to him? He seemed very anxious to know how you were."

"Rude, nothing," growled the invalid. "I've got a right to be. That chap is the new undertaker who opened a shop up in our neighborhood last week."—Detroit Free Press.

"Will it be ready for the afternoon train?" was the inquiry.

"I cannot promise as to that, sir," was the reply, "but the man is skinning it already, and I will promise to have it at the cars ten minutes after it is skun."—Hartford Courant.

She Pardoned Him.

"You needn't have been. It is not contagious. But even if it were, your love for me, if you have any, should have led you to risk coming to see me."

"It was because I thought the ague was contagious that I didn't come to see you, and also because I am so fond of you, I didn't want you to give me the cold shake."—N. Y. Press.

TAKING THE "TIP."

Effete Europe and Its Outstretched Palm.

The Feer and the Feed—"Thank You" at Four Prices—Fleecing Americans—Feeing as a Fine Art—Queenstown and Liverpool Millionaires.

[COPYRIGHT, 1892.]

Effete Europe's extended palm is what most interests and amazes an American abroad. To the tip, as it is taken in Paris, he can find no parallel at home. It's an institution which compels study; and tuition rates are high.

America would have to change a good deal to conform to European customs in this particular.

Imagine a Denver banker pocketing a fee for waiting upon a customer!

Imagine the sexton of John Hall's church smuggling a stranger into a choice pew for three pence!

Imagine the station master in a big American town gratefully accepting two cents for showing a traveler the shortest way into town!

Imagine a New Hampshire farmer allowing his children to sing songs for pennies to passing tourists; imagine his wife joining in the discord and hurling shrill curses after the traveler who remains unmoved by it, after the Swiss custom!

Imagine an apple seller in Central park turning beggar when her stock is sold out!

Imagine an Adams express agent keeping back two cents in making change and grumbling at being compelled to disgorge!

Imagine an usher in the Chicago Auditorium "hanging round" for pennies after showing a party to their seats!

Imagine a Washington "help" paying fifty cents to the private soldier who strolls out with her Sunday afternoon, or a dollar to a corporal, or a dollar and a quarter to a sergeant, as the London housemaids are said to do!

Imagine the baggage smasher of a back country railroad in Indiana omitting to smash the trunk of the traveler who has crossed his palm!

Imagine Vanderbilt — who is the closest American parallel to a duke in England—admitting the public to his picture gallery at a quarter a head and pocketing the quarters!

Imagine a Pennsylvania railroad conductor bowing humbly, hat in hand, to the dude who has given him a dime and rudely bundling into her car the poor woman who has no dime to give! Imagine him reserving two unpaid sections in a sleeping car from Philadelphia to Chicago, for a bribe of twenty-five cents, as a German conductor did for an economical friend of mine!

Imagine the attendants in the Metropolitan museum chasing visitors around with unasked suggestions in the hope of a fee!

Imagine an American omnibus or coach driver waylaying every passenger for "drink money" at the end of a drive!

Imagine the clerk in a "left luggage" office asking whatever you please, sir, for taking care of a parcel when the regular charge is posted outside!

Imagine Mr. Wanamaker's post office clerks trying to cheat the public, or the ticket sellers in the Grand Central depot "making mistakes" in the change to their own advantage!

Imagine a Kansas City carpenter taking a present of the magnificent sum of two cents and a half for giving a better dressed man a "light!"

Imagine a bar tender in a St. Louis saloon expecting one or two cents for himself every time he pours out a drink for a customer!

Imagine a Philadelphia city clerk accepting a three-cent fee for giving a stranger a permit to view the public buildings!

A TWO-CENT THANK YOU.

Imagine the "man at the window" in an American newspaper office adding a few cents daily to his income by taking coppers from people who have questions to ask!

Imagine a policeman who would take one cent for directing a traveler to the nearest letter box!

If a person is gifted with a sufficiently lively intellect to imagine all these things coming to pass in America, not as exceptional instances but as common, everyday occurrences, he can then form some faint conception of what a Europeanized American would be like. And it wouldn't suit him so well as the present variety. The American sovereign, as Prof. Sumner says, cannot take tips. If he takes them he ceases to be a sovereign and becomes a flunkey.

Giving tips in Europe is an exact science, the rudiments of which, at least, every traveler ought to acquire. Long experience has made the natives adept. It is only the Americans who go about recklessly flinging away shillings, francs and marks where only copper is required. In Queenstown and Liverpool, where most of the summer tourists land, all the hotel waiters and porters are millionaires. They retire early to their country estates and enjoy their fortunes before they have time to grow gray-headed. Nothing goes but shillings with the lately landed. By the time he has reached Switzerland or Italy, which is as far as he usually gets, his rapidly shrinking purse teaches him to be a little more circumspect. In Italy and Switzerland and on the Rhine the swallowtail-coated jugglers of soup plates get wealthy less rapidly.

Everyone over here understands this propensity of American travelers to give big fees upon first landing. Chester is the first city in England usually visited by the tourist, and the fees for seeing the rather second-rate cathedral there amount to something like three shillings. No other English cathedral costs anything like so much. The thrifty Chester people act on the ecclesiastical doctrine of charging what the traffic will bear and get a big diocesan revenue from the swarms of visitors.

"I don't believe there's a soul in England who won't take a shilling, from the queen down," said a casual acquaintance to me in Liverpool once. "I wish I knew how much I ought to give to these leeches. If I have to fork over a shilling every time one of them does anything for me I'll go home dead broke in a week. I've tried giving 'em nothing and that don't work either; if they don't see what they want they ask for it."

"Try pennies," said an experienced traveler, laconically.

"Pennies?"

"Yes, pennies, singly or in combination; one for the chambermaid, two for the 'boots,' three for the waiter and so on. That's English style."

The perplexed one looked relieved. "So there's no one in England who will refuse twopence if he can't get a shilling," he asked.

"Precisely," was the answer. "On the continent, if you go there, even smaller fees will answer. A Frenchman will give his waiter ten centimes—that's two cents—for serving dinner in a second-class restaurant or four or five cents in a first-class one. Five per cent. of the total amount of the bill is a good rule to remember, unless the bill is under two francs, which it won't be. And give the 'boots' half what you would in America. It will be more than he usually gets from the natives."

As the French do nearly everything they undertake a little better than any one else, one would naturally expect that the art of extracting fees would be a fine art here in Paris. It is. Perhaps a French waiter is the only person living who can say "Thank you" at four prices. This is the way he does it:

For 10 cents: "Je vous remerci, monsieur," with a reverential shake of the head.

For 6 cents: "Merci, monsieur."

For 4 cents: "Mer-r-c'."

For 2 cents: "Sis-s-s-s"—a prolonged and unmusical hiss, which it is worth paying more to avoid.

The expression, "if you please," is capable of similar variations, from the courteous "s'il vous plait" through the brusque "s' 'ou' plait" down to the decidedly abrupt "s' 'ou' p'." If a Parisian waiter or "boots" is very polite he has either got a big fee or expects one. Excessive courtesy can be had by paying for it.

One of the pleasantest things about a European trip is the consciousness one feels that at the end of it all he is going back to a land where flunkeys are so rare that those who want them have to import them, where a railway conductor is a gentleman willing to answer any number of questions for nothing if he has time and not a beggar in a gorgeous uniform; and where the average workingman feels himself with reason "as good as anybody." In the land of the free and the home of the brave the hotel waiter is the only functionary who is becoming European; and even he retains his independence over three-fourths of the country, summer resorts excepted. May it be long before others follow his iniquitous example. One would not wish to see the United States, like Switzerland of glorious history and inglorious present, turned into a nation of beggars, or its voters classified, like those of England, into "men," "gentlemen" and "fellows."

THE JURY COULD NOT AGREE.

It Stood Ten for Conviction and Two for Acquittal After Being Out a Day.

The Case Comes Up To-morrow When It Will be Set for a Hearing—The Prosecuting Attorney Expected a Disagreement—Scenes in the Court Room—Many Wagers on the Result—Murmurs of Regret—Belief that a Second Trial Will Give the Actor His Freedom.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 26.—Long bef or the opening of Judge Troutt's court the corridors leading to the court room were crowded and it was with difficulty that those whose business called them there could enter.

The discussion at times among those composing the crowd ran high, and on the faces of many could be seen looks of expectation and hope that Curtis would be acquitted. Others were there out of simple curiosity.

Numerous wagers were made on the result of the jury's deliberations.

Mrs. Curtis came into court accompanied by a lady. As she held a whispered convesation with some of her sympathetic friends, it was plainly to be seen that she was anxious.

Curtis entered the judge's chamber shortly after the entrance of Mrs. Curtis. He looked pale and tired, and held a short conversation with his wife. It was evident that the strain of the trial had told on him.

When Judge Troutt entered silence at once prevailed in the room. He announced that the jury had not as yet reached a verdict, and that the court would adjourn.

This announcement seemed to please Mr. and Mrs. Curtis, for in this delay they both found ground for the brightest hopes.

Friends who have stood by Actor Curtis all during his trial surrounded him and cheered him up as best they could.

They all assured him that he would be all right; that there was not the least doubt of the fact that he would be acquitted and in a few days he would once more be a free man. Curtis thanked them and seemed to take much comfort out of their cheering assurances. One rumor started that the jury stood eleven to one for acquittal, and that the juror holding out would be soon brought over to the majority.

Then the jury filed into court and announced that they had not agreed on a verdict and that there was no likelihood of them ever coming to an agreement. Judge Troutt stated that he would not accept this report as final, and sent them back for further deliberations, with instructions that they were to report at the end of two hours.

When the jury returned to the court room, Judge Troutt again promptly convened his court.

Both Actor Curtis and his wife were perceptibly nervous and anxiety was strongly depicted upon their countenances.

The attorneys for the defence, who sat by the actor and his little wife, had a look of deep concern on their faces.

Assistant District Attorney Hinkle stated that he was by no means confident that a verdict of conviction would be rendered. It was very apparent that he expected a disagreement.

After the jury had taken their seats in the jury box they were asked by the court if they had come to an agreement. The foreman arose and said: "No; we are still unable to agree. The jury stands ten for conviction and two for acquittal." Thereupon the court ordered the jury discharged.

The case will be called again to-morrow, when it will be set for hearing.

The result when announced was received with surprise, mingled with expressions of regret.

The disagreement is the topic of conversation all over the city, and while all express themselves as sorry that Curtis was not acquitted, they are of the belief that his second trial will give him his freedom.

CURIOUS ACCIDENT.

A Freight Car Thrown Across the Track Into a Drug Store.

WEST ELIZABETH, Pa., Feb. 26.—A very curious railroad accident occurred here last night.

It struck and injured James Donnolly and Miss Annie McGuire, who were standing in front of the store. Miss McGuire is fatally hurt.

The engineer and fireman of the freight train saved their lives by jumping. They were, however, somewhat bruised by the leap.

ADVOCATES ARMY REFORMS.

Report of a Parliamentary Committee on British Naval Affairs.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The Parliamentary Committee's report on the condition of the army service is published.

The report approves the short service system; highly praises the Indian army; admits that there are numerous defects at home (where it is computed only 20 to 30 per cent. of the soldiers are fit to supply Indian drafts); says that youths quite unfit for any kind of service ought not to be classed as effective soldiers, and advises various reforms to stimulate recruiting, increase the pay and better the condition of soldiers.

The report was only carried by the casting vote of the chairman. A minority report voicing the ideas of the War Office was issued simultaneously, condemning the proposed reforms on the ground of great expense.

PARSON DILL GUILTY

The Charges Against Him Are Sustained.

THE PRESBYTERY VOTES SO.

Usual Precautions Against the Proceedings Becoming Public.

The Reverend Gentleman Convicted of Using Language Inconsistent With the Character of a Minister of the Gospel—He Considers the Whole Trial Preposterous, but is Not Cast Down—The Petition to the Presbytery to Reinstate Him Will Soon be Presented.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Feb. 26.—After another long session the Presbytery of Morris and Orange, in the case against Rev. Arthur Cushing Dill, adjourned until next Thursday. Before adjourning, however, a vote was taken which resulted in a verdict of guilty.

The usual precautions were observed against allowing the proceedings to become public. The members of the Presbytery were not present in great numbers, the attendance being limited to the dozen who have followed the case from beginning to end.

Young Mr. Dill, supported by his lawyer, was early on the scene, and seemed confident that the result of the long ordeal which he has undergone would be favorable to him. His accusers arrived shortly after, and they, too, were confident that the charges would be sustained and the pastor convicted. The members of the Presbytery were on hand promptly, and they, with accused and accusers, locked themselves behind the oaken doors of the First Church chapel.

Immediately after summing up the vote was reached.

The formalities were soon gone through and the Presbytery adjourned.

After the adjournment Rev. Mr. Whittaker, stated clerk, handed the following statement to the press:

"As the result of the trial, the Presbytery of Morris and Orange found the Rev. Arthur Cushing Dill guilty of using language inconsistent with the character of a minister of the Gospel, and which tends to tempt others to sin, or mar their spiritual edification.

"A committee of three ministers and two elders was appointed to recommend an appropriate verdict in the case for the consideration and action of the Presbytery at its next meeting, which will occur on Thursday, March 3, at Morristown."

Mr. Dill did not seem much cast down by the result and expressed himself as confident of final vindication. It is probable that the case may reach the General Assembly before final settlement.

A buzz of astonishment went up when the verdict was announced, and everybody listened eagerly when Pastor Dill was asked by the stated clerk, the Rev. Dr. Whittaker, what he had to say. He replied:

"Nothing, except that I do not understand why I should be found guilty on the three allegations in the first charge when they are unsupported by corroborated evidence, and when I flatly denied them on the stand. I now repeat that I never made use of the immoral utterances ascribed to me, and I consider the whole trial preposterous."

The petition to the Presbytery to reinstate Pastor Dill in the Stirling church will soon be presented to that body. It now has 250 signatures and more are being added daily. This petition also asks for Elder Bebout's removal.

JOIN HANDS.

The Coming Messiah's Society and the Brotherhood of New Life Amalgamated.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 26.—A special from San Francisco, says: Dr. Cyrus Teed, the leader of the Koreshans, who claims to be the coming Messiah, and who has recently gained national notoriety by his attempt on the hoarded millions of the community at Economy, Pa., has joined forces with Thomas Lake Harris, Primate of the Brotherhood of New Life, whose headquarters are in Sonoma county, Cal.

Harris has recently gained unenviable notoriety by the exposures of his dealings with Lawrence Oliphant and by revelations made by Miss Alaire Chevallier of Boston, who charges him with grossly immoral practices.

Teed, when he was here recently, visited Harris, and it is said they formed a compact for the amalgamation of the two societies, each to be invested with equal authority.

Teed has a large establishment in Chicago, but his branch in 'Frisco is dwindling, and it is thought, since his failure to get some of his disciples into the Economite community, that he has cast about for a union with Harris.

Harris is weak; also, owing to the effect of Miss Chevallier's attacks, which have been felt most severely in England, Harris has gathered worldly goods estimated at $350,000.

FRENCH CRISIS CONTINUES.

PARIS, Feb. 26.—It is said that M. Bourgeois was induced by his Radical friends to refuse a portfolio in the French Cabinet, as planned by M. Rouvier.

The object of the Radicals is to obtain complete control and not to accept only a partial voice in the government. They hope that President Carnot will yet have to form a Ministry that will give the Radicals all they desire.

The situation was this morning more complicated than immediately after the resignation of the Ministry, and the disorderly elements in Paris are ominously outspoken and active.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 26.—The Czar is said to be deeply concerned about the Ministerial overthrow in France. He is kept informed by frequent telegrams from the Russian embassy in Paris, and gives more attention to the subject than to any foreign incident for a long time.

A dispatch from Vienna says it is believed that the Ministerial crisis in France will upset the ingeniously formed League of Russia, France and the Vatican against the Triple Alliance.

A NIGHT OF RIOTING

Berlin's Mobs Continue Their Desperate Fighting.

BEER AND BREAD SHOPS SACKED

They Take by Violence the Food They Are Not Permitted to Earn.

Determined Fights of Some Individual Members of the Mob—A Carpenter With a Hammer Brings Down More Than One of the Police, While a Blacksmith With One Blow of His Fist Nearly Kills One of His Assailants—Both Had to be Shot Before They Would Surrender—One Section Urged on to Violent Acts by a Woman—The City Comparatively Quiet This Morning.

BERLIN, Feb. 26.—Ten thousand of the hungry and oppressed of this city marched yesterday to the gates of the Emperor's Castle and demanded justice. Singing the Marseillaise with a mighty roar, they swept up the broad avenue of Unter den Linden, gathered renewed inspiration at the statue of the great Frederick and, fighting hand to hand with the police, they cried aloud for the Emperor, who, pale and alarmed, looked down upon them from a window of the Alte Schloss.

With a wave of the hand he could have calmed the mob, but, indifferent to their cries, he permitted the police, strongly re-enforced, to drive his subjects back, bleeding and blind with rage and disappointment, to the farther parts of the city, where until early this morning their scattered bands pillaged the bakeries and other shops where food could be had, and, led sometimes by women, sometimes by men, defied the police and spread abroad the rallying cry of socialism.

After the rioters had been driven from before the castle gates, thousands of the unemployed gathered in the streets, especially of the eastern quarter. Men rushed forth from their homes, followed by wives and children beseeching them not to risk their lives. On Weissenstrasse a tall, good looking woman of strong German build, denounced the authorities and demanded that her hearers proceed to obtain by violence the food they were not permitted to earn.

As darkness came on the mob increased. The rioters held virtually possession of the eastern quarter of Berlin, and especially of Frankfurter, Koepnicker, Andreas and Weissenburger streets. The whole police force was called out, under orders to go to any extremity.

A carpenter with a hammer brought down more than one of the police, but at length fell himself, severely wounded by a revolver bullet.

One of the sturdiest of the mob was a Brandenburg blacksmith, who, with no weapon but his fists, resisted half a dozen policemen in their efforts to make him a prisoner. A terrible blow from his right arm nearly killed one of his assailants, and he was shot down. He was borne to a hospital fatally wounded.

In Gruenerweg strasse the mob attacked the beer houses and shops, demanding bread and beer. They pillaged the bakeshops and divided the bread among all who wanted it. The half-famished people seized and devoured the food with a wolfishness which was eloquent of their misery and hunger. Some men left the mob and hurried home, with loaves under their arms, to their starving families. Others sat down on the street and banqueted on the spoils.

At Elizabeth strasse the police stopped a man who was hurrying along with loaves clasped in his arms. He fell on his knees and begged to be allowed to pass. "My children have had nothing to eat since Tuesday," he cried. They had other work to attend to and allowed him to go.

The police were directed with much judgment and skill, their instructions being to aim for the capture, or if necessary, the killing of those who appeared to be leaders. This they carried out, and as fast as one who seemed to be a ring-leader was taken, he was hurried away to prison. In this way the mob was kept disorganized and prevented from forming any formidable group.

The military remained under arms, but took no part in the struggle. This course is said to have been followed by the direct orders of the Kaiser. It is also intimated that the authorities had an intimation that the soldiers could not be trusted in a conflict with the people, and that they were safer in garrison than they would be on the streets.

The panic caused by the uprising is almost universal in the city, and it is openly proclaimed by many that the beginning of a stubborn fight with the masses is at hand.

The city was comparatively quiet this morning.

Attempted to Kill Valcovitch.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 26.—An attempt was made last evening to assassinate Dr. Valcovitch, the political agent of Bulgaria. A man sprang upon him in the street in the dark and stabbed him in the left side. The wound is not mortal. The assassin escaped, but the police are in pursuit.

How They Differ.

In make up: Most baking powders contain ammonia or alum. Cleveland's does not; not a particle.

It is made of pure cream of tartar and bi-carbonate of soda, with a little flour to keep the strength, nothing else. Cleveland's is wholesome.

In strength: A rounded spoonful of Cleveland's does better work than a heaping spoonful of any other.

A large saving on a year's bakings. Cleveland's leavens most.

In results: Cake made with Cleveland's is fine grained, keeps moist and fresh.

Cleveland's leavens best.

OBITUARY.

Charles Frederick Everitt.

After living several months in Southern California in vain hope of permanently restraining the plainly apparent progress of consumption, Charles F. Everitt, grandson of the late John L. Everitt of this city, sailed with his devoted wife for the Bahamas some weeks ago, trusting to find there good health again. But it was in vain. In response to his earnest desire that he might not die among strangers, he was brought home to New York from Nassau, Friday last, where he lingered until Wednesday. A nature more magnanimous, a heart more generous, a character sweeter, or ways that were more gentle and winning yet manly and courageous, were never yet combined in any human being. In heaven above he now awaits the coming of the noble wife whose mind, and heart, and hands and life have been consecrated to naught but thought and care of him, for years past.

THE RECEPTIONS.

Plainfield Society Has a Double Feast of Good Things.

The receptions given by Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman at Sycamore avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Yates and the Misses Yates at West Seventh street, last night, were both highly enjoyable events, and complete social successes.

The interior of the Yates home was artistically decorated. Large mirrors reflected a bewildering profusion of palms and lilies. The windows were curtained with twinings of graceful smilax, and portieres of smilax were hung at the doorways. The chandeliers also were adorned with green. The mantels were beautified with mermet, bride and pearl roses and smilax. There were carnations in profusion. The orchestra was hidden from view by a bank of ferns, lilies and palms. The stairways and landings were decorated with palms and ferns, with pale candle lights interspersed. The table was beautifully arranged, in pink. The menu was perfect, and the service unexceptional. The appointments of the house were perfect for just such a social affair. The costumes of the ladies were superb in simplicity and richness. The general expression of the guests was that the house was perfect for such gatherings. Those who received were Mr. and Mrs. Yates and the Misses Yates, assisted by Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, Mrs. Henry B. Newhall, Miss Butler, Miss Dumont, and Miss Yates of Brooklyn. The guests numbered 400.

Similarly magnificent were the details of the affair at the Hegeman home, where Mr. and Mrs. Hegeman were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, jr., and by Miss Roome, sister of Mrs. Hegeman. Everything was charmingly arranged, and all the guests were most hospitably entertained.

Don't Worry About Plainfield's Ball Nine

Although manager Keller of the Crescent League base-ball team, has in his eye a nine composed of the very best semi-professionals of the country, there is no particular secrecy about it except that until he has signed certain men whom he will eventually get—but who are still hoping to secure places in the Western, the New England or other minor leagues—the exact construction of the Crescent League nine that is to win the Central New Jersey championship next season, cannot be stated.

The base-ball cranks of this city, however, can rest assured that manager Keller did not let Hammill, McIndoe, Harkins and others get away until he had better in tow.

TOTALLY DESTROYED BY FIRE.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.]

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 26.—The Union Oil-cloth Works on Erie street, were totally destroyed by fire this morning at 4. The fire started in the engine-room. Made-up stock of enamelled oil-cloth valued at $10,000, and machinery valued at $30,600, were destroyed. The total loss is $45,000. The works were run and controlled on the co-operative plan by the twenty-five employes. Not a dollar of insurance was held on the plant. The large works of the Victor Radiator company were saved from destruction by great efforts on the part of the firemen.

THE LAST AND THE BEST.

But the People are Consoled by the Announcement of Another Philharmonic Course Next Season.

The Casino was filled to overflowing last evening upon the performance of the third and last concert of the New York Philharmonic club, under the management of H. Otis Newman. Owing to two large receptions to follow—one in the city and one in Washington Park—there was an unusual display of full dress.

The concert as a whole excelled either of the others, and was a fine ending to a very satisfactory course. The programme, as given, was as follows.

PART I.

Symphonic, No. 9, B major.....Haydn Largo.
Allegro Vivace.
Adagio.
Menuetto Allegretto.
Presto.
(Expressly arranged by the Composer for chamber music.)

Piano Soli—
a. Spinning Song.....R. Hoffman
b. Scherzo di Bravura.....R. Hoffman
Mr. Richard Hoffman.

Canzone, "La Capinera".....Benedict
[Flute Obligato, Mr. Weiner.]
Miss Marion S. Weed.

Kinderschenen—
a. Der Dichter Spricht, (The Poet Speaks) Schumann
b. Furchtenmachen, (Frightening) Schumann
c. Menuette.....Schubert
N. Y. Philharmonic Club.

PART II.

Quartette, No. 1, C minor.....Mozart
Allegro.
Andante.
Rondo.
Piano, Mr. Richard Hoffman.

Songs—
a. Romanze—"Since First I Met Thee" Rubinstein
b. Ungeduld, (Impatience).....Schubert
Miss Marion S. Weed.

Serenade and Cossack Dance.....H. Hoffman
N. Y. Philharmonic Club.

Miss Weed did herself full justice. She has always been a great favorite here with all who have heard her, and she gained new friends for herself last evening. Her voice is remarkably pure and refreshing, and her appearance and manner are charming. For both numbers in which she appeared, she received a recall.

Mr. Hoffman needs no introduction either as pianist or composer, although he is not familiar with a Plainfield audience. He was well received. The spinning song and scherzo were charming and of course, played as they existed in the mind of the composer. He received an encore. The Mozart quartette, in which Mr. Hoffman took a prominent part, was also delightfully rendered.

The concerted music was without exception well selected and pleasing. That it was well rendered goes without saying. The Haydn symphonie made the finest introduction of the concert course. It has been a matter of comment why, when there is so much grand music by the great composers, the works of inferiors were chosen to introduce the former concerts. A nocturne by Doppler, for flute, violin and violoncello, was omitted from the programme as originally printed.

The concerts have been such a success this year, that a second series will be given next season under the same management. The best of soloists will be engaged. Due notice will be given regarding subscriptions.

What is Stirring in Colored Society.

A surprise party was tendered Miss Mann of East Fourth street, last evening, but the many friends who joined in the pleasing intention were so unfortunate as to find her ill abed. In spite of that, however, the event was much enjoyed by the others. The ones most active in the affair were Miss M. Galego, the Misses Dorsey, Miss C. Laine, Madame Sutton, Mrs. Reed, Miss P. Ellis, Miss M. Stevens, Mrs. H. Barrack and Mrs. Beasoner. "Luncheon" was served at 11, when Miss Dorsey and Miss Galego spread forth an elegant collation of chicken salad, bread and butter, ice-cream, crackers, cake, fruit, candies and lemonade. There was singing by Miss Stevens accompanied by Miss Laine on the organ, and it was midnight before the guests could say good bye and tear themselves away.

MAYBE A FATAL ACCIDENT.

A Bicycler Who Carried no Light, Almost Kills Himself in a Collision.

J. Louis Ollif, prescription clerk in Moy's pharmacy at Park avenue and Fourth street, lies moaning in his bed to-day, unconscious and terribly bruised and in a most dangerous condition from concussion of the brain and possibly fatal internal injuries. Hurrying back on his bicycle from supper last night at 6:30, he ran into the team of William Baker of West Seventh street. Ollif was picked up insensible and his bicycle is a wreck.

As he came at full speed down Park avenue on the right hand side, he saw coming towards him the team and carriage. He turned in close to the curb to pass just as the coachman turned in to the stepping stone at the gate of Dr. Endicott's new office. Ollif ran with great force into the horse next the sidewalk. He had no light on his bicycle and sounded no bell, so no one knew of his coming until the collison occurred. The coachman immediately pulled the horses back on their haunches to keep them from treading on the unfortunate man.

Dr. Endicott has charge of the case. The patient is in a high fever to-day and unconscious. The least noise plainly causes him great suffering, and his whole body aches terribly. There is every reason for the gravest fears as to the result.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 20, 1890.

Having been a sufferer for sometime past with biliousness, &c., I was recommended to use Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills. I did so, and am pleased to find that they are as recommended, a cure for those ailments. I therefore subscribe myself cheerfully in recommending them to any who may suffer with those complaints.—E. B. NAAR, News Editor True American.

A CRISIS IN PLAINFIELD.

Momentous Questions Demanding Speedy Settlement—Race Track Legislation, Sewers, and Electric Lights—Suggestions from ex-Mayor Randolph.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Your suggestion to organize a Law and Order League apropos of the Rev. Dr. Rodman's letter is a valuable one. May I venture to say that your own journalistic enterprise could hardly be made more efficient in the public interest than to collect the names and consents of public spirited citizens who might be willing to join in such a movement? I understand that Dr. Rodman's suggestion embraces two things—first, guarding against immoral and injurious legislation at Trenton; second, assisting in the maintenance in our own city of good morals, as well as in the observance of what he calls "truth and honesty and right dealing" in our municipal affairs.

As to the former division of such a scope of effort on the part of a "Law and Order League", I beg to call your attention to another race-track bill introduced in the Legislature, and reported in this morning's papers. It is said that this bill is to be rushed through, if possible, during the concluding days of the session.

Among matters which would come under the second division of such a movement, we find the present urgent attempt made on the part of the Electric Light company to obtain the auditing and payment of their bills, notwithstanding the exposure that has been made of their shortcomings, and of what seems to be clearly established by the testimony taken from experts (under affidavits) showing—(1) That the lamps were in part at least not 25 candle-power lamps; (2) That they did not have the requisite voltage for the circuits; (3) That even what power was supplied was depleted, or partly dissipated, by private wires, for the service of which the company was receiving pay.

Let me in this connection, as one citizen, thank you for the service you have rendered the public in assisting to expose the wrong that has been done. To me your remarks concerning the leaky wires and rotten poles seem well-timed. You and your contemporaries published Tuesday night the fact that a valuable horse had been killed on South avenue by a live electric light wire, and that its owner had a narrow escape from instant death. How long are we to stand the slovenly methods and deteriorated service, and run the risk of having bills paid out of our public treasury just as if they were correct?

I will not in this letter burden you with suggestions touching the Water and Sewerage question, which I can not help regarding in a position of danger as to the city's future interests. I was, however, impressed with the view recently stated to me by ex-mayor Rockfellow, to the effect that this whole question should not be separated into parts; that the absolute control of the city's water should be the same as that of the sewerage; and Mr. Rockfellow could not, any more than myself, see how that control could be kept solid except by public ownership. Such questions as these might well be dealt with by such an organization as Dr. Rodman proposes, and which, if you should so choose, you could efficiently aid. I have none but kind remarks to make of our present city administration, though I cannot, with my own observation and experience in view, help differing with the ideas entertained by some of our public officials. The present is a momentous period in the history of Plainfield, and a "Law and Order League" would be a great help toward a wise and honest administration of public affairs.

L. V. F. RANDOLPH.

Plainfield, Feb. 26.

Shooting for a Porker.

There was a large gathering of sportsmen at the grounds of the Jersey City Heights Gun club at Marion, N. J., yesterday, to participate in and witness the pigeon shooting for the 400-pound prize hog offered by Jacob Pentz, of Fanwood, than whom there is no more enthusiastic or gentlemanly sportsman existing. Eighteen contestants faced the traps and shot at ten birds each with the following result: E. M. Cooper, 10; W. H. Hollis, 10; Capt. Jones, 10; Edward Collins, 9; C. M. Hedden, 9; L. Lyon, 9; P. Jay, 9; Harry Sinclair 8; Frank Class, 7; Neaf Apgar, 7; Dr. Moller, 7; Gus Fisher, 7; Charles Smith, 7; James Wheaton, 7; William Hughes, 5; George Davis, 5; William Pierson, 5; Hugh Leddy, 4.

The winners, Messrs. Captain Jones, of New York, Hollis and Cooper, of Red Bank, N. J., agreed to shoot off their ties on the same grounds, Thursday, March 3, at which time there will also be all-day sweepstake shooting. Genial Al Heritage, or as he is otherwise known, "Old south paw", did everything to make things pleasant for all present and succeeded admirably. Alderman Joseph Keogh, of the 4th district, Jersey City, catered to the wants of the hungry, in a very satisfactory manner. Mr. Pentz acted as scorer and judge. It is needless to say there were no disputes. Among those present the writer had the pleasure of meeting for the first time that well-known sportsman and chivalric southron, Polk Miller, of Richmond, Va. Mr. Miller's northern friends are legion.

Walking advertisements. Every man, woman and child who has once tried Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup cannot say enough in its praise.

The wonderful cure by Salvation Oil of Mr. M. S. Culp, a chronic rheumatic, 229 George street, Baltimore, has awakened wide-spread interest.

IS THIS CITY INCLUDED?

Secretary Riker of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, Joins a Corporation That Proposes to Acquire All the Railroad Franchises in Hudson, Essex and Union Counties.

At a meeting of capitalists at the Essex club in Newark the other day, at which was present Chandler W. Riker, secretary of the Plainfield Street Railway company, the New Jersey Traction company was formed, and under it all the street-railroad companies in Essex and Union counties except the South Orange line of Newark will be consolidated. It will also mean the acquisition of the electric line to Jersey City and the Hudson county lines. The new company will take charge of all the lines and guarantee the stock and interest.

The company is organized under the general laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $500,000, all of which has been subscribed. It has power to purchase, lease, or acquire in any way the street-railway franchises and property in Essex, Hudson, and Union counties, and also to extend, improve, operate, and equip street railways in those counties and between the cities and towns of other counties and in other parts of the State.

The special purpose of organization at present is to acquire control and possession of the entire Newark passenger railroad system, including any rights it may obtain in the operation of the new electric railroad to Jersey City, and to more fully equip and extend those lines and to operate them under one central organization. Stock in the new concern has been taken by the following incorporators:

Benjamin F. Tracy, Secretary of the Navy; John J. Waterbury, President of the Manhattan Trust company of New York; Frederick Frelinghuysen, George A. Halsey; John Kean, jr., of Elizabeth; James Smith, jr., Bernard M. Shanley, Gottfried Krueger, John F. Dryden, Leslie D. Ward, T. T. Kinney, Chandler W. Riker, Peter Hauck, Franklin Murphy, Elish B. Giddis, Thomas C. Barr, A. Q. Keasbey, Andrew Lemassena, jr., Henry Conger, S. S. Battin, John H. Ballantine, William Clark, of Newark; Edward E. Denniston, Richard W. Clay, and Edward J. Moore, of Philadelphia.

Officers and directors will be elected on Tuesday next.

The People's Lives Are Menaced Every Day by Those Who Drove the Trolley Road Away.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Your editorial on Electric Light Defects, in Wednesday night's PRESS is both timely and pertinent, and shows that you are fully alive to the dangers which exist in the present system of lighting our streets. The killing of a horse by electric light wires on Sunday morning last, is a forcible reminder of the deadly current over our city and a second warning to the inhabitants which they will do well to heed. The poles and electric light wires are a constant menace to the lives of the people, and some action should be taken by the city, requiring, within a reasonable time, the removal of the poles and the placing of the wires underground.

DANGER.

That Chronothanatelotron.

The talk of the town the last few days has been the entertainment that the young ladies of the "Y" are to give in the Casino, to-morrow evening.

Everyone knows who the "Y's" are, and what good work they are doing. Accordingly the sale of tickets has been large, and the stock phrase of "Go early and avoid the rush at the box office", already applies.

The entertainment has a long, complex, and perhaps irrelevant name, which—although THE PRESS has told you how—you are not obliged to pronounce as the Y's will know what you mean when you ask for tickets. The programme itself will be musical and literary in part, and there will also be some pretty and effective tableaux.

A Notable Society Event.

The annual flower show will be held at the Eden Musee from March 2 to 10, inclusive. This has become by frequent successful repetitions a notable society event and it is welcomed with enthusiasm. A specialty will be made of orchids, and all the leading growers of the country will be represented by beautiful and unique specimens. The show will be the largest and most elaborate ever given there. It will not interfere with the regular entertainment, which includes new tricks by DeKolta, the master magician, two daily concerts by the Hungarian band of Munczi Lajos and an array of waxworks that is not equaled in any country. Plainfield people spending the day in New York will find a world of pleasure at Eden Musee.

A Boy's Brutal Assault.

Eddie Allen, a youthful stage driver, was brutally assaulted by John Mehon, a youth somewhat older than himself, yesterday afternoon. Mehon tried to board the stage, and when Allen drove him away Mehon struck him a cruel blow on the head with a club. The scalp was cut open, and the wound bled profusely, necessitating surgical attention. A warrant was issued for Mehon's arrest.

THE children's health must not be neglected. Cold in the head causes catarrh. Ely's Cream Balm cures at once. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into the nostrils. The worst cases yielding to it. Price 50c.

ONE of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and, much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm, and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

A Lecture Course for 30 Cents, an Enjoyable Church Sociable, and an Eye-Sore Rebuilded.

Tickets are fast selling for one of the most popular lecture courses that Dunelleners have ever had the opportunity of hearing. These lectures are to be held in the M. E. church and the first is to be given by the Rev. E. V. King on "How to make both ends meet". The date is Tuesday, March 1. The second, "The story of John Wesley" (illustrated), by the Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, D. D., will be on March 8. The third, "Across the Atlantic and a little way beyond", by the Rev. J. W. Marshall, will be on March 15. Admission to the entire course is 30 cents.

A church sociable, under the direction of the Y. P. S. C. E., was held at the home of R. J. Swackhamer, last Thursday night. The entertainment committee, composed of Miss Ella Dunham, Miss Maud Benton and Miss Minnie Swackhamer, prepared a very interesting programme of charades, readings, etc. This character of entertainment proved so much of a success that the committee have already begun to practice for another to be held in the near future.

The old store occupied by C. Messler a number of years ago as a hardware store, is to be repaired and refitted as a fruit store. This old store has been going to pieces fast of late, and has been an eye-sore to those living near it. Therefore the news that it is to be refitted and opened as a branch of a Plainfield fruit store, will please not only those in the neighborhood but everyone in the borough.

A Change Needed Here.

It is hoped that with the new management of the Central railroad, a change will be made in the manner that information is now given the telegraph office regarding delayed trains. There is a board hung outside the station on which is supposed to be bulletined how many minutes late are the trains that are held back for connections. A business man with such information can thus judge whether he will wait or whether he has time to return to his office and finish what business he left in a hurry.

Here is one instance of many and almost daily ones. The 11:09 a. m., for New York, a day or so ago was first reported 8 minutes late, then 15 minutes, then 25 minutes, then 35 minutes, but only arrived after its patrons had been kept in the station waiting indignantly for 50 minutes.

Delamater Jury Disagree.

MEADVILLE, Pa., Feb. 26.—The jury in the Delamater case came into court at 6 p. m. and announced that they were unable to agree. They were accordingly discharged. It is learned that the jurors stood nine for conviction and three for acquittal.

Webster's Trial.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—The jury which is to try Burton C. Webster, the bookmaker, who shot and killed Broker Charles E. Goodwin in the Percival Flats last August, has been completed. The taking of testimony began this morning.

Something to look out for—the fraudulent imitations, dilutions, and substitutes that are sold as Dr. Pierce's genuine medicines, at less than the regular prices.

To protect the public from fraud and deception, these genuine guaranteed medicines are now sold only through druggists regularly authorized as agents, and always at these long-established prices:

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery (for the liver, blood and lungs), ... $1.00.
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription (for woman's weaknesses, irregularities and ailments), $1.00.
Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets (for the liver, stomach and bowels), 25 cents a vial.
Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, 50c.

But remember this; they cost you nothing, if they don't help you. They're guaranteed in every case to benefit or cure, or the money is returned. They're the cheapest medicines you can buy, for you pay only for the good you get—but they're the best, too, or they couldn't be sold on any such terms.

EIDER IN GREAT DANGER.

Indignation at the Alleged Slowness of the German Salvors—Her Position.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The leisurely manner of salving the cargo of the North German Lloyd steamer Eider is provoking much criticism. The officers, who still remain on board, complain of the slowness of the German salvors.

There are only a dozen men working on the steamer, though it is known that a strong southwest gale, which is not an infrequent occurrence on that coast, may spring up at any time and demolish the vessel. If the steamer sinks a few more inches her position will be hopeless.

There is evidently one or more large holes in the after part of the hull. The after part of the steamer is also twisted and has a list to port. The forward part is fairly sound.

Street Railway Employes and Politics.

BOSTON, Feb. 26.—The street railway employes of this State will hold a convention at Lynn on March 7, to effect a coalition for political purposes. SOME SPRING SHOPPING.

Which Was Sadly Hindered by a Yellow Jonquil.

To Which Is Added a Stray Observation or Two on the Clothes of Boston Women—Spring Wraps and French Ginghams—A Tea Gown.

[COPYRIGHT, 1892.]

I have been in Boston for a few days, and you can easily understand, therefore, that an unholy enthusiasm stirs within me for copper pink and Spanish yellow and the green of grass and the blue of the peacock and the red of the bird that flies whizzing about his cage at the park and nips the children's fingers.

Boston is afraid of color. On a Boston street or in a Boston parlor there are many women who dress well, but all dress cautiously. It seems to be the lingering taint of Puritanism, a fear of yielding to the emotions, an indwelling conviction that now abideth sobriety, elegance and propriety, and the greatest of these is propriety. Boston seems to rest always within the black silk tradition.

A SPRING WRAP AND FRENCH GINGHAM.

When you see a bit of color it is of some shade that belongs to last year. Boston has taken time to consider it, to reason with itself calmly and to come, as to the younger of its population, to a logical and self-satisfying conviction that it's not inimical to culture.

It's the same way with shapes and materials; Boston won't take them for granted, they have to argue with it to prove their claim to be adopted into its traditions, to tone themselves down and cast off their eccentricities and originalities and become like unto other fashions beloved of the Bostonians; to acclimate themselves in short; take a Boston flavor and prepare to be toyed with by the east wind.

A Boston woman when she is in full panoply squeaks, not as often as she moves but semi-occasionally. There's something peculiar about her backbone or her stays.

She take pains conscientiously with her clothes. But—

When I got back on Broadway and a girl looked up facing me with a bunch of red tulips on her bosom I could have opened my arms. Her dress was black, too, but not for blackness' sake; it did but give the tulips and the red ribbon on her muff and the red wing in her hat the more vivid opportunity. The New York woman loves effect and she isn't ashamed of it, and that is why the windows are filled with mauve and rose pink and the soft hues of the violet and lilac and the tender brown of bursting buds and the misty gray of the atmosphere; with jonquil yellow and iris purple and vandyke or brilliant kaga red and sevres blue, all for her delectation.

One of the most novel of the spring novelties I have seen thus far is a frock of blue camel's hair close-set from the neck to the ground with lines of black gimp making perpendicular stripes dotted with shiny black cabochons. From the sketch of it you will see the wider bands of fanciful gimp at the foot of the skirt, the black velvet bodice slashed and laced and finished with two long tabs behind, the yoke of velvet to which the waist is shirred with a puffing of blue crepe all around, the puffed sleeve tops sewed to velvet gauntlets and the fluted velvet capote with its blue rosette and aigrettes nodding. It has a demi train and with every sun ray it glitters and twinkles. It's blinding to look at and not one woman in ten thousand would have an æsthetic right to wear it, but—New York takes more joy in life and therein is it wiser than Boston.

Some of the prettiest spring woolens are sage green cheviots and tweeds, and soft nasturtium brown and wall flower red repped wools and strawberry and russet striped together and fawn tints mottled with green and gray. There is a new red one sees everywhere of a dye between plum color and crimson rose. Swallow blue comes out in the heavy ladies' clothes, and if you have a sharp eye for the newer combinations you will write it in your memory that pale green is plaided or figured with light tan and with pine and moss green, and that pale yellow mates in like amicable companionship with gray and with fawn.

I went out shopping yesterday with a girl who wanted to buy a spring visiting gown. She had a yellow jonquil in the breast of her new French swallow-tail coat, and that jonquil proved to be the controlling spirit of the whole expedition. It determined the girl in the first place to wear the coat, for it dropped from her hand as she was buttoning a fur cape, and fell upon the silvery gray cloth with its seams overlaid with fine silver silk gimp, producing such a concord of color as would have compelled any sane woman, not a Bostonian, to make the suggested change.

A tailor gown of the old-fashioned ashes of roses struck my shopper's fancy four minutes after we entered the first store. It had a long straight French polonaise over a bell skirt—the dressmakers haven't recovered yet from that freak of their scissors—of ashes of roses corded with silk, with a deep hem about the bottom of velvet of the same color scalloped and tucked out with rows of gray gimp dotted with little pendules of cut steel. It was a charming costume, but as she bent over it the yellow positivism of the jonquil seemed to take all heart and courage out the tender, delicate tones. My shopper ceased to like it, though she didn't know what had happened to it, and she straightened herself and turned her back on it, with some remark to the effect that she thought it would fade.

A smooth cloth gown of light tan color was the next she ventured to take into consideration. It was a handsome affair enough, with a pointed corselet front buttoned on the left, and with guipure collar all in one, this of sage green and tan striped cloth. It had simple sleeves of plain sage green stuff, with deep striped cuffs and a French skirt of tan cloth, into which the wearer was supposed to get by way of a slit on the left, hospitably trimmed with buttons. At the foot was a broad striped border. I could see that my shopper was looking at it with an eye that saw also the French long coat of tan-colored Harris tweed hanging in her wardrobe at home. It seemed to her, evidently, that coat and costume were born for each other, but when, in her enthusiasm, she drew one step nearer something dissolved the spell of the affinities; it was the jonquil. Its honest disk of sunshine stood out over the tan color and made a broad and effective contrast, but one, alas, that suggested cheapness and not distinction.

I saw that innocent jonquil, which after all must have been anxious enough itself to get out of the hot stores and the sharp winds and be at home, put her out of conceit with a heliotrope princess dress trimmed with bretelles and with a green and shaggy tweed, with a round belted waist and a narrow vest of green bengaline. Away from it they were perfection. In its neighborhood you vaguely and uncomfortably suspected them of crudity. I can't say to what footsoreness we should not have been reduced in the end if I had not, after prayerful consideration, paused hesitatingly, as a forlorn hope, to see just how vigorously the jonquil would rebel against a striped gown in pale green and gray, the contrasting bars running dizzily about it horizontally. It was not a bad dress, but pretty only for a slender woman. I knew my shopper was too plump for it, but the jonquil uttered never a syllable of protest, and so in sheer weariness the slave of the jonquil ordered it home.

More interesting was the spring wrap she bought to go with it. They are figured together in the illustration. The black lace visite has a light back finished with streamers of black velvet. It is loose in front and has a lace yoke and a velvet rosette with long ends. There was a hat, too, of black lace with butterfly bows, to make which in any way seasonable will call for a decided change in the reading of the thermometer.

There are wraps with loose backs among the exhibitions. I fancy they will stay among them, for it's hardly in woman nature to spoil living figures by taking them off their dummy models.

The batiste patterns are very pretty, with their pale yellow carnations thrown on pink or their violet clusters on white, on their honeysuckle flowers on pale blue; but I want to give you a tea-gown picture and the batists must wait for another seven days. It's a corn-colored crepe de chine with a princess front and a wide ribbon belt tied behind. The front of the bodice is draped with lace, black or white, as you choose, and the back is shirred at the waist and lies in a round train with wide crepe bands; it forms loose draped sleeves which fasten on the inner side of the arm. It's a graceful garment and a sumptuous one, but who could imagine it on a Bostonian?

HANDSOME AND SOLID.

The National Capital Will Soon Have a New Post Office.

The city of Washington is soon to be enriched by the addition of another fine building. Congress at its last session appropriated $2,000,000 for a new federal building, which shall serve for a post office in place of the present building on Pennsylvania avenue, near Seventh street. The latter is rented by the government, and has proved utterly inadequate to the great amount of business done by the department.

The walls of the new building will commence to rise in May next.

The plans are now complete, and in a few weeks it is thought proposals will be solicited for its erection. The drawings show a magnificent edifice, designed in the style now prevailing, viz., the Romanesque blending with the early French renaissance. The salient features of the four facades are deeply recessed bays in the central portion of each. A clock tower flanks the inner northwest corner. Intersecting the belt course over the mezzanine story at the principal entrance are three overhanging balconies, supported by richly carved corbels. On the pedestals of the central balcony a golden eagle with outstretched wings will give national significance to the building. On either side of this symbol are colossal bronze statues representing postal employes.

The main building is seven stories in height, with basement and attic, and its exterior is beautiful in outline and appearance, while its interior will be well lighted and ventilated, also commodious and well suited for the work of the post office department—better accommodations, in fact, than any other office in the United States.

An inner court, covered with a glass and iron skylight, with ventilating louvres above the roof line, forms a useful adjunct for lighting the rooms facing the same.

The present supervising architect, Mr. W. J. Edbrooke, designed the edifice, and has given every detail connected therewith the benefit of his knowledge and skill.

DROPPED THE SUBJECT.

Just Because the Weak, Feminine Mind Asserted Itself.

"Ten thousand dollars for a dog!" he exclaimed as he looked up from his newspaper. "Do you believe anyone ever paid any such price, Maria?"

"I'm sure I don't know, James," she returned, without stopping her needle work even for a moment. "Does the paper say that much was paid?"

"Yes, there's an article on valuable dogs, and it speaks of one that was sold for ten thousand dollars. I don't believe it."

"It may be true, James," she said, quietly. "Some of those blooded animals bring fancy prices, and there's no particular reason why the paper should lie about it."

"I know that, Maria, but just think of it—just try to grasp the magnitude of that sum in your weak, feminine mind. You don't seem to realize it. Ten thousand dollars for a dog! Why, hang it, Maria, that's more than I am worth!"

"IT MAY BE TRUE, JAMES."

"I know it, Joseph, but some are worth more than others."

She went calmly on with her sewing, says the Chicago Tribune, while he fumed and sputtered for a moment and then dropped the subject, especially the weak, feminine part of it.

Cinnamon Kills Disease Germs.

After prolonged research and experiment in Pasteur's laboratory, M. Chamberland is reported to have come to the conclusion that no living germ of disease can resist the antiseptic power of essence of cinnamon for more than a few hours. It destroys microbes as effectively if not as rapidly as corrosive sublimate.

Tea in Tablets.

Tablet tea is manufactured in Hankow, in factories belonging to Russian firms. It is made of the finest tea-dust procurable. The selection of the dust is the work of skilled experts, the cost of the dust varying from ten pence a pound upward. This dust is manufactured into tablets by steam machinery.

It is estimated that the cost of maintaining the some 100,000 inmates of the various penal institutions in this country exceeds $15,000,000 annually.

Terrible Loss of Life in the North Sea.

TWO STEAMSHIPS IN COLLISION.

Without Even a Cry of Warning Fifty-four Sink to Eternal Sleep.

The Loughbrow Collides With the Forest City, and the Latter Goes to the Bottom, Carrying With It All on Board Except the Captain—No Trace of the Wreck Can be Found After a Diligent Search—Only Meagre Details of the Accident.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—A fearful disaster, involing the loss of fifty-four lives, has occurred in the North Sea, off the coast of Yorkshire, England.

The full details have not yet been received.

It appears from brief dispatches that the two British steamships, the Forest Queen and the Loughbrow, came into collision near the promontory known as Flamborough Head, which rises, with the lighthouse that crowns it, to a height of 214 feet above the North Sea.

The collision appears to have come without the slightest warning. The two vessels crashed together, the bow of the Loughbrow cutting the Forest Queen in two.

In an instant, almost without a cry, the Forest Queen sank, and every soul on board, passengers and crew, to the number of fifty-five, with one exception, were drowned.

The captain of the Forest Queen, being on deck at the time of the disaster, appears to have been pulled on board of the Loughbrow.

The latter vessel was considerably damaged, but not enough to sink.

The greatest excitement reigned at Flamborough when the news became known, and boats pushed out to the scene to see what could be done in saving life.

The wreck of the Forest Queen had, however, utterly disappeared.

Farther news is awaited with great anxiety.

The vessels seem to have been coastwise steamers.

DESPERATE AFFRAY.

Steamship Firemen Engage in a Fight With Fatal Results.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 27.—A desperate affray occurred here which resulted in the death of Pat Handley and John Cople.

The two men had a fight with Mike Walsh. Walsh was whipped and agreed to meet Handley and fight it out.

They met on Tchoupitoulas and Erato streets. After some words Handley drew a revolver.

Walsh pulled a razor and with one blow almost severed Handley's head from his body. Handley fell to the ground a corpse.

Cople then interferd and also had his throat cut from ear to ear. He died on the way to the hospital. Walsh was arrested.

All the parties are steamship firemen.

BROWN GUN TESTED

Experiments With a New Type of Ordnance.

CONDUCTED AT BIRDSBORO, PA.

The Tests Pronounced by Experts Completely Successful.

A Complete Gun Not Yet Finished, but a Cylinder Representing the Powder Chamber of a Five-Inch Rifle Used—Registered Gauge of 57,850 Pounds to the Square Inch Obtained by Three and One-Quarter Pounds of Powder.

BIRDSBORO, Pa., Feb. 27.—The system of great gun construction known as the Brown segmental tube wire-wound method whith, it is claimed, is destined to revolutionize the fabrication of heavy ordnance, underwent a completely successful trial under Government auspices at the works of the Pennsylvania Diamond Drill and Manufacturing company here.

The Brown gun consists of a tube formed of accurately adjusted segments of steel extending from breech to muzzle, wrapped with many layers of steel wire, applied under heavy pressure, and lined with an inner tube to carry the rifling and endure the wear and tear of repeated firing.

A complete gun has not yet been finished, but a sample cylinder, representing the powder-chamber of a five-inch gun, was subjected to trial last summer at Fort Wadsworth.

Both ends of the cylinder were closed with screw plugs, leaving a small vent for the escape of gas, and two shots were fired. The pressure registered was enormous, and abundantly proved the strength of the system, but at the second discharge the screw plugs became jammed, and after repeated failures to release them, the trial was abandoned.

It was then subsequently found, after the plugs had been cut out, that some of het screw threads had been upset by the escape of gas.

Since then Mr. Brown has been busy experimenting and preparing a new cylinder for trial, under the supervision of Lieut. Whistler of the Fifth Artillery, specially detailed by the government for the purpose.

Yesterday a public trial was made of the new cylinder in the presence of a large number of members of the company and ordnance experts, among whom were Judge Henry A. Gildersleeve, the counsel for the company.

The party arrived at the works at noon and preparations were immediately made for the firing tests. The cylinder to be tried represented as before the powder chamber of a five-inch rifled gun and consisted of twelve steel segments three inches thick, covered with two inches of wire wrapping in thirty-one courses and lined with a tube half an inch thick.

The external diameter of the cylinder was a trifle under sixteen inches, and its length about two feet. Profiting by the experience of last summer, Mr. Brown had encased the cylinder in a cast steel jacket, both ends of which were closed with screw plugs, the upper one of which was perforated by a vent one-eighth inch in diameter.

Two crusher gauges were screwed into the lower plug and a preliminary shot of one pound of coarse grained black cannon powder was fired to warm up the piece. It exploded without report, but with a fizz like a colossal squib.

Two pounds and a half of powder were then placed in the tube, and Lieutenant Whistler ordered the crowd back while he adjusted the electric primer.

A touch of the firing key was accompanied by a sound that resembled the sudden release of steam from a safety valve, and a jet of flame and smoke shot up into the air for thirty feet.

The gauges registered a pressure of 35,200 pounds to the square inch. The next shot with two and three-quarter pounds of powder gave 42,337 pounds pressure.

Three pounds of powder gave 47,726 pounds, and three and one-fourth pounds of powder gave the enormous pressure of 52,850 pounds to the square inch. The highest pressure used in modern guns does not exceed 35,000 pounds.

All the experts agreed that the trial could not have been more successful, and all joined in admiring the perfection with which the segments of the cylinder had been assembled, the lines of juncture being invisible except in the strongest light.

The company expects to have a complete gun ready for trial before many weeks.

POWDERLY VERY ILL.

He Has Been Confined to His Room Since the Attack on Tuesday.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 27.—T. V. Powderly, head of the Knights of Labor, is confined to his room at the Richelieu Hotel, his physician having ordered complete rest.

He was seized with a heart trouble while addressing the People's party conference at Music Hall, Tuesday, turned pale, reeled and for a moment it seemed that he would have to be taken from the hall. But he revived and resumed his speech.

He has not been able to leave his room since.

Heart trouble has interfered with his work for the last two years. He may be forced to resign his official position.

W. S. O'Brien Arrested.

HOPE FOR MRS. BALDWIN.

Successful Operation on a Victim of the Recent Hastings Disaster.

YONKERS, N. Y., Feb. 27.—The first of the series of operations to graft live skin tissue upon the raw flesh on the skull of Mrs. Homer R. Aaldwin, a victim of the Hastings disaster, now staying at the Getty House in this city, has proved so far successful.

The ten flakes of skin that were placed in position on her forehead have all retained their vitality. This is considered by Dr. Shopen, who performed the operation, a very encouraging sign, for there is every reason to believe now that the many subsequent operations that will be necessary will prove equally successful.

Mrs. Baldwin has suffered exquisite torture since that terrible Christmas eve. It has been discovered that the sight of one eye has been completely destroyed, and that of the other is going.

"I have tried to be brave," said she, "but now that my sight is going I cannot help despairing."

Her face and head are horribly mutilated. Both ears are gone and there is scarcely a hair left on her head. On one side a large portion of the skull is exposed. The rest of the scalp has the appearance of raw flesh.

The eyes stare out of leaden sockets. There is a great scar upon the left shoulder. One hand has been amputated above the wrist, and all the fingers of the other have been removed.

Miss Nellie Moore, the sister of Mrs. Baldwin, is giving the flesh from her arm for the grafts to heal the wounds of the sufferer. She submits to the operation bravely.

Mrs. Baldwin was a very handsome woman before the disaster in which she was so shockingly mutilated and disfigured.

ANASTAY GUILTY.

The French Lieutenant to Die for the Brutal Murder of His Friend.

PARIS, Feb. 27.—The trial of Lieut. Anastay for the murder of the Baroness Dellard, has been brought to a close.

The atrocious incidents of this crime were fully proved. Anastay's long acquaintance with the Baroness and her husband, he being received on a most favored footing in their house, his want of money, the brutal murder of his friend to obtain it, his surprise by the maid while in the act of plundering his victim, his attempt to kill the girl, and her identification of the murderer, were all very clearly brought out by the evidence.

It is understood that Anastay confessed his crime, and no attempt was made to rebut the testimony. His lawyer in defence fell back on the plea of insanity.

The jury, after a brief deliberation, brought in a verdict of guilty, without extenuating circumstances or recommendation to mercy.

The prisoner was sentenced to death.

Will Not Abandon Her Possessions.

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—Freiherr Marschall Bieberstein, Imperial Minister of Foreign Affairs, has announced to the Budget Committee of the Reichstag that the government has decided not to abandon the German possessions in the southwestern portion of Africa under any considerations, at least not for some time.

The Newman Memorial Dropped.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The Duke of Norfolk, the chief Catholic nobleman of England, has written a letter to the committee having the memorial of Cardinal Newman in charge, saying that in his opinion it would not be respectful to the memory of the Cardinal to proceed with the matter, at least not at present.

pure cream of tartar powders, yielding (average) 12.87 per cent. carbonic acid gas.

The Scientific American, after a most careful examination of the Official Reports, says: "The showing Cleveland's makes, compared with all the principal brands, is such as to put it emphatically at the head."

THE MYSTERY OF A TRAGEDY.

An Appeal for Aid from Indians Found Thirteen Years Too Late.

YUMA, Ariz., Feb. 27.—Boys playing on the river bank discovered there a time-worn bottle, in which was the following note:

We are hemmed in by Indians on the head waters of the Gila river, and throw this in the stream with the hope it may be found by some one in time to have assistance come to us. There are three of our party and we are from Massachusetts. We are John Welford, William Duncan and George Weston. We have been prospecting on the mountains and have been run to a hole by a lot of Indians.

The note was dated June 29, 1879. Whether the men escaped or were killed can only be surmised, for no one knows anything of the men here. The paper will be sent on to Boston.

To Save the Western Maryland.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 27.—A great delegation visited Annapolis and asked Governor Brown to interpose his veto and save the Western Maryland Railroad from sale. Capital and labor joined hands in common cause. Bakers, manufacturers, Knights of Labor, lawyers, farmers, municipal and county officers made up the delegation. It was representative of the great city business associations and labor organizations of four of the richest and most popular counties of the State, the important city of Hagerstown and other towns in Western Maryland.

Sentenced to Prison for Fraud.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Feb. 27.—Messrs. Finlayson and Smith, directors, and Mr. Miller, manager of the Australian Mercantile Loan Company, have each been sentenced to seven years' imprisonment at hard labor for frauds in connection with that institution and other things.

M. Laurier Not to Resign.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 27.—There is no truth in the report to the effect that M. Laurier has determined, at the first Liberal caucus, to resign the Opposition leadership. The story was evidently invented for use on the stump and is without the slightest foundation in fact.

—Comedian Wm. H. Crane's production of his new play "For Money" at the Star, is still the leading comic attraction of the New York theatres, and is still drawing crowded audiences to that house. Mr. Crane pervades the play at every point, and is almost constantly in view of the audience, and no play could be dull or uninteresting under these circumstances. The progress of the piece is punctuated with continuous roars of laughter, and everybody leaves the theatre in the best of humor. The performance of "For Money" closes in ample time for Plainfield people to catch the 11:30 train at night, or the ladies can get the 5:30 after a matinee.

PARTICULAR MENTION

Miss Clementine Yates of this city will speak of "The Duties of the Corresponding Secretary" at the Union County School of Methods at Elizabeth March 17.

Miss Florence M. Randolph was given a most enjoyable surprise party by Plainfield, Philadelphia and Dunellen friends, at her home, Grant avenue and Front street, last evening.

The general condition of J. Louis Ollit, who was thrown from his bicycle Thursday evening, is slightly better to-day, although the fever is still very high. He is somewhat more conscious. His family have the sincere sympathy of a large circle of acquaintances.

Sarah Butche, who was known throughout Plainfield as "Aunt Sallie", died at 6:30 last evening, as the result of a lingering illness from which surgical operation failed to save her. She was a good Christian woman, and a member of the First Presbyterian church. Her memory will be cherished by a host of friends. George Butche, her husband, was formerly driver for No. 2 engine company. He has the sincere sympathy of the community in his loss.

A Sister and Husband Give of Their Flesh to Heal a Sufferer.

A telegraph despatch from Yonkers, on the first page of THE PRESS to-day, tells how bravely Homer R. Baldwin's wife is bearing her terrible affliction and how successful, so far, are the results of the grafting of live skin from her sister to cover the sufferer's wounds. Mr. Baldwin, who is well-known here and a frequent visitor in this city, is also to contribute of his flesh to bring what comfort may yet be possible for the unfortunate woman.

One of the City's Attractions.

Signs of an early spring are bring many applications for rooms and suites at The Albion, and a number are already engaged. The main dining room is comfortably filled now, and it is probable that the annex will be thrown open in a few days to accomodate the numbers of families who will take their meals at the hotel during the weeks that their homes and households are turned upside down by the spring cleaning.

That the opening of The Albion in the luxurious and generous way proprietor Miller has followed, is one of the greatest of benefits to the city of Plainfield, is proved by the one fact that during the passing season its accomodations have been at times taxed to their utmost to provide for the members of out-of-town society people who have attended the numerous weddings, receptions, teas and other swell affairs here that in days past attracted none of the hostess's friends from New York because they would afterwards be compelled to travel a long way home. Now such people come in numbers and go back to the great metropolis full of praise of this city and its hotel accomodations.

A Pleasant Reception.

Carl Brown delightfully entertained a company of his young friends at his home, Mercer avenue, last evening. Mrs. Emma S. Brown and Miss Grace Brown assisted in receiving the guests, who remained until after midnight, dancing and chatting away the pleasant hours. Those present were the Misses Grace Barlow, Alice Barlow, Blanche Miller, May Shreve, Edith Clapp, Marion Henderson, Cornelia Faber, Elizabeth Hull, Ella Loyd, Alice Thompson, Sarah Long, Laura Long, Helen Hasbrouck, Kate Overton and Hallie VanDeventer; Messrs. Boardman Tyler, Everett Dwight, William Faber, Frank Thompson, Charles Cook, Philip Wells, Howard Turrill, Philip Jacques, Harry McGee. Edward Waring, Percy Long, Clarence Peck, Fred. Taylor and Allan Laing.

The Victor Makes the Pace.

Time was when those who wanted a bicycle hardly knew which to choose, and when all machines lacked something of perfection. Now, however, there is no question as to which is the superior wheel. Bicyclists all over the world hail with delight the advent of the new and perfect Victor, whose merits are so fully explained to inquiring ones by the local agent, William H. Rogers. If you want to buy a new wheel or to replace your old-fashioned with a modern one, see Rogers about it. His Victor will suit you better than anything else.

Permanent Improvements on the Central.

New passenger stations of stone, brick, and slate; new cars of best design; new engines of wonderful power and speed, and the Sykes Block Signal system, are among the permanent improvements in course of completion on the New York Central railroad. This is the safest, most picturesque and superb, and leading railroad of America. Its new Empire State express is the fastest train in the world. The New York Central is the Niagara Falls route to the west, and the favorite of all tourists.

STRIKERS IN A RIOT.

A Thousand Men Overturning street Cars in Indianapolis—Encounters With Police—A Bloody Struggle Feared.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 27.—No less than a dozen riots have occurred since 6 this morning in connection with the street car strike.

At an early hour Mayor Sullivan ordered out the police to assist in running cars.

The strikers and sympathizers fought every inch of ground, and at 7 three cars were overturned in the gutters.

By 8 the mob numbered 1,000 men, and business generally is interrupted by the violent proceedings. Nearly fifty arrests have been made, and a dozen cars injured by rocks.

The police force is composed of only 110 men. So far clubs have been the only weapons. The mob is increasing, and a bloody encounter is probable.

ROBBED THE EXPRESS BOX.

Vincent Linden Wanted in New Jersey for an Alleged Crime There.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS]

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Vincent Linden, 28 years old, formerly for two years an employe of the United States Express company in Elizabeth, N. J., was held this morning on the charge of robbing an express box in the Elizabeth station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, the contents of which included most of the things received during the day, and were valued at between $3,000 and $4,000.

Linden was caught last night, in a New York restaurant.

New Market Notes.

[From The Bound Brook Chronicle.]

Everyone will regret to learn of the sudden death by poisoning of Carl Heimerle's Irene and Rowland, prize winners, en route from the Chicago show. They were apparently in the best of health when they started for home and at short intervals Mr. Heimerle visited the animals to see that they were all right. The last time he went to look at them, when within a few few hours' of New York, he found both dead. Irene was sold to a gentleman in New York for $1,500. Mr. Heimerle's friends sympathize with him in his great loss.

About 100 guests were present Monday evening to witness the marriage ceremony of Miss Laura Giles and Wm. G. Giles, at the residence of the bride's parents near New Market. The Rev. Mr. Cubberly tied the nuptial knot. The bride was dressed in a costly and elegant costume of white faille. The happy couple were the recipents of many costly presents from their numerous friends. Immediately after the ceremony they received the congratulations of all and the four large parlors were thrown open and dancing commenced for the evening to music by Mr. O'Reilly, of Plainfield. About 12 o'clock a sumptuous supper was served, after which dancing continued until morning. Tuesday morning Mr. and Mrs. Giles took their departure for New York state, where they will remain until Saturday, visiting all points of interest.

Bicycle Law in New Jersey.

The Supreme Court has decided two bicycle cases.

In one it appeared that a wheelman riding on the sidewalk ran against a man, knocked him down and injured him. The Court holds that an action for damages can be maintained—first, on the ground of negligence, as the sidewalk was fourteen feet wide and there was nothing to obstruct the passage of the bicycle or the view of the rider; and second, that riding a bicycle on a footway is unlawful. On the latter point the Court says sidewalks are for the use of pedestrians, not persons in vehicles. It rules that a bicycle is a vehicle, and that a person has no more right to propel one on the sidewalk than he has to ride a horse or drive a team there.

In the other case the accident occurred in the street. A wheelman going in the centre of the road at the rate of fifteen miles an hour approached a team of of horses within twenty-five feet of their faces before turning aside. The horses became frightened, ran away, smashed the carriage and injured the complainant, who was driving them.

The Court decided that bicycles have the same right as teams on a highway, and hence that a wheelman is not liable for damages caused by frightened horses unless he is shown guilty of negligence.

It's a plan that proves something—but only the makers of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery adopt it. It's a plan to give you what you expect, or take no pay. If, in any case, their remedy fails to benefit or cure you, they'll return the money.

That proves, for one thing, that it's pretty sure to do all that's claimed for it. And what they claim is, that all diseases or disorders caused by a torpid liver or impure blood are cured by it. For all the many forms of Scrofula, and for the most obstinate Skin and Scalp Diseases, Salt-rheum, Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, and all kindred ailments, it is an unequaled and unfailing remedy.

It proves that the "Discovery" is the best blood-medicine, or it couldn't be sold on such terms; and the cheapest, for you pay only for the good you get.

And it proves, too, that nothing else, offered in its place by the dealer, can be "just as good."

Beware of spurious imitations or dilutions, at lower prices.

A CHILD RE-KIDNAPED.

Maud Apgar Found by Her Mother and Taken Home.

Concerning the kidnaping case of Maud Apgar, daughter of Lewis Apgar of this city, the Easton Free Press publishes the following:

There are not three happier persons in Phillipsburg to-day than little Maud Apgar, her mother and her grandfather, James Wilkins, of Chambers street.

Several years ago, Mrs. Alice Apgar claims, she was compelled to leave her husband, Lewis Apgar, while they were residing at Plainfield, on account of ill treatment and neglect. She came home to her father's house and brought her child with her, and ever since then Mr. Wilkins has cared for and supported them. He was unusually devoted to the grandchild, and nothing he could procure was too good for her. The father of the child ofttimes visited and was always privileged to see her, and all things seemed to go well until the 10th day of last September, when little Maud, who was attending the Sunnyside School, in Union Square, failed to return home. The mother entertained the belief that the child had gone to Easton to spend the night with a friend, but an investigation revealed the fact that she had been kidnaped and carried away by her father.

The mother and grandfather made many fruitless attempts to recapture the girl, and several times nearly succeeded, but not until Wednesday were their efforts successful. They learned that the child was in the custody of an old couple named Coddington, near Millington. The mother and an officer from Easton went to Millington, Wednesday morning, took a carriage and drove to the home of the Coddingtons, and as they drew near saw the child at a window. She suddenly disappeared and when they entered the house she was no where to be found. The old lady, who had the keeping of the child, refused to divulge where she was, but the mother, undaunted by the threats of the old lady, went through the house. She could hear the cries of her child, but it was some time before she could be located, and when found she was in a small dark room seated on a bag of dried apples crying for her mother, a glimpse of whom she had obtained from the window.

The mother seized her half-clad child in her arms, rushed to the carriage and was then driven to Bound Brook where the train was taken for home.

The house where the child had been kept was about seven miles from Millington, and the nearest house is about half a mile distant.

Maud Apgar, who is not yet nine years old, but rather large for her age, gave the following account of the kidnaping to a reporter:

THE CHILD'S STORY.

Says little Maud: "On the day I was kidnaped, my father, in company with a big stout man, came to school and told the teacher they wanted to see me. When I got out into the hallway father told me to put my hat on as he wanted to take me to Easton to buy me a coat. I went with them, but they did not take me to any store in Easton. They took me to the Lehigh Valley road and put me on the train. I commenced to cry, when my father said he was only going to take me for a short ride and would then bring me home again. But he didn't. He took me to Lyons Farm, where I was put into a carriage and driven to Elizabeth. I was kept a few days, then went to Pamrapo, New York and Troy. At each place I was left in the care of strangers, and when I cried to come home to my mother father would tell me that I could never come home again. He took me from Troy back to Newark, and I was put in the care of a man who kept a saloon. I was kept in the card room, and one day the man who kept the place and my father said that detectives were after me. They took hold of my arms, opened a hole in the floor and dropped me down into the barroom, where I was caught by a big man and hurried off to another house. I was kept there several days, and then father said men were after us. He then took me out of a window of the house and on to the roof of a barn. A hole was opened in the roof and I was dropped down on the hay, and from there was taken into a dark room, where I was kept until 1 o'clock at night, and was then taken in a cab to the Coddingtons, where my mother found me. My father said that my name was no longer Maud Apgar, but that I had been changed to Eva Davis, and the people who kept me always called me by that name. I had to tend cows out in the field, feed the horses and carry in wood. One day, while tending the cows, I thought I would freeze to death. I was compelled to sleep with an old woman, who could not talk. The people with whom I stayed often whipped me. I always thought mother would come and take me home." And as the little one said this she clasped her mother around the neck and said "Now, I am home, you won't let them take me away again, will you? I am afraid even to go out of doors for fear that I will be stolen again."

The child's shoes and clothing show evidence of neglect, and her story of how she has been knocked about and ill treated during the past six months would make the blood curdle.

Mr. Apgar told a PRESS reporter yesterday that many of these statements were untrue. He says that the place at Millington where his daughter was kept was the home of city judge Codington's family, and that she was tenderly cared for. The day her mother took her away—says Mr. Apgar—she was out romping when the woman approached. "Oh, there's my mamma!"—she exclaimed.—"Don't let her get me!" Then she ran into the house and hid. Her mother went in after her, dragged her out and took her sobbing away. Mr. Apgar adds that he is sure the little one wants to return to him but is kept in close custody.

Judge Codington also emphatically denies the charges of cruelty. He says that the little girl was happy at her new home in the country, and fought hard against being taken away. Mr. Apgar's reason for seeking to keep the girl in his charge is to prevent her from the evil influences which he claims surround her at Phillipsburg.

Crazed by Cigarettes.

A strange young man entered Taylor's Hotel at Dunellen, a day or two ago, and inquired if supper was ready. Being informed that it would be ready in a short time, he looked around for some one to play pool with him. He was accommodated and lost several games. After supper he proceeded to play more pool and when he got through had eleven games to his account. Mr. Taylor thought it was about time that a settlement was made. The young man pulled a note-book out of his pocket and began figuring at a great rate, tearing out the pages and putting it in his pocket when he got through. The proprietor again asked him to settle, when the same form of figuring was gone through, which aroused a suspicion in Mr. Taylor's mind that everything was not right in the young man's upper story. He sent immediately for constable Warden, who examined the young man and found that he had wandered away from his home in Brooklyn. He gave his name as Dunlap and said he resided with his parents. They were telegraphed to, and an answer was received asking Mr. Taylor to take care of the young man until next morning. Mr. Dunlap came up next day, paid the bill and thanked the hotel people for their kindness to the lad. He said the boy's mind occasionally becomes unbalanced from cigarette-smoking and over-study.

Spring Styles for Ladies.

Women who wish to be properly and fashionably dressed would do well to glance over the monthly fashion letter in La Mode de Paris, Album des Modes or La Mode, the favorite fashion journals. This letter is one of the best on the subject with which it deals, explaining particularly the styles prevailing or coming in fashion. Ladies would do well to patronize these journals, which are not only reliable, but are now considered the standards of fashion wherever they are known. The practical lesson on cutting given each month in Album des Modes and La Mode de Paris is intended to explain fully how to make the new styles as soon as they appear. The series of lessons has been produced under the direct supervision of A. McDowell, the inventor of the well-known garment drafting machine, which has proved such a boon to thousands of dressmakers, and has made the cutting and perfect fitting of ladies' garments an easy task to all. La Mode is a good family journal, price $1.50 a year. La Mode de Paris and Album des Modes are intended for more general use, the subscription for each being $3.50 a year. To every subscriber for either of these journals who pays a year's subscription in advance will be given a Premium Book on "Dressmaking Simplified", valued at $5. Failing to obtain these journals from your news agents send for them direct to A. McDowell & Co., 4 West 14th street, New York.

The Greatest of Minstrel Shows.

Primrose and West's famous minstrel company will make their appearance at Music Hall, Wednesday evening, better than ever. They will bring handsome stage settings, elegant costumes and original songs, jokes and dances. Among the musical numbers will be Larry Dooley's local hit, "Mississippi Boat Song", a tenor solo by Joe Natus entitled "Memories of the Past", and equally pretty songs by J. M. Jansen, Wm. Thompson, F. W. Oakland, G. H. Primrose and others. A novel scene will be the performance of "The Musical Dale". The "March of the Red Hussars" will be another feature, while the wonderful Borani Brothers will perform their specialties. The whole will conclude with "Trouble in Blackville", in which Smith, Waldron, Jansen and Martin will furnish the fun of the original "Big Four" combination.

Last night's Courier said:

—St. Patrick's day one week from next Tuesday.

We have to express our admiration of the Courier's enterprise in getting such a real bit of news. According to THE PRESS calendar, St. Patrick's day is two weeks from next Thursday, but it may be that that is mistaken and that the great day comes earlier than usual this year.

NEW ORLEANS BUSY

Preparing for the Coming Pugilistic Contests.

IMMENSE CROWDS ARRIVING.

Nearly All the Boxes and Reserved Seats for the Maher-Fitzsimmons Go Sold.

Reports from Fitzsimmons Continue Favorable—Arrangements for the Needham-Ryan Fight Completed—Betting on the Welterweights Even—Slavin and Mitchell in Fine Form as Are the Men They Are to Meet—Special Train of Twelve Sleepers from Chicago.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 27.—The interest in the coming pugilistic contests is increasing daily, and requests for tickets from all portions of the United States have poured in on both clubs in great numbers.

All the boxes for the Maher-Fitzsimmons contest have already been taken, and most of the reserved seats have also been sold. The seating capacity of the Olympic amphitheatre has been increased so that more persons will probably witness the coming contest between Maher and Fitzsimmons than have ever before witnessed a fight in this city.

Billy Madden, Maher's backer, telegraphs that the Maher party will reach New Orleans to-morrow.

A delegation of Galway men, now good citizens of New Orleans, will receive Maher and see him safely quartered.

Maher is expected to go to Weiman's, at Carrollton, and it is said that he will not be seen in public until he enters the Olympic Club ring.

The reports from Fitzsimmons continue very favorable. He sleeps well and is still growing stronger and heavier. Yesterday he sprinted for six miles, and had a four-round bout with Jimmy Carroll, in which the latter was unable to touch him.

Frank Slavin and Charley Mitchell will arrive on Sunday. Both report themselves as in splendid form and eager for the fray. The two men chosen to oppose them are also placing themselves in condition to try their hardest to earn the very liberal purse offered by the Olympic Club should they succeed in staying the required four rounds.

The change of the date of the contest between the welterweights Needham and Ryan gives universal satisfaction. One hundred and ten telegrams have been received by the Metropolitan Club asking for seats, and the call is still coming for more.

A party of Chicago sports who will witness the fight reached here last evening. This is the first Chicago delegation on the field. Mr. Varnell, the reputed backer of Ryan, is with the party, and it is said that he intends to bet a lot of money on his man. A special train of twelve sleepers from Chicago will reach here on Sunday.

Many well known sporting men from New York and San Francisco have already secured seats.

Billy Myer and Jim Hall will second Ryan and Joe Choyinski and Alex. Greggain will look after Needham. Professor Duffy, well-known as the instructor of the Southern Athletic Club, will be the referee.

The betting on the welterweight contest is stirring up. Both men have hosts of admirers and the betting is even, despite the fact that Needham has already been defeated by Ryan.

IN BUENOS AYRES.

Gideon W. Marsh Said to be in Business in that City.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27.—Ex-Judge F. Carroll Brewster, of this city, who arrived in New York from the West Indies on the steamer Advance, informs a reporter here that he learned from an authentic source while on his trip that Gideon W. Marsh, the fugitive president of the defunct Keystone National Bank, whose affairs are still subject for earnest investigation, is in Buenos Ayres, where he is engaged in business and reported to be doing well.

Judge Brewster was informed that while Marsh is going under an assumed name, it is very generally known there who he is, and that no especial pains are taken by him to conceal his identity.

Views of the French Press.

PARIS, Feb. 27.—The French press views the Berlin riots with unconcealed complacency. The "Temps" says that the State, in Germany, is resting for support on a tight drwn system of discipline, and the excesses committed may easily be the precursors of other and more serious outbreaks. It is evident that the Kaiser is tired of the attempt to reconcile monarchial institutions with Socialism.

German Press Comments.

BERLIN, Feb. 27.—The newspaper "Vorwarts" says that, in behalf of the Social Democrats it disclaims any sympathy with the rioters, and denies that Social Democrats had anything to do with the outbreak, which, it says, was incited and carried on by the lowest dregs of society.

The "Vossiche Zeitung" says that the roughs of every city are ready to commit destruction and outrage.

The "Berliner Tageblatt" says the demonstrations were senseless and had no special meaning.

The "Borsen Courier" says that the rioters were not the same persons who attend the workmen's meetings, held before the rioting began.

One of the Moffitts Murdered.

SHIPPENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 27.—Information has been received here of the murder of one of the notorious Moffitt brothers, which took place near Doubling Gap Springs, this county. The Hurley brothers left Newville early in the evening in an intoxicated condition, and while on their way home they met the Moffitt brothers. A fight ensued, when one of the Moffitts was dangerously wounded and died shortly after.

Bicycle Tournament.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—A bicycle tournament and cycle exhibit will take place at the Madison Square Garden, and last from March 5 until March 12. The six day race will be for cash prizes aggregating $2,500. Of this $1,000 will go to the winner and $500 to the second man.

French Dressmaking Establishment.

Madame CHARCOIS BOUTES,

SPAIN'S BABY KING.

Biography of His Majesty, Don Alfonso XIII.

The Juvenile Monarch's First Boots and His First State Duty—How the Child Was Induced to Take a Cold Bath.

In "Born a Baby King," published by Cassell, Francis and Mary Arnold Foster give some passages from an early history of his majesty Don Alfonso XIII., king of Spain. Many of the stories told of his youthful majesty have appeared before, but a few extracts from the narrative may be interesting.

One morning in May, 1886, one of the Madrid newspapers made the following announcement: "The cyclone has passed, the king has come; the smallest possible quantity of a king."

The christening was of course a great ceremony, and in due time the pair of little royal feet required to be shod, as baby feet generally do:

So in the fourth month the royal foot was duly measured, the royal bootmaker was duly instructed, and the royal shoes were in due time sent home. Beautiful objects they were, too; tiny, of course, as befitted a baby, but lovely to look at; gold embroidered on white, as befitted a king. And the same day that Alfonso XIII. put on his shoes six hundred other new shoes were put on to six hundred other baby feet in Madrid, making six hundred and two in all, for her majesty the queen was pleased to ordain that the occasion of the king's putting on his boots should be a ceremony, and to celebrate the important event she bestowed new shoes upon three hundred of the poor children in Madrid, and thus made a right royal entertainment of the matter.

In his eighteenth month his majesty first entered upon the public duties of his high office by opening the new session of his cortes:

All the chief personages of Madrid were anxious to witness the opening ceremony, and the senate house could not contain a tithe of those who desired to enter. The king appeared in the arms of his faithful Austrian nurse, who stood at the right hand of the queen, close to the throne. He was arrayed entirely in white; his white sombrero hat, tied with white ribbons, was removed on his entrance, and with an excellent composure he surveyed the scene, alternately watching the crowd and bestowing his attention upon the queen as she read the speech in a low voice to the assembly. The speech over, his majesty evinced a decided wish to be among the first to leave, but, being taken in the queen's arms, he remained very quietly until the long proceedings were ended, when he departed from his first official interview with his cortes amid loud "vivas."

THE KING OF SPAIN.

To bathe in the summer sea at San Sebastian was one thing; to get out of bed and into a cold bath the young king thought was quite another:

One autumn morning his majesty so firmly declined to take his bath that the nurses were obliged to appeal to the queen. "You must take your bath, baby," said she; but the king had an obstinate fit and neither moved nor answered. "Let us see," said his mother, seating herself by the bedside. "If I tell you to do it, will you have your bath?" Still silence. "Well, then, I will not tell you to do it, baby, but I shall go to my room and cry because you will not obey me. Do you wish this?" The little fellow's better feelings were touched, and with the words: "No, mamma," he threw back the bedclothes.

Since that day there have been no more difficulties over the cold-bath question.

Here is a picture of the little king taking his daily drive in the Prado:

His equipage has become a well-known one in his capital, and, indeed, we cannot wonder at it, for it could hardly pass unnoticed through the streets—a smart equerry, in cocked hat and uniform, rides first, then come two outriders brilliant in scarlet and gold, and then, drawn by four mules, comes the close carriage, with another still smarter equerry riding at its side. Inside the carriage, as it drives slowly along, the good people of Madrid can get a good view of a fair baby face in shady white hat, and a little figure seated in a small white satin chair, somewhat like a baby's saddle in shape and placed on the seat facing his mules. Every day he may be seen driving to a shady spot in the Prado, where he can get out of his carriage and play about. The mules wait for his majesty's games of play more patiently than horses would do, and so they are chosen to draw the king's carriage.

The Cardinal's Red Hat.

An article in a recent issue of a well-known metropolitan daily says: "The red hat was first bestowed upon the cardinals by Leo IV. at the council of Lyons in the year 1345. It is probable that, inasmuch as red was a royal color, that color was chosen for the cardinal's hat to show that he ranked with kings and princes." The facts are there was no council at Lyons in 1345, and Leo IV. was pope in the year 847, nearly 500 years before. Bayle, a standard authority on the subject, says: "Sun-day is the day of the sun; Rome, the city of Sun-days or the Holy city, and the cardinals, the princes of the Roman church, are also princes of the sun, and wear red because it is the color of the sun."

Advice to a Young Man.

"What do you say to a lady when you are at a ball?" asked a young gentleman who went to a ball for the first time.

"Talk to her about her beauty," replied the friend who had been there before.

"But suppose she hasn't got any?"

"Then talk to her about the ugliness of the other women who are present."—Texas Siftings.

Sanctum Mysteries.

Humorist's Wife—What in the world are you sending all these mother-in-law and plumber jokes to the Daily Blowhard for? They are as old as the hills!

Humorist — Yes, my dear; but the editor who selects the humorous matter for that paper is a young fellow just out of college, and they'll be all new to him.—Demorest's Magazine.

A Serious Matter.

"They tell me that young Charley Dudeleigh of the 'Maid of Athens' combination was arrested in Troy last week."

"Yes; it cast a damper on the whole company."

"What was the charge—serious?"

"Yes; impersonating an actor."—Puck.

DEFENDS HIS WIFE

The Secretary of State Makes a Statement.

ABOUT HIS SON'S MARRIAGE.

Father Ducey Blamed By Mr. Blaine for Performing the Ceremony.

He Says That His Wife Has Been Unjustly Criticised, and That He Could Remain Silent No Longer—Had a Horror of Public Discussion of the Matter—What Father Ducey Says.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—Secretary Blaine has furnished a long statement relating to the marriage of his son, James G., jr., to Marie Nevens, and their divorce. He says that he and his family have borne quietly every publication inspired by the young woman, but the last outrage of the kind, embodied in the decision of a judge at Deadwood, Dak., says Mr. Blaine, assumes a character which makes it impossible to remain longer silent. Mr Blaine makes the following statement:

"Since the separation of my son and his wife three and a half years ago, my family have borne every misrepresentation, every slanderous attack, every newspaper interview, which it has pleased the now divorced wife to inspire. The one person aimed at has been Mrs. Blaine, and we have, perhaps, been at fault in allowing a horror of the public discussion of private matters, combined with a regard for the future of my grandson, to permit so much calumny to unanswered.

"A letter which I addressed to the Rev. Thomas I. Ducey at the time of the marriage will distinctly state the important facts bearing upon that event.

"AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 13, 1886.

"REV. THOMAS I. DUCEY—Sir: On Wednesday morning last my youngest son, James G. Blaine, jr., shocked me by the announcement that on the preceding Monday he had been united in marriage with Miss Marie Nevins; that you had performed the ceremony in your own rectory; that my son and Miss Nevins were unaccompanied by friend or relative, and that two of your household servants were the sole witnesses. My son's announcement gave the first knowledge that I or any member of my family had of his marriage, or even of his attachment to Miss Nevins, whose character, I wish to say at the outset, in not at all in question, and of whom, but for this rash marriage, I have never heard a breath of censure.

"My son was born October 12, 1868, and is not, therefore, 18 years old. He was living here in his own home, in the house in which he was born, surrounded by neighbors who had known him all his life, under the daily care of a tutor who was fitting him for college, which he hoped to enter this autumn. To facilitate his preparations he desired to remain here during the summer, while the other members of the family were much of the time at Bar Harbor. As I have since learned, Miss Nevins, in company with her sister and her father, came to Augusta on Monday, August 16.

"On Friday, September 3, eighteen days after her arrival in Augusta, my son, who had never seen her nor heard her name until she came here, left his home without permission, and without the knowledge of any member of his family, and accompanied Miss Nevins and his sister to their mother in New York. On Saturday, the 4th, the young persons presented themselves to you for marriage.

"Through my oldest son, Walker Blaine, who went to New York as soon as I heard these unhappy tidings, I learn that James misrepresented his age to you, stating that he was within a month or two of 21. But he did not (according to your own narrative to my son Walker) conceal from you the vital fact that he was a minor; he did not conceal from you, but openly avowed, that I had no knowledge whatever of his intention to be married, and that his special design was to keep all knowledge of it from me.

"In this concealment he sought your aid and abetment, and you held his secret under consideration from Saturday until Monday, agreeing with my son not to advise any member of my family of his rash purpose. You took him to the Archbishop in order that a dispensation might be secured to enable Miss Nevins, who was reared a Catholic, to marry my son, who was born, baptized and reared a Protestant. You knew that during the long interval in which you were making these preparation I was within a moment's reach by telegraph, and yet you never gave the slightest intimation to me, the most deeply interested and responsible party.

"In defence of this conduct you alleged to my son Walker the confidence reposed in you as a priest by my son. The confidence of the confessional is always respected, but by your use of confidences reposed in you outside the confessional, even by those not of the Catholic communion, you perbecome an accomplice before the act of any crime or any imprudence to which you may listen. It is not for me to advise a minister of your intelligence that your position is absolutely untenable, would be dangerous to society, and would not be respected by any court of the land.

"You further alleged in justification of your action that if you had not performed the ceremony some one else outside your communion would have done it. This is a common defence of evil doing, and is unworthy of a priest and a man.

"A week ago my boy was under my protection—the most helpless, the least responsible member of my family; erratic, but controlable through his strong affections; an object of constant watchfulness to his parents, his brothers and his sisters; a source of constant anxiety but not of despair, because he is of good abilities, as readily influenced to the right as to the wrong, and because the patience of love can never know weariness. To-day, through your agency, this boy in years, in experience, in judgment, in practical capacity, leaves my home and my care, burdened with the full responsibilities of a man, with the welfare of a woman in his keeping.

"I am powerless. I cannot question the legality of the marriage. I shall at a distance and at every disadvantage endeavor to guide my son, but as a father living under the divine institution of the family, as a citizen living under the divine order of society, I protest against your act. As a servant of God to whose ministry you are ordained, I call God to witness between you and me. Of whatever evils resulting from this deplorable marriage my son may the author or the victim the guilty be on your head.

"JAMES G. BLAINE."

"When I wrote this letter I believed that Miss Nevins had no other responsibility in the marriage than in consenting to my son's appeal, and was blameworthy for this alone. Since then I am prepared to say that the marriage was arranged by her far more than by my son; that she did everything to promote it; suggested every arrangement; anticipated and provided for every emergency, and that in fact but for her personal, active and untiring agency, the marriage would never have taken place. In this she showed knowledge and forethought not to be expected in a woman of 21 years."

Rev. Father Ducey said last night: "I would be pleased had Mr. Blaine published my answer to him. When I married his son the latter said he was of legal age, and the records show he said so. Why should I have telegraphed Mr. Blaine? It was none of my business. I married his son regularly under the laws of the State of New York."

IN THE SUPREME COURT.

Many Decisions Are to Be Rendered This Week.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—The Supreme Court of the United States will meet today, after its February recess of four weeks, and a large number of decisions are expected to be rendered.

The Behring Sea case, involving the controversy between this country and Great Britain, was argued several months ago, but many members of the Supreme Court bar believe that the court will not render a decision on it because of the negotiations looking to arbitration now going on.

The cases involving the constitutionality of the McKinley tariff act were also submitted to the court for decision.

Another interesting case in which a decision may be handed down is the Logan case from Texas, involving the liability of the Government to protect from violence prisoners in charge of its officers. The priacipal interest attaching to this case, however, is through its romantic features, which would make a good groundwork for a sensational novel.

AN OIL KING'S PERIL

Magnate John D. Rockefeller's House Guarded.

POLICE ALWAYS ON DUTY.

The Reason for this Extraordinary Surveillance is Kept a Secret.

Mr. Rockefeller Declines to Talk About the Matter—It is Said that it is Possible that the Millionaire is Ill From Worry Over Some Mysterious Enemy He is so Carefully Guarded Against.

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—There is a special guard over the house of John D. Rockefeller. Three uniformed policemen—all picked men for bravery, intelligence and reliability—are keeping a special and exclusive guard over his residence and have been for nearly two months. Since January 5 they have taken turns by day and night in watching the millionaire's palatial residence, 4 West 54th street, which has never been left unprotected for a moment. In broad daylight passers by would not discover that the place is guarded, for the policeman stands in the shadow at the entrance to St. Luke's Hospital, which is directly opposite Mr. Rockefeller's house.

Why this extraordinary police surveillance is a carefully guarded secret. Mr. Rockefeller himself declines to state, or in fact, thus far, to be seen in regard to it at all. The comparatively great length of time this remarkable precaution has been exercised serves to heighten the curiosity of those few who know of the matter, and what is more strange, from all that can be learned, it is likely to be kept up indefinitely. It is the only private residence in the country, probably, that is so protected.

Although four or five efforts have been made by a reporter to see Mr. Rockefeller personally in reference to the matter, they were unsuccessful. On Thursday afternoon he pleaded indisposition. Friday afternoon, when a final endeavor was made, he was again found at home, but had word conveyed to the reporter that he preferred not to say anything on the subject.

It was ascertained that Mr. Rockefeller had asked the servants if they had furnished any information, and also that he was ill enough to require the services of his physician. In fact the doctor called while the reporter was there and it was some minutes before the former was admitted to his patient's room. It is possible that the millionaire is ill from worry over the mysterious enemy he is so carefully guarding against, and that the $1,000,000 gift, made known on that day, as a special thanksgiving to God for returning health, was also for some great danger escaped or to be feared.

THE PECK WILL CASE.

Relatives of the Late Merchant Effect a Compromise.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 29.—The contes over the will of the late J. C. Peck, formerly a prominent merchant of this city, has been settled. This was the case where there was a dispute between the relatives over the burial of the remains, and the courts were called in before the burial could be performed. Mrs. Norman P. Randall of Morris, a sister of Mr. Peck, who caused the trouble over the burial, and later over the will, has agreed to compromise, and has been paid a sum less than $1,000. E. L. Linsley, of this city, has been appointed administrator.

OUR HARBOR DEFENCE.

Plans for a Vessel That Will Be a Terror on the Sea.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—The House Committee on Naval Affairs for some days has had under consideration a bill providing for the addition to the navy of a novel craft, which, if the assertions of its designers are realized, will revolutionize the present practice of harbor defence.

The details of the boat are said to have been carefully worked out, and the calculations have been verified by experts. Gen. Flagler, the chief of ordnance of the army, has approved the plans, and Gen. Berdan stated to the committee that Cramp & Sons stand ready to guarantee the performance of the vessel.

The vessel is to be known as the Berdan ironclad destroyer. It is to be 260 feet in length by 40 feet in breadth and 16 feet draft, giving a displacement of 2,406 tons, with a speed of 20 knots per hour.

The feature of the design is found in an enormous submarine gun, carried at the bow below the water line. Submarine guns have been tried before this, notably by Ericsson, and the Navy department is experimenting in this direction, but the projectors of the pending bill feel that they have successfully overcome the difficulties encountered in this attempt, and have now a practical means at hand to drive an enormous shell loaded with an explosive charge of gunpowder or guncotton, into the hull of any ironclad afloat, and explode it in the very vitals of the ship.

According to the design submitted to the committee and explained by Gen. Berdan, a hydraulic buffer projects from the bow of the vessel. This is so adjusted that it will stop the boat at a distance of eight feet from the enemy's ship without injury to the boat. At this short range the buffer automatically discharges the submarine gun directly at the hull of the ship, and lodges within it a shell carrying a bursting charge of 450 pounds of powder, sufficient to blow down every bulkhead in the ship and wreck the bottom.

MISS MITCHELL'S FRIEND ILL.

Her Friends Think She May Not Live Until Her Trial.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 29.—Lillie Johnson, who was admitted to bail Saturday in the sum of $10,000, is confined to her bed completely prostrated, and it would not surprise her friends and relatives if death should end her trouble before the time for her trial arrives.

Judge Dubose was more than usually gruff Saturday when Miss Johnson was carried into court to hear the decision in her application for bail.

He denounced the crime as one of the most diabolical that it had ever been his province to try, and said that he had no doubt that Lillie Johnson did aid and abet Alice Mitchell in cutting Freda Ward's throat.

When these words were uttered in the thunder-like tones of Judge Dubose, Lillie Johnson shrank down in her chair and a moan escaped her lips.

The court said he admitted her to bail solely from the fact that confinement in the jail would kill her.

The next proceeding in this case will be the trial of Alice Mitchell for lunacy, which will not take place for several weeks.

Newark's Boy Forger.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 29.— Another check has been found which was probably made and passed by 14-year-old Charley Schmidt, the precocious forger of this place. George Tobelman, a baker, took it to Police Headquarters and said that he cashed it for a boy who was probably a companion if not an accomplice of Schmidt.

"No baking powder is gaining public favor so rapidly as Cleveland's."

One reason is people like to know what they are eating, and the composition of Cleveland's baking powder is given on every label.

So many baking powders containing ammonia or alum are widely advertised as "absolutely pure," the best way is to refuse any brand the composition of which is concealed.

New Pacific Mail Steamer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—The steel steamship Colombia just launched at the Roach shipyard at Chester, Pa., was built for the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and will run between this port and Colon. She is 356 feet long and measures 3,900 tons. She will be completed about May 1.

Closing Puddling Furnaces.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 29.—As a certain indication of depression in the iron market, with no indication of an early improvement, several of the manufacturers in this city have largely reduced their forces of employes. Painter's Sons & Co. have discharged fifty puddlers and Jones & Laughlin have closed thirty-seven puddling furnaces and discharged 300 workmen. Other manufacturers will also reduce their forces at an early day.

A Youthful Burglar.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Feb. 29.—John Sintar, aged 11, is under arrest, charged with robbing the Ulster & Delaware railroad station last Sunday night a week. When arrested the youthful thief was riding from this city to Shokan on the railroad by means of one of the tickets he had stolen. He admitted his guilt. He will probably be sent to the House of Refuge.

A $900 Position for Some One.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—An examination will be held by the Civil Service Commission in this city on March 21 to fill a vacancy in the position of topographic draftsman in the coast and geodetic survey at a salary of $900. The subjects will be letter writing, geography, arithmetic, algebra, gemeotry, descriptive geometry, plane trigonometry, shades and shadows and drawings.

Recommends Its Passage.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—The Committee on Ways and Means on the bill "to place wool on the free list and to reduce the duties on woollen goods," commonly known as the Free Wool bill, has completed its report recommending the passage of the measure, and will submit it to the House this week.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.]

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 29.—Two special policemen were assaulted at 10:10 this morning by a mob of 2,000 persons. They were pummelled over the head and had to seek shelter. The mob on Washington street is very demonstrative, and bloodshed is feared. More trouble is expected after the first car is started at noon.

THIRTEEN NEW TYPHUS CASES.

[SPECIAL TO THE PRESS.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—Much excitement was caused at the headquarters of the health department in Mulberry street today by the announcement that in the last twenty-four hours ten new cases of typhus fever had been discovered by officers of the department. The patients were removed to safe quarters.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Will Buckalew of West Fifth street is home from a surveying trip.

Miss Edna May Horr of Westervelt avenue, is confined to her bed with the grip.

Mrs. Hallock of West Fifth street is entertaining her niece, Miss Grace Beak.

Charles Bilyeu to-day resigned the agency of the Union News company at the North avenue station.

The Rev. Samuel W. Clark, so well-known throughout the State, having filled the office many years of State secretary of the Sunday-school association, died at his home at Paterson on Saturday.

J. H. VanWinkle, jr., son of counselor VanWinkle, celebrated his fifteenth birthday anniversary Saturday evening, when he entertained a merry party of young people at his home on Duer street.

A Plainfield party, including the Misses Coward of East Front street, the Misses Valentine of Central avenue, Miss Dunham of West Fifth street, and Miss Maltby of Plainfield avenue, left town today for Washington.

Funeral services were held over the remains of the late Eliza King at her late residence, 330 West Front street, yesterday. The Rev. Dr. Taylor officiated. Appropriate music was sung by Messrs. Elmer E. Runyon, George Stevens, and B. T. Barnes.

Alfred A. Marsh, of the firm of Marsh, Ayres & Co., received a telegram, Saturday, stating that his brother, Frazee Marsh, age 37, had died suddenly in Chicago, where he had lived fourteen years. Mr. Marsh left at midnight, to attend the funeral, which takes place to-morrow.

The many friends of the Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham will regret to learn of a severe attack of illness, from which he has been suffering since Thursday. Owing to his illness, no services were held in the First Presbyterian church last evening. He hopes, however, to be able to resume his pulpit next Sunday.

Charles Winston, an aged landscape gardener, was found dead in his bed at his residence with policeman Flanagan, on Liberty street, Sunday morning. County physician Westcott said heart disease was the trouble. He had been brooding over the death of his wife, which occurred three months ago. His age was 63.

The second subscription concert of the Plainfield Choral society will be given on Thursday of this week. The programme will consist of miscellaneous selections, including Gade's new work, "Joan of Arc", with the following soloists: Miss Katharine Hilke, soprano; James H. Ricketson, tenor; Perry Averill, baritone; and an orchestra from the New York Philharmonic society.

J. Louis Ollif, who was so badly injured by a bicycle accident Thursday night, was conscious yesterday and talked rationally. He remembered his riding along Park avenue up to the moment of collision, but was unable to recall anything of the accident. To-day, however, he was worse. He is unconscious again, and is suffering from severe nose-bleeding and other unfavorable indications.

TIME AND DEATH ANNIHILATED.

Plainfield Ys Do Themselves Credit in an Amateur Entertainment.

The Chronothanatoletron given by the Y's at the Casino Saturday evening was so decided a success that immediately after the performance a number of women from the audience joined heartily in asking for its reproduction at an early date.

The Chronothanatoletron turned out to be a wizard-machine resembling in appearance a spiritualistic cabinet. When the inventor, Miss Eleanor T. Morrison, turned the crank, time and death were annihilated, and from the moldy catacombs of the distant ages were reproduced in flesh-and-blood characters women who had been notable in various walks of life.

As the Yankee inventor Miss Morrison was sufficiently vivacious, and her malapropos misquotations were very amusing. Miss Alice Holmes made a St. Cecilia altogether sweet and lovely. Her singing was heartily encored. Miss Augusta Holmes as Martha Washington was benevolent, motherly, kindly-hearted. Miss Mabel L. Potter was a most stately Cleopatra. As Pharaoh's Daughter Miss Luella B. French was continually asking "Where's Moses?" Mother Bickerdick, Miss Grace E. Lewis, was a fussy and funny busy-body. Miss Madge Sutphen entered earnestly into the spirit of the romantic part of Joan of Arc. The other roles were very capably filled as follows: Genius of the 19th Century, Miss Louise Lewis; Sarah, Miss Mary E. French; Cornelia, the irreproachable Roman matron, Miss Amy E. Green; Queen Elizabeth, Miss Lou A. Claweon; Hypatia, Miss Louise K. Green; Agnes of Bologne, Miss Ida Spicer; Pocahontas, Miss S. Lena Bass; Sappho, Miss Florence E. Clark; Priscilla, Miss Ernestine Smith. The dialogue was connected and entertaining. As a musical prelude Miss Mabel Maxson played very cleverly two selections from Schuman. At the close of their conversation, the assembled spirits of the past vanished again, after a stately minuet, singing

Vive la chrono—vive la chrono
Vive la chronothanatoletron!

The audience was large, and highly pleased with the entertainment. The theme of the evening was the sovereignty of woman. Man was relegated to secondary importance.

The entire entertainment was written and arranged by Wellesley college girls.

Arrested on a Woman's Complaint.

Harry Gordon, of 308 West Front street, was arrested Saturday evening by Andrew Vanderbeek, overseer of the poor, on complaint of a woman who claims to be his wife, and whose name is therefore given as Lizzie Gordon. She lives at Evona. She insists that he deserted her, and asks that he be compelled to support her and their child. Gordon is quoted as saying that she is married to some one else, and was surprised at the arrest. He was taken before mayor Gilbert in judge Codington's office, and his stepfather furnished $1,000 bail for his appearance for trial Tuesday afternoon at 4.

Uncle Billy's Son Now Wifeless.

Johnny Moore and his wife, who a few months ago were married in court as the sequel to a breach-of-promise suit, are hereafter to live apart. For some time their wedded life has been inharmonious, and yesterday both decided on separation. The wife wanted $2,000, but Johnny said he would give her only $1,200. To-day they compromised on $1,400. This sum John agrees to deposit to his wife's credit. Counselor John H. Jackson drew up the separation papers, and both husband and wife signed them. The wife keeps the child.

—There will be a regular meeting of the Crescent League, Wednesday evening.

The Bicycle Club Gave the Boys' Club a Grand Good Time.

The average attendance at the rooms of the Boys' club last week was 87 each evening—the largest being 165 and the smallest 54. Number of visitors, 9.

Friends who have either Puck, Judge or St. Nicholas, and would like to give them to the club, they would be gladly received at the rooms any morning after 10.

The boys were given a grand time Saturday evening at the bicycle club rooms by the members of the gymnasium class under the instructor, Mr. Burnham. About 165 club boys were present and all behaved remarkably well indeed. Later in the evening the boys were served with refreshments.

There will be an entertainment next Monday evening at the rooms. All should be sure and come as there will be a magic lantern exhibition.

The total membership of the club is now 467.

Wednesday Evening.

George H. Primrose and William H. West are the monarchs in burnt cork performances, and their reputation is world-wide. Their appearance in this city, Wednesday evening, will be welcomed by the theater-going people and they will undoubtedly be received by an enthusiastic audience at each performance.

The programme is made up of new and interesting novelties, and the music and jokes are of the latest pattern. The performance from the conventional first part to the negro sketch at the last is of the best ever seen on the stage, and will attract a great deal of attention the coming season. The company is made up of artists in their various parts, and a first-class exhibition of minstrelsy will be given.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

Interesting Jottings from Dunellen, by Our Own Correspondent.

The Democratic party will hold a caucus meeting this week at Maier's Hotel, when nominations for the coming election will be made.

Isaac Giddis has sold his horse to Geo. Oriemann.

John Taylor has been at home for a week with the grip.

The New Market and Dunellen Vocal society has gone under. The young people have so many societies and clubs in town this winter that there is no room for anything new. Nightingales will no doubt be scarce in the spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Morrison have rented the W. R. Conover house, where they intend to make their home after April 1.

Nearly everyone is sick with the grip or a severe cold in Dunellen.

Mrs. James Lowrie will sell the most of her furniture to-day, and will leave town to-morrow to make her future home with her daughter, Mrs. Goodwin.

A union service was held in the First Presbyterian church last evening. Miss Todd, a member of the Young Women's Christian association, addressed the meeting. Miss Todd expects to go to Europe soon in behalf of her society.

A grand entertainment under the auspices of the Jr. O. U. A. M. is to be given next week.

A memorial service to the late Miss Corinne Livermore will be preached at the Seventh Day Baptist church at New Market next Saturday morning at 10:30. The Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis of Plainfield will officiate.

To-morrow evening the first of a series of three lectures will be given at the Dunellen M. E. church. The subject is "How to Make Both Ends Meet". The Rev. E. V. King, who is to deliver this lecture, is a very able speaker.

A Reception at Mrs. Desendorf's.

Mrs. Herbert Desendorf, nee Viles, of 12 Sandford avenue, held a cosy luncheon, Saturday afternoon, from 2 to 8, followed by a reception in the evening. Mrs. Desendorf, attired in a magnificent Worth costume, was assisted in receiving by her sister, Mrs. Jack W. Haulenbeck, who wore a beautiful gown of pale-blue brocade; Mrs. A. H. Viles of New York mother of Mrs. Desendorf, attired in pink brocade, trimmed with black lace and jet; Miss Desendorf, attired in white faille francaise, trimmed with beaver; and Mrs. Moran in lavender crepe. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Page, Mrs. Mulford, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Mulford, Mr. and Mrs. Gavett, Mr. and Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Rankin, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. Stockton, Lieut. A. E. Dick, Messrs. Fisher, Gray, Desendorf, Haulenbeck, Miss Haulenbeck, Miss Reeves, Messrs. Louis Connolly, Geo. Howland, De Witt, Hyde, Smith, Rodman, Miss Barr, Mrs. Thos. Kerr, Mrs. Crowle, Mrs. Nevils, Mrs. Bostwick, Mrs. De Wolf, Mrs. Faversham, Mrs. Oscar Mussiman, Wm. Deforrest Bostwick, Miss Sahleim, Mrs. Frances Knapp, Miss Delam, Mr. L. Baird, Mrs. Russel, Miss Haviland, Miss Goble, Miss Halley and many others from New York. Excellent music was given by Andrew G. Carpenter of this city.

They Work Wonders.

For over 6 years I have suffered with Dyspepsia; could not eat meat without distress and sickness of the stomach afterwards. Have used Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills for 2 weeks, and now eat all kinds of food without return of old trouble. They certainly work wonders in curing Dyspepsia and Stomach Troubles. T. J. FOINDEXTER, Atlantic City, N. J.

Notes of General Interest From the Rev. Mr. Mitchell's Visitor.

Edwin Loomis leads the singing in the Park Place Sunday-school.

The people gave well at the dedication. After all that had been given before, $2,000 was a goodly sum.

Mrs. Mary Leland, 93 Grandview avenue, has been quite ill for several weeks, causing her family much alarm. She is now improving.

Mrs. Ellen VanArsdale, 9 Lee place, is recovering from an illness which all feared would prove fatal.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira F. Riker have been sorely bereft in the loss of their infant son, a beautiful child, whom to see was to love.

James H. Hallock becomes secretary of the Sunday-school. He takes the place left vacant by John Valiant, who goes to the superintendency of the Park Place Sunday-school.

There is a steady, healthy growth in the Monroe Avenue Sunday-school. The teachers are doing faithful work. Superintendent Walter McGee could not possibly be more devoted and successful.

Bishop Vincent lectures in the Casino the evening of March 31. Subject: "A Talk about To-morrow." He preaches in our pulpit the following Sunday, the pastor being absent at Conference and preaching that day in the First Presbyterian church in Morristown.

R. E. Sellers is no longer a young man; but his regular attendance at prayer-meeting, and at the Sunday evening as well as morning service, should shame many of our younger men who are less regular and devoted.

Mr. and Mrs. Anson Sperry of 65 Grandview avenue, were members of the first church of which Bishop Ninde was pastor. During the Bishop's visit here he took tea with his old friends, and the friendly ties of many years were strengthened.

The two new chapels, which have been so recently built by our church, with the ground on which they stand, cost between nineteen and twenty thousand dollars. We will have placed on the two chapels only $5,000 of mortgage. What church in the Conference can point to a better record during the same length of time?

A large circle of friends deeply sympathizes with Mrs. Haff and her children in their loss of a loving husband and a faithful father. James McGee, an intimate friend of the family, had charge of the funeral services, and he spoke most appropriately of the dead and very tenderly and sympathetically to the living.

Our people deeply appreciate the excellent and faithful service so constantly rendered by our two local ministers, James McGee and Dr. Carroll. They are busy men, none in our church more so, yet they give much of their time to church work; the former devoting himself chiefly to the work at Monroe avenue and the latter to the work at Park place.

The new Park place Sunday-school was organized Sunday afternoon, Feb. 21. Ninety-five were present, a good number for a rainy day. Twenty were in the primary department, and many more were enrolled last Sunday. John Valiant is superintendent and treasurer, A. A. Taft is assistant superintendent, and W. H. Griffin is secretary. Miss Belle Lunger has charge of the primary department. Miss Alice Carroll, Mrs. Wilfred Powell, Mrs. John Carney, Mrs. L. A. Hummer, Miss Anna Smalley, and L. A. Hummer, are teachers in the junior department. Edwin Loomis, T. R. Crosley, and Wilfred Powell are teachers in the senior department. More teachers will be added as the number of schoiars increases.

Preaching Against Race-Track Gambling.

The pastors of most of the Plainfield churches yesterday preached stirring sermons against the race-track evil. They said they had been given to understand by Mr. Lindabury, acting president of the State Citizens' League, that there was a chance of the proposed race-track bills being made laws by the Legislature, thus securing the legalizing of gambling. The Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, said it would be a crying shame if the bills passed, and held that when legislators openly defied the wish of the people it was time for a revolution. The various clergymen strongly urged their influential parishioners to do all in their power to influence the legislators from their districts against the passage of the bills.

Beginning of Spring.

The sun enters the sign Aries the 19th of March, at 10 p. m. The vernal equinox then takes place, the astronomical spring begins, and the days and nights are equal all over the globe.

This last assertion must, however, be taken with qualifications. Such would be the case if it were not for refraction, which lengthens the day from four to eight minutes, at the expense of the night. When the sun's disk is really below the horizon, to us it has the appearance of having risen, sunrise being thus accelerated from two to four minutes. The reverse takes place at sunset, the sun being visible for a few minutes after his disk is below the horizon. Refraction, therefore, adds a few minutes of precious sunlight to the short winter days.

THE children's health must not be neglected. Cold in the head causes catarrh. Ely's Cream Balm cures at once. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into the nostrils. The worst cases yielding to it. Price 50c.

ONE of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and, much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm, and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

THE BEST IN NEW YORK.

A Quartette of Worthy Attractions for Appreciative Plainfielders.

"Jane" had been booked for February 2 at Music Hall, this city, but its success was so great in the big metropolis that "Alabama" was substituted here and the appearance of "Jane" postponed. But it is yet within reach of THE PRESS readers for a week longer at the Standard, New York. Don't fail to see it. The impression which "Jane" seems to have made upon the more fashionable class of theater-goers is noteworthy. It has not only been so in New York, but in other cities. The Philadelphians were so well pleased with the comedy during its four weeks' run in the Quaker city, that the company will return there at the close of the Standard theater engagement for another three weeks' engagement.

Miss Ffolliott Paget, who was to have appeared in Daly's "Last Word" at Music Hall, has left that company and has accepted the part of Bridget O'Mara in "The English Rose", the next production at Proctor's theater, New York. Miss Paget seems to have a strong liking for dialect characters. Her Aunt Jack was a typical English woman, her Baroness Vera in "The Last Word" was essentially Russian and her Bridget O'Mara will have a strong touch of the true brogue. Ffolliott's name sounds Welsh, and the mastering of that language implies the faculty of speaking anything pronounceable.

A number of Plainfielders were noticeable at the Madison Square theater, Friday evening. Hoyt's "A Trip to Chinatown" is very popular with the theater-goers of this city, and each matinee is favored with a party of Plainfield belles and their chaperone. To-night Miss Lois Fuller, who has left the Casino, will appear in her own personal skirt dance.

"Uncle Celestin" enters upon its third week at the Casino to-night, with all reasonable doubt as to its future peremptorily settled not only in Rudolph Aronson's mind, but in the minds of those who augured against its success because it is not a comic opera. Several large theater parties from this city have been organized for the Lenten season. One of the brightest musical gems in "Uncle Celestin" is the Normandy duo in the second act. The quaint costumes, caps and sabots worn by Annie Meyers and Sylvia Gerrish while singing this number, and the simplicity of the music makes it very effective.

None Knew Her, But to Love Her.

Funeral services were held at Bound Brook yesterday over the remains of Adelia L. Merlett, daughter of conductor John Merlett of the Jersey Central railroad. "Dedie", as she was affectionately called, was born at the residence of her grandfather, A. J. Linbarger, in Middlebrook, July 30, 1876, and would have been 16 years of age this coming summer. She was taken sick with the measles a week ago Thursday, and the disease going to her brain on Sunday made rapid inroads on her wonderful constitution, and she succumbed last Friday night at 8:40, surrounded by her loving relatives. The bereaved parents are well nigh heartbroken, but heroically resign themselves to the Giver of all good, who in his all-wise mercy has taken Dedie home. She was a member of the M. E. Sunday-school and of the Epworth league, a picture of perfect health and noble character, and one of whom it has been truly said

"None knew her but to love her,
None named her but to praise."

She was a girl of truly lovable character, and had many warm friends in Plainfield.

He Has Great Administrative Ability.

He graduated as a civil engineer in 1876 from the University of Pennsylvania, and was engaged for several years in difficult submarine work near this city, from which he went to his present office with the company whose affairs he has administered with ability for ten years. Laid Up by a Board Walk.

Francis Vandervoort is laid up with injuries inflicted by a board walk. The walk is a new one being laid at Fifth street and Arlington avenue. It was left unfinished and has been in bad condition for some time. Last evening Mr. Vandervoort, who was unacquainted with its condition, fell over the loose planks, ruined his Sunday trousers, sprained his ankle, and injured his knee.

A Great Convention.

The Y. P. S. C. E., of the Congregational church celebrated its sixth anniversary last evening. Many representatives from sister societies were present. After a short review of the history of the society had been read, James A. Cruikshank of Brooklyn, addressed the young people in a fluent and eloquent manner. He referred briefly to the origin of the movement, spoke more at length upon the present magnitude of it, and then referred enthusiastically to the great convention to be held in New York next July. Mr. Cruikshank is on the committee of arrangements for the convention, and stated that the information already in hand justified the expectation that there would be 25,000 delegates present. The Madison Square Garden has already been secured for that week, all the rooms in some of the largest hotels have been engaged—1,000 delegates from Illinois alone will occupy the Park Avenue Hotel. He said it would be the largest and grandest religious convention ever held in the history of the world.

THE CAPRI GIRL.

How Capri Women Are So Healthy.

The women of Capri are the healthiest in the world. The secret of their wonderful vigor is work, plain diet and constant life in the open air. "Nerves" are unknown.

Women of of our own country have injured their nerves by wrong diet and a shut-up, indoor life. Thousands feel just ready to drop from nervous weakness. It is what makes so many nervous, tired, languid, without energy or ambition. They have headache, stomach trouble, kidney and liver complaints, disordered bowels, headache, palpitation, poor blood, etc., which are caused by weakened nerves and nervous prostration.

The Grip also, has left as an after-effect, more weakened and shattered nerves and more physical debility and prostration than any other known epidemic.

These difficulties are always increased and greatly aggravated in Spring, by that Spring Debility which so weakens and enervates us all. But all these troubles are curable by the great tonic and restorative for women, Dr. Greene's Nervura. A perfect condition of nerve vigor and strength always follows its use, and thus women can secure as strong nerves and vigorous health as those of Capri. "No woman should fail to use Dr. Greene's Nervura in Spring" if she wishes to keep strong and healthy. Purely vegetable and harmless. Druggists, $1.

"I was suffering from nervousness, caused by female weakness and nervous prostration. I was so nervous and weak I could not go up a common pair of stairs without stopping to rest, and troubled to sleep at night. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura, and have obtained my old elastic step round the house, to the surprise of my friends. After creeping round for two years, hardly able to do anything, it has proved a boon to me truly.

MRS. OLIVER WILSON, Northboro, Mass."

N. B. ☞ Dr. Greene, the successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic diseases, 35 W. 14th St., New York, can be consulted, free, personally, or by letter. Call or write him about the case, or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter fully explaining the disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free. 2 2 td tths

AN ORDINANCE

"I AM NOT WELL ENOUGH TO WORK."

This is a daily event in mills, shops, factories, etc. It is the point where Nature can endure no more, and demands a rest. Then the poor sufferer, worn with toil, and broken in health, stands aside to make room for another. "Quick consumption" they called it.

To this class of women and girls we proffer both sympathy and aid. When those distressing weaknesses and derangements assail you, remember that there is a Remedy for all of them. We have on record thousands of such cases, that have been restored to vigorous health and lives of usefulness.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Is the only Positive Cure and Legitimate Remedy for the peculiar weaknesses and ailments of women.

It cures the worst forms of Female Complaints, that Bearing-down Feeling, Weak Back, Falling and Displacement of the Womb, Inflammation, Ovarian Troubles, and all Organic Diseases of the Uterus or Womb, and is invaluable to the Change of Life. Dissolves and expels Tumors from the Uterus at an early stage, and checks any tendency to Cancerous Humor. Subdues Faintness, Excitability, Nervous Prostration, Exhaustion, and strengthens and tones the Stomach. Cures Headache, General Debility, Indigestion, and invigorates the whole system. For the cure of Kidney Complaints of either sex, the compound has no rival.

All Druggists sell it as a standard article, or sent by mail, in form of Pills or Lozenges, on receipt of $1.00. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MED. CO., LYNN, MASS.

An illustrated book, entitled "Guide to Health and Etiquette," by Lydia E. Pinkham, is of great value to ladies. We will present a copy to anyone addressing us with two 2-cent stamps.

Does Marriage End All?

He (after the ceremony concluding a difficult engagement)—All's well that ends well, darling.

She (spontaneously)—It's only beginning.—Detroit Free Press.

Bred to It.

Yotting Cappe—Smithson is a good sailor. He must be used to brine.

Mayne Top—He ought to be. His father runs a pickle factory.—Kate Field's Washington.

She Wasn't to Blame.

De Jinks—That fortune teller couldn't tell me anything.

Merritt—How could she? You never had a fortune.—Demorest's Magazine.

No Other Place for It.

Sunday-School Teacher—Now, children, what do you suppose became of the Red sea when it rolled back for the hosts?

Johnny Parker—I know. It went in the storage reservoirs.—Judge.

A Valuable Hint.

Boss—What can I do for you?

Applicant—I can do the same work your present bookkeeper does for twenty dollars a month cheaper.

"Thank you."

"Are you going to let me have his place?"

"Well, no; but I'll knock twenty dollars a month off his wages, thanks to your suggestion."—Texas Siftings.

Alarming State of Affairs.

Chum—That rich uncle of yours hangs on pretty well, doesn't he?

Spendall—Indeed he does, and here I am head over heels in debt.

"What doctor does he have?"

"None. He won't have a doctor."

Beating His Washerwoman.

Sunday he wears the merest tie,
Displaying broad expanse of shirt,
Whose polished surface to the eye
Shows not the slightest speck of dirt.
When Tuesday comes then he puts on Another tie that's not so small,
And ere at length the week is gone
A big, soiled-shirt tie covers all.
—Chicago Tribune.
